According to Guanajuato state's deputy economic development director, Armando Servin, General Motors plans to set up 28 new auto parts factories in Guanajuato during 1993, starting with an initial investment of two billion nuevo pesos (US$645 million). The plants will eventually form a major supply center for the company's automobile and truck assembly plants in Mexico. Servin says Guanajuato state will promote the development of industrial parks around the newly constructed General Motors plants, which will be located near the cities of Leon, Irapuato, Salamanca, Celaya and Silao. The GM plants are expected to create about 7,000 direct jobs and another 25,000 indirect jobs. (Source: Notimex, 03/18/93)
