According to a Nov. 17 report by the official statistics agency (Instituto Nacional de Estadística, Geografía e Informática, INEGI), six countries accounted for about 80% of Mexico's foreign trade in January-June 1992. INEGI said exports to the US, Japan, Germany, France, Spain and Canada during the six-month period totaled US$11.25 billion, while imports with these countries reached US$19.48 billion. Mexico had a trade deficit with all these countries except Spain. Mexican exports to the US in January-June totaled US$9.53 billion, an increase of US$167.8 million from the same 1991 period. Almost 70% of Mexico's total exports during the period went to the US. Imports from the US were valued at about US$14.9 billion. (Source: La Jornada, 11/18/92).
