SUFFICIENT STRENGTH THREE POWERS REACH WILL ASSURE US AN AGREEMENT FOR OF PEACE CONFERENCE

Captain Hobson Speaks to Britain, France and Germany
Peace Congress and Advocates Larger Army and Navy.

WE OWE DUTY TO THE WORLD TO GIVE AUSTRIA ITS TWO PROVINCES

Government Should Not Only Be In Position to Protect Itself but to Assure Weaker Nations of Peaceful Lives.
He Says.

Greenboro, N. C., Oct. 15.—In a speech before the North Carolina peace congress here today Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson advocated larger navies for both the Atlantic and Pacific and sufficient strength in both army and navy of the United States not only to assure the preservation of peace for this country but also to assure weaker nations that this government would not see them imposed upon.

Reminding his hearers that he had the privilege of placing in President Roosevelt's hands the published report of the last meeting of the North Carolina Peace society, Captain Hobson declared that he was entirely in accord with the president when on that occasion he said that "peace societies merely jeopardize the national welfare, and are profoundly hostile to American national life, if they obstruct the government in providing ample military and naval power to meet conditions in the actual world of today."

The president, he said, previously had elaborated his views in these words:

"I am glad to learn that the North Carolina Peace society has declared itself in favor of adequate armament as well as effective arbitration. There is no inconsistency in advocating both of these things at the present time; on the contrary, those who have the public welfare at heart fail in the performance of a part of their duty if they neglect to labor for both. Effective arbitration should be desired by every far-sighted citizen; while under present conditions, not to provide adequate armament would be inexcusable on the part of those charged with the responsibility of preserving the rights of the people."

Plunging then into the subject of his address, Captain Hobson said: "In ascertaining the relation of armament and arbitration to states rights, it is necessary to go back to the constitution. The preamble of the constitution sets forth that one of the prime objects for which the instrument was ordained was to 'provide for the common defense' and again, Section 4 of Article IV provides that the United States shall protect every state in the union against invasion. The federal government therefore is in duty bound to maintain such an armed force as will secure to each state the proper protection and an armed force equal to the duty imposed must be unquestionably superior when engaged in our possessions, or in the waters adjacent thereto."

"This means supremacy for defense, not for aggression. It does not necessitate having more ships or armed men than a nation or nations that are possible antagonists. It means having more power than such nations have, capable of being applied against them, when invading or approaching our territory or possessions."

"The situation of some nations is such that they cannot use against us their entire armed force, owing to other dangers this would expose them to. Due allowance being made for this and other elements affecting the question of superior power in our possessions and in the waters adjacent thereto, the United States government is under a clear duty to each state of the union to make such provision without any further delay, I mean, to have power in the Pacific superior to the power of any Asiatic nation, and in the Atlantic superior to the power of any European nation."

Captain Hobson went on to say: "Until nations are ready to institute a system where ideas can be made to triumph by reason of the truth that is in them, this nation is in duty bound to place behind the just proposals it has made and will continue to make the force of an armament proportionate to the justice of our intentions and the interest of our citizens in the ever increasing complexity of foreign affairs. Thus we can and will effectuate our just wishes, even as Washington backed up the declaration of independence with the force sufficient to make it good in opposition to the force marshalled against it."

"This general duty is made doubly imperative as respects affairs in Asia and the Pacific, by our possession of the Philippines, and by our position as a world power."

"Austrian ships there. Austria, Montenegro, Oct. 15.—Six Austrian warships were anchored today off Spina in Dalmatia. They are not more than ten miles from Ancona, the sole port of Montenegro."

Britain, France and Germany Prepare Program of Events to Be Settled.

Independence of Bulgaria and Austria's Right to Annex Territory
Will Be Recognized—Crete's Action Is Sustained.

London, Oct. 15.—Great Britain, Russia and France have reached an agreement on the program to be submitted to other powers as a basis for discussion by the proposed European conference to settle the Balkan question. The proposals are eight in number.

The first article recognizes the independence of Bulgaria and determines the financial obligations of Bulgaria to Turkey. The second and third proposals are that the powers shall note the annexation by Austria-Hungary of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the return of Sanjak of Novi-pazar to Turkey. The fourth article recognizes the annexation of Crete to Greece and determines the financial obligations of Greece in respect to Crete towards Turkey. The fifth proposal is in regard to Armenia. The sixth deals with Montenegro. The seventh point in the program refers to the compensation to Serbia and Montenegro. The eighth concerns the River Danube.

All the men of the home fleet who are absent from their ships on liberty have been suddenly recalled. In so much as the reason for this has not yet been ascertained the order has caused much excitement.

Foreigners Angry.
Sofia, Oct. 15.—A disagreeable impression has been created in diplomatic circles here by a circular note issued today from the Bulgarian ministry of justice, which orders that in future all foreigners shall be treated on the same basis as the natives. In other words they are no longer to enjoy the intermediary of their consulates.

The circular sets forth that the declaration of independence annulled the so-called capitulations, which exempted a foreigner from the jurisdiction of the local courts. A diplomatic representative of one of the great powers today described this circular as "high handed," an action which the powers will vigorously oppose. The tendency of Bulgaria to extricate herself from the treaty obligations in ways that are more popular, he added, will lead the powers to insist upon the retention of the capitulation for a definite period as one of the conditions for the recognition of Bulgarian independence.

WAIT WITH RIFLES FOR MAN ON TRIAL

Friends of Man He Was Accused of Murdering Outwitted by Officers.

Portland, Oct. 15.—Fearing assassins would shoot him down for the killing of John McCallum at Cathlamet, Wash., Michael Campbell, who was acquitted at midnight for the murder, was spirited out of the court room and whisked away to a place of safety almost under the very noses of McCallum's friends, who were lying in wait for their victim with loaded rifles.

Before the opening of the trial of Campbell friends of his victim boasted that if he were acquitted of the murder charge they would take summary vengeance.

During the trial, feeling was bitter and the McCallum faction went about Cathlamet armed and ready to carry out their threats. The court took steps to protect the prisoner, and at the conclusion of the case ordered the spectators to remain in their seats. After the jury had retired the sheriff was instructed to take the prisoner back to jail, but by prearrangement he was escorted to the rear of the court house, through a hole that had been cut in the fence, and down to the Columbia river bank, where a launch was in waiting.

The launch took the prisoner to Kalama, whence he was brought to Portland on the Northern Pacific train.

The murder was the result of bad blood between Campbell and McCallum and was committed at Cathlamet last May.

AUSTRIAN SHIPS THERE.
Cettigne, Montenegro, Oct. 15.—Six Austrian warships were anchored today off Spina in Dalmatia. They are not more than ten miles from Ancona, the sole port of Montenegro.

BALANCE ON HAND
HARDLY SUFFICIENT

New York, Oct. 15.—The Democratic national committee, through its treasurer, Herman Ridder, this morning gave out an extended statement of the contribution to the Democratic national campaign fund up to and including October 2, showing the sums of $100 and over, as follows:

The statement says that 242 subscribers gave $100 or more and that smaller sums ranged from 75 cents up.
The number of contributors to the national committee fund is named at about 50,000.
The largest individual contribution reported was $5,000 from Charles J. Hughes of Colorado. Bryan was the second largest individual contributor, $4,046 from the profits of the Common-wealth. Georgia is represented on the list by a single contribution, Governor Hoke Smith, for $200. The name of Haskell does not appear in the long list from Oklahoma.

BATTLESHIP FLEET OFF JAPANESE COAST

American Ships Reach Flowery Kingdom, Where Entertainment Has Been Provided.

Tokio, Oct. 15.—The American battleship fleet under command of Admiral Sperry, which left Manila for Yokohama October 10, has been sighted maneuvering southeast of Kishu, the southernmost of the three principal islands of Japan.

At 8 o'clock this morning it was reported that the gunboat Yankton, preceding the American battleship fleet here, has been sighted by Japanese warships off the coast. All preparations for the reception and entertainment of the fleet have been concluded.

VOLCANO THROWS
CLOUD OF ASHES
Basistire, Island of Guadalupe, Oct. 15.—A rain of ashes from volcanoes on Martinique or St. Vincent is falling over Guadalupe.

CHINESE SOLDIERS KILL JAPANESE GUARDS IN KOREA

Trouble May Result From Attack on Troops and Refusal to Permit of Pursuit.

THE FIGHT LASTED
FOR SEVERAL HOURS

Seoul, Oct. 15.—Serious complications affecting the peace of China and Japan threaten the result of the engagement between Chinese and Japanese troops in Kantao, in northern Korea, in which a number were killed and wounded. The refusal of the Chinese war office to permit pursuit of the detachment of soldiers who are said to have been the aggressors, may result in the crossing of the frontier by Japanese troops.

Chinese soldiers are reported to have opened hostilities by firing upon the police station occupied by the Japanese troops, who have been sent to guard Korean residents at Kantao. The fighting that followed lasted several hours. The Japanese foreign office has made representations to the Pekin government and the situation is beginning to assume a serious aspect.

The murderer is at large.

TEXICO HAS BANQUET FOR THE DELEGATE AND PARTY

Trip Made in Automobiles
From Clovis Where Enthusiastic Reception
Is Given.

HALL WAS PACKED BY MANY VOTERS

Stirring Talks Made by Members of the Party and Local Leaders.
Who See Evidence of a Big Republican Majority.

Texico, N. M., Oct. 15.—Delegate Andrews and party arrived at noon in automobiles from Clovis. Upon their arrival they were tendered a banquet by Dr. A. L. Breeding of the Texico National bank and other leading citizens. Ex-Governor Otero offered a toast to Texico and its people, and Captain Kindred toasted Delegate Andrews. This toast was drunk standing and with great enthusiasm. The banquet was a sumptuous one and was greatly enjoyed.

After the banquet all adjourned to Taffner hall, which was packed to its doors with people awaiting the arrival of the delegate and his party. Captain Kindred, a prominent official of the First National bank, introduced the speakers, ex-Governor Otero, Delegate Andrews, Ralph Ely and Harry Sims. All made stirring talks. Local Republicans are jubilant and claim that this meeting insures a big majority for the ticket.

VERDICT FOR NEHER RETURNED BY JURY

Die Will Case Is In Progress Today in District Court.

The jury in the Neher case found a verdict for the defendant, after deliberating from 4 until 6 o'clock, when a sealed verdict was made. This was opened this morning at 9:30 o'clock. Farley will have to pay the costs of the prosecution and Neher the costs of the defense. The result, however, was not a surprise. The case was one of two years' standing, and based on the testimony of the plaintiff almost exclusively.

The Die will case was called this morning and was in progress this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The witnesses examined at that time were the witnesses to the will of the deceased woman, which was made in 1903. Considerable property is involved in the suit. N. B. Field appears as attorney for the parties who desire the will set aside and G. S. Klock and the law firm of Marron and Wood represents Die.

The grand jury is still in session, and returned two indictments this morning against Romeo Urbano and Donaciano Tafuya, charging each with shooting at the other with intent to kill. Both men were indicted as a result of the same altercation.

DELIRIUM TREMENS INCREASES.
According to a local physician three cases of delirium tremens have been reported within the past three days, and all three cases were accompanied by full and complete "trimmings." It is supposed that the cases resulted from the strenuous days of the Sixteenth National Irrigation congress, the International exposition and the Twenty-eighth Annual Territorial fair.

AUTO NUMBER 23 STARTS OUT BAD

Breaks Plate Glass Window While Making Its Debut in Motor Circles.

Look out for auto No. 23.
Dr. D. H. Carna is the proud possessor of a new car and from it dangles a small plate with No. 23 conspicuously fastened thereon. The doctor spoke for the number before his machine arrived and while he didn't expect the number to make any difference in the career of his new car, its first act bears out the reputation of the "Jonah."

On the first trip out the auto danced through a plate glass window in the garage where it is kept, smashing the window and the large glass wind shield on the machine. Since then it has behaved decently but has the appearance of knowing its number and a determination to live up to expectations. Yesterday the doctor chauffeur went out into the country and came back with a load of ducks but there is no evidence to show whether they died natural deaths or were run down in the new car.

SOCIETY CREATES A SCENE IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

Tries to Speak About Idle Workmen in Spite of Opposition by Other Members.

LABOR LEADER IS SERVED WITH WRIT

He Advised Unemployed to Take What They Needed From Baker-ies If They Did Not Have Money—Idle People Are Marching.

London, Oct. 15.—The question of unemployed laborers throughout the United Kingdom caused an unpleasant scene in the house of commons this afternoon and came near ending in a riot when Albert V. Grayson, socialist member, tried to raise a debate on the question of the unemployed and in the course of his remarks denounced other members of the house and defied the speaker.

Grayson arose and asked permission to take up the question of the unemployed but he was not recognized for that purpose and when he started an address on behalf of idle workmen in defiance of the speaker's ruling, he was ruled out of order. He did not stop, however, but continued his remarks and denounced the members of the house for not succoring the starving thousands on the streets of London. He defied the speaker's power to make him stop and in spite of the jeers and hisses from other members continued until the speaker ordered the sergeant-at-arms to remove him.

Grayson then withdrew his remarks and said, amid the jeers of his colleagues: "I leave this house with great pleasure." He then withdrew and the house resumed its routine.

Unemployed March.
One of the results of the demonstration by the unemployed in Great Britain was the issuing of a writ today against William James Thorne, a socialist Democrat member of parliament, for inciting a breach of peace by making a speech advising the unemployed to "rush" the bakery shops rather than starve. A body of unemployed is marching today from Nottingham to London. Serious riots were avoided in Sheffield yesterday only by the mayor announcing that $50,000 would be devoted to relief work. There have been demonstrations of the unemployed also at Sunderland and Maidstone.

EL PASOANS GET LOW FREIGHT RATE

Santa Fe Makes Change on Several Classes to Engle and Other Points.

El Paso, Oct. 15.—A considerable reduction in freight rates from El Paso to Engle, Cutter, Hoon and Selden has been announced by the Santa Fe on the second, third and fourth class shipments, to take effect within the next few days.

This is a result of the efforts which have been made by the Chamber of Commerce to get for El Paso an equal show with Albuquerque in the matter of rates to Engle and other points which are logically a El Paso territory, and it will be of great benefit to the jobbers of this city, and also to retailers who are after out of town trade.

In the classes embraced in the reduction are groceries, canned goods, tinware, woodenware, produce, fruit and other articles commonly designated as supplies, a large amount of which will, it is believed, be sold to the merchants and consumers at the points mentioned, and also at Engle, when operations on a large scale are in progress.

El Paso dealers are greatly pleased with the success of the efforts of the Chamber of Commerce in this matter, as the reductions, which will run from 2 to 5 per cent, and will probably average about 5 per cent, will enable them to compete with all others for the trade at the points mentioned.

HEREFORD BREEDERS WILL SPEND $50,000

Kansas City, Oct. 15.—Fifty thousand dollars were appropriated here today by the American Hereford Cattle Breeders' association to advance the interests of that particular breed of animal in the United States, and a board of three members was named to expend this sum in whatever manner they saw fit. The meeting closed with the election of officers. W. S. Cargill of Wisconsin was elected president. The date and place of the next meeting was left to the officers of the association.

STATEHOOD FOR NEW MEXICO

A Few Remarks

In the course of his many speeches in various parts of the country, Mr. Taft has uttered some striking sentences, which when grouped together, form a platform that clearly entitles him to the high office to which he aspires. Some of his most important sentences are:

"The Democratic party today, as organized, is nothing but organized incapacity."—At Montpelier, Vt.

"Bryan would have the initiative and referendum because he distrusts representative government, and has no confidence in the ability of the people to select conscientious representatives. He would take away from courts, because he distrusts the ability of judges to resist the malign influences of the power, the power to enforce their own orders."—At Columbus, Ohio.

"Anything that makes capital idle, or which reduces or destroys it, must reduce both wages and the opportunity to earn wages."—At Cooper Union, New York City.

"The only course of the administration has been directed against such organized capital as was violating the statutes of the United States—and no other. The business men of our community as a whole are honest and their methods are sound."—At Boston, Mass.

"The so-called colonial policy of the United States has added to our trade already something over one hundred millions a year."—At Cleveland, Ohio.

"The administration of exact justice by courts without fear or favor, unmoved by threats of the demagogue, is the highest ideal that a government of the people can strive for, and any means by which a savior, however unpopular or poor, is deprived of enjoying this, are to be condemned."—At Columbus, Ohio.

"I believe that a navy is the greatest insurer of peace that we could possibly have—a navy commensurate with our resources, and commensurate with our coast line, and commensurate with the number of dependencies we have, and commensurate with our population, and commensurate with our influence as a world power."—At Cleveland, Ohio.

"If we assume control over a people for the benefit of that people (as in the Philippines) and with the purpose of developing them to a self-governing capacity and with the intention of giving them the right to become independent when they shall show themselves fit the charge that we are imperialists is utterly without foundation."—At Cleveland, Ohio.

"The present business system of the country rests on the protective tariff, and any attempt to change it to a free trade basis will certainly lead to disaster."—At Columbus, Ohio.

"The Democratic party has no policy which the country can depend upon. It is a party of trade is that of irresponsible criticism and obstruction, and when charged with the responsibility of doing anything it utterly fails."—At Greensboro, N. C.

"Mr. Bryan asks me what I should do with the trusts. I answer that I should restrain all unlawful trusts with all the efficiency of inductive process and would punish with all the severity of criminal prosecution every attempt on the part of aggregated capital to suppress competition."—At Columbus, Ohio.

"The leader of the Republican party during the Civil war was Abraham Lincoln, and it has never lost the inspiration of his leadership."—At Kansas City, Mo.

"As a party shows itself homogeneous, able to grasp the truth with respect to new issues, able to discard unimportant differences of opinion, sensitive with respect to the successful maintenance of government, and highly charged with the responsibility of its obligation to the people at large, it establishes its claim to the confidence of the public, and to its continuance in political power."—At Kansas City, Mo.

"The course of the Republican party since its organization in 1856, and its real assumption of control in 1861, down to the present day, is remarkable for the foresight and ability of its leaders, for the discipline and solidarity of its members, for its efficiency and deep sense of responsibility for the preservation and successful maintenance of the government, and for the greatest resourcefulness in meeting the various trying and difficult issues which a history of now a half century has presented for solution."—At Kansas City, Mo.

Governor Cummins' Predictions

That Bryan has a place in the world of usefulness was pointed out by Governor Albert R. Cummins, of Iowa, while on his recent visit to New York. Said he: "As to Bryan? Our people like him, but they like him as a Chautauqua lecturer, not as president of the United States."

That is one reason why Governor Cummins predicts that Iowa will roll up a plurality for Taft at from 30,000 to 50,000. This shows that the much-vaunted strength of Bryan in the middle west is but a myth. Governor Cummins stated the case as far as Iowa is concerned in this way: "There is no weakening nor wavering on the part of the Republicans in the campaign. They may differ on local questions, but when it comes to deciding in whose hands the government shall be placed, they have no hesitancy in uniting to save the country from another four-year period of Democratic disaster."

This is said. Richard Harding Davis, the universal patriot and author, has had his dignity injured again. Three horses were stolen from his barn recently. Mr. Davis had lately been appointed a deputy sheriff for the county in New York state where he resides and the defiance of his sheriff's authority is what hurts him so. Cheer up, Dick! There's likely to be a war in Turkey where the services of war correspondents who can lead armies will be in great demand.

Roswell Register-Tribune: Everybody knew they would do it, in fact, they would have been shocked and surprised if it had turned out any other way so when the news came that the cadets of the New Mexico Military Institute had won the first prizes at Albuquerque during the National Irrigation congress, the people of Roswell were pleased but not at all surprised—they knew that the boys were the best drilled troops in the territory.

A New York man who was ill with the grippe, received a message telling him that he had inherited several million dollars. The doctors immediately rediagnosed his case and decided to operate on him for something with a long Latin name and a $1,000 fee attached. After all poverty is not the worst of evils.

There is a man in Albuquerque who read that Austrian troops had been withdrawn from the Turkish strip known as the Sanjak of Novi-Bazar and then asked where the Sanjak was located. The ignorance of some people is simply amazing.

Evidently Larrasolo found Bernalillo county a little short on enthusiasm for oratory but with plenty of dollars from appropriations from the last Congress.

Lord Roslyn, who tried to break the bank of Monte Carlo and failed, has just been married. Some men simply can't give up a game of chance.

It has always taken a thorough course of Republican treatment to remedy the effects of a single dose of Democratic cure-all.

That foreign nobleman who said there was no romance in this country ought to be given a copy of the Democratic handbill.

A woman can not be a success in politics. Aunt Hetty Green has not contributed to the campaign fund of any party.

It is a very bad form these days to refer to a candidate as an only gentleman.

DAILY SHORT STORIES

SOUVENIR OF SHATTERED HOPE

By B. B.

An exile from Moscow sat one afternoon on a bench in Prospect park, Brooklyn, gazing at the flower beds that stretched before him; and gazing at them memories of his far away home stole into his heart and resolved themselves into a song. It was a pathetic song and he sang it with a cadence that compelled the very trees to listen even Mozart on his pedestal seemed attentive.

And his song was no sooner ended, when before him appeared a girl with auburn hair and large hazel eyes. "Fardon the impertinence of a strange girl," she said, "but, the sounds of my native language, so sweetly intoned, have poured into my troubled heart the comfort in vain search of what I have been wandering here all day. I thank you for it; and, please, allow me to speak a few words with you." And before he had time to reply she began: "I was born in Kiev, six years ago I came to the United States. Carelessly I plunged myself into the whirlpool of American life, dreaming some day to shine in exclusive social circles. Russian young men by the dozen were sighing for my love; but I was determined to marry an American."

"Well, marry an American I did. But with the marriage terminated my happiness, did all the hopes of my youth. My husband mistreated me in every way and failed to provide for me. Then one night he gathered up all our jewelry, and left me. Alone. "A sob interrupted her. In the exile's heart swelled pity and sympathy, but before he had time to shape them into words, she resumed: "This," and she drew from her purse a beautiful watch fob, "this only remained to me. In the hurry of his flight he dropped it. Finding the crystal was broken as were broken the golden chains of hope and happiness. At first I cherished it as a souvenir of shattered hopes; but now the possession of it has become painful to me; relieve me of it as your song has relieved the heaviness that had been weighing all day on my heart."

Automatically he took the watch, and held it in his hand, perplexed and embarrassed. A tear was glistening on the broken crystal, then spread itself along the cracks. He wiped it away with his handkerchief, and said:

"But why should you give it away when you can sell it?"

"Sell it?" she sighed. "Ah, sir, little you know yet," and the tremor of her voice deepened. "If you refuse to take it otherwise, I will accept a trifling amount, just to give it the aspect of a sale."

"But," he said, "five dollars is all I have with me."

"All?" she cried, "why it's altogether too much, and I have no change. I thank you very much." She put the money into her purse and brushing the tears away from her eyes walked away with bowed head.

He looked after her until she disappeared among the trees, then he looked at the watch. "A souvenir of shattered hopes," the phrase sank into his heart and deepened the sadness that already pervaded him. He became restless; the stillness and serenity of the park irritated him, and he started toward the car that was approaching the entrance of the park.

All the way he held his hand to his pocket; pressing the watch in the palm of his hand, his fingers feeling the cracks of the broken crystal. Thoughts without number, and confusing, surged in his head, and changing emotions tortured his heart. By the time the car was rumbling over the Williamsburg bridge his thoughts had shaped themselves into a decision to have a new crystal put on the watch, and send it as a gift to his sweetheart in Russia.

He got off on Delancey street, and stepped into the first jewelry store he came across. As the jeweler was adjusting the new crystal he asked: "How much is a new watch and fob like these worth?"

"Now?" said the jeweler, with a touch of sympathy in his voice; "why, sir, this watch is new; so is the fob. Both were bought at this store this very morning, by a blonde young lady for a dollar and ninety-five cents."

PLANT COTTON IN HAWAIIAN ISLANDS

It Will Be Tried as Commercial Possibility by the Island Possessions.

Honolulu, Hawaii, Oct. 15.—Cotton as a commercial crop is to be given a trial in Hawaii. Although the plant has been known in the islands for many years, like everything else in agriculture here it has heretofore had to take a back seat to King Sugar, but the agitation for diversified production in the territory has resulted in considerable attention being given to it lately.

On the island of Kauai the firm of Gay & Robinson will this year plant something over 500 acres, and on this island (Oahu) it is understood that a number of small areas will be planted.

For a number of years the Hawaii agricultural experiment station has been conducting some experiments in cotton growing, with very encouraging results. The following statement has just been written by E. V. Wilson, director in charge of the station:

"Among the almost unlimited agricultural possibilities of Hawaii cotton may come to occupy an important place. At least two species of wild tree cotton grow well here, and in former times a considerable quantity of good quality Sea Island cotton was grown here and marketed on the mainland. The Hawaii experiment station has been growing two strains of Sea Island cotton, the Georgia and Florida types, and also the sea silk and kidney strains of the new Caravan cotton from Queensland. Mr. Kraus has found an enormous difference in the quality and yield of these different cottons and it is apparent that in order to make a big success with cotton careful attention must be given to the selection of the seed."

It has been found that the Georgia and Florida strains of Sea Island cotton will give the first picking in six months from the seed. Chinese cotton in six months and Caravan cotton in seven months. It is not yet certain whether Sea Island cotton will do best as an annual crop, or when allowed to continue longer in the soil. Caravan cotton is a two years old, and some of the trees are three inches in diameter. In Queensland the Caravan cotton has given seven successive crops from the same tree. If the tree becomes too unmanageably it may be pruned into better form with benefit to the uniformity of maturing. "Sea Island cotton brings from fifteen to eighty cents per pound, depending upon the quality and length of the staple. The price of Caravan cotton is about twenty-five cents per pound."

TRUANCY OFFICER
HAS GOOD SUCCESSHe Has Had a Number of Bad Boy Cases and is Accomplishing Good.

W. L. Hill, the truancy officer, is having some interesting experiences with Albuquerque bad boys and is having great success in handling some of the worst truancy cases coming to the notice of the board of education.
"It is rather strange," said Mr. Hill this morning, "that in nearly every case we have had, the boy has been a member of a good family, with a good home and good parents. We have had no case of importance from the poorer classes. It is the boys from the best families in this city that are most troublesome."
"I had one case, in which I will not mention any names, that was particularly troublesome. The boy was a big fellow. I had several talks with him and he had promised me that he would go to school. Cigarettes by the way, have been the cause of the most of his trouble. Yesterday morning I was coming down town and met him on the street. I told him that I would go to school with him. We went and after getting there, he turned and said: 'This is the last time you'll take me to school.' I said
'Yes, you are right. This will be the last time.' His parents said that they would back me up in a compulsory system, and if once we make an example, it will be of lasting benefit.
Well, the young man was at school in the afternoon and was there again this morning."

Mr. Hill was detailed by Chief of Police McMillin yesterday on a case where a boy had left home and under a misunderstanding with his parents believed that he could not return. Tuesday night a Mr. Hein, living at 1921 North Seventh street, found a boy 12 years old sleeping in a stack of alfalfa in his barn yard.
He questioned the youth, and he said that his father had told him to go away and stay. Mr. Hein gave the lad a place to sleep, and yesterday morning reported the matter to the police. Mr.
Hill took the boy to his parents on North Eighth street and learned the true circumstances. The boy had not been doing his chores and the father had told him if he could not do his work he could get out. The boy took his father at his word and left. That night the father spent half the night looking for his son.
Only one boy has been taken to the children's home since its establishment.

HORSES RECOVERED
BUT BOYS ESCAPEFather of Truant Returns From Search With Animals Ridden
by Youths.

The three youths who stole three horses Sunday night and went south on a trip of exploration, were captured Tuesday evening at Sabinal, forty miles south of this city, by J.
W. Harlow, father of one of them, but escaped in the night, leaving their horses behind.

Mr. Harlow returned to the city last evening, bringing with him the animals the boys rode away, and this morning returned them to their owners. The Harlow boy had taken his father's horse, John Sautell stole a horse and saddle belonging to Dexter, the North Fourth street grocer, and the Pisano boy had an animal, which had not been claimed this morning. The saddle on the horse was identified by W. M. Farr, but Mr. Farr said that the horse was not his. "It is a sorrel, weighing 1,200 pounds, in very poor condition."

Mr. Harlow said this morning that he had little trouble finding the direction the boys took when they left the city. They took the river road and kept close to the railroad track. He got trace of them from time to time from native people along the road.
They were traveling slowly and camping out, sleeping on their saddles like true road agents. Mr. Harlow came upon them about 7 o'clock in the evening, camped in a clump of trees near Sabinal. He had no difficulty in securing the horses and had them moved to a safe place for the night to prevent the boys from taking them and escaping. Believing that the best policy was to treat the boys punitively, he did not take the precaution to confine them or to stay with them.
He made a little talk and went to a native house at Sabinal to visit. When he returned to camp the boys had gone.

Mr. Harlow did not make much of a search for the boys Tuesday night and when they did not appear Wednesday morning he started home, arriving here last night after a hard ride.

the Philippines and the Hawaiian Islands. These are the keys of peace and justice in Asiatic affairs during the coming half century. These keys are in our hands, and the people of America and of all countries should and will hold this generation of Americans responsible for the proper use of the immense advantage their possession gives the United States in making an effective stand, through proper policies in the international councils, supported by adequate armament on land and sea, for the things that pertain to the peace and welfare of the people of all nations. So far as events in Asia and in the Pacific ocean are concerned.

Concluding, Captain Hobson said:
"The United States owes to each state of the union a solemn duty, imposed by the constitution, to maintain in our possessions, and in the waters adjacent thereto in both hemispheres, a power that is beyond question superior to any power that can be sent against us. This duty is plain on general considerations, without reference to any particular nation or nations. It becomes plainer still from due consideration of European and Asiatic conditions, and the attitude of certain nations to matters which vitally concern us."

Mrs. Lizzie George Henderson, formerly president-general of the confederacy, spoke under the title, "The Daughters of the Confederacy and Peace." She said she had addressed the heads of the association in all the states asking for expressions on the subject, and without exception they had declared in favor of "peace by arbitration." She quoted the president-general as having written to her:

PRINCESS DEBROGLIE IS LEFT DESTITUTE IN PARIS

Dispatch Tells Some Details of Trouble of Albuquerque Girl and Her Husband.

Princess De Broglie, formerly Estelle Alexander of Albuquerque, whose father yet resides here, is destitute in Paris, according to a dispatch from that city. It was announced recently that the prince would sue for divorce, leaving the American girl and the following Paris dispatch gives some of the details of the difficulty, which Albuquerqueans who knew the girl are interested:

Prince Robert de Broglie, who appeared recently with his wife on the stage of a London music hall, has left the princess and her young daughter. The prince was first married in 1901, at the age of 20, to the Baroness Deslandres. After their divorce the prince, in spite of the prohibition of his parents, married in Chicago Miss Estelle Dolores Alexander, a beautiful music hall singer.

The French courts, on the petition of Prince Robert's father, Prince Amédée, declared the Chicago marriage invalid, on July 19 last year. The prince thereupon remarried Miss Alexander according to French law only a few months ago.

The princess, who is living in an almost empty flat in the Rue Pergolone, and who is in considerable pecuniary embarrassment, was found in great distress. "Last July," she said, "we were heavily in debt. The prince provided no money for the subsistence of myself and my child. I was, therefore, obliged to accept an engagement to sing at Ostend and Spa, under my professional name of Marianne. The prince decided not to accompany me, but to go to Chamonix, and I supplied him with money for the purpose.

"On my return to Paris a month ago I telegraphed to him, but, to my astonishment, he replied abruptly that he did not intend to return to me. I wrote, but got no reply. I was utterly penniless, and reduced to pawning my rings. At last he sent $12 at the beginning of the month, and a week ago he came here without warning. He told me he had come to take away his things and would explain matters through his lawyer. Two days later the lawyer sent for me, and in his office I met my husband. I was informed that the prince intended to divorce me. I left the office amazed and with a heavy heart. For five years we had led an ideally happy life. I have had no quarrel with the prince, and his conduct toward me is inexplicable. I shall no longer call myself Princess de Broglie."

Princess Robert, who is staying in a private mansion at 124 Rue de la Faisanderie, belonging to Viscount Jean de Corday, has authorized the viscount to speak on his behalf. The viscount says the prince desires to live free and untrammelled for the future, in order to prepare himself in peace and quiet for the theatrical career he intends to follow.

BURY MRS. CHAMBERLIN AT HER OLD HOME IN MUNCIE

Tragic Death of Popular Matron Brings Sorrow to Many Albuquerque Homes.

The body of Mrs. L. H. Chamberlin, whose tragic death last evening, cast a shadow over the city, will be shipped to the old home at Muncie, Ind., for burial in the family cemetery. The body is being prepared for shipment by Funeral Director A. Borden, under the auspices of the Masonic order, and will be taken to the 6:20 train this evening, accompanied by an escort of Masons. Mrs. Heath, the grief-stricken mother, and the bereaved husband will accompany the body to Indiana. There will be no funeral services here.

A visit to the Chamberlin home, 1026 West Central avenue, this morning found the place deserted but for a few friends with tear-stained faces who had volunteered to do what they could in straightening up the wrecked home, what there was of it that was worth saving. The Chamberlin residence was one of the nicest homes on Honeyman row. Yesterday where all was sunshine and comfort and happiness today there is a deserted house, with charred walls, surrounded by an air of sadness.

The interior of the house was badly damaged. Beautiful bric-a-brac, lacquer and draperies hang from the walls in blackened shreds, charred and ruined. The furniture is almost a total loss and pictures on the walls are cracked and discolored by smoke. A half burned bouquet of carnations standing on the mantel above the grate, where started the fire that ended Mrs. Chamberlin's life, is a relic of the cheerful appearance of the Chamberlin home yesterday before the dreadful tragedy. The things that were damaged, however, were justly insured.

Just how the accident that resulted in Mrs. Chamberlin's death occurred will probably never be known. She recovered consciousness for a few moments at the hospital late in the evening and talked to her mother freely, but she did not explain the cause of the fire. Mrs. Heath was at the house but in another room when she heard her daughter scream. She rushed to her rescue and with great presence of mind secured a blanket and smothered the flames by wrapping the woman in it.

One theory is that there was a fire in the grate. Mrs. Chamberlin had been washing some ribbons or gloves in a rear room just previous to the accident. Finishing the work she took the gasoline she had in a pan and went into the front room in front of the grate to clean out a spot in a rug. There may have been a fire in the grate which ignited the evaporating gas. Another theory is that the fire started from friction while she was rubbing the spot in the rug.

When Mrs. Heath entered the room Mrs. Chamberlin was entirely enveloped in flames. Her light, fluffy clothing caught the flames and burned like tinder. The burns, however, were deep only in places where the gasoline struck her body. The doctors worked with her for hours but held out little hopes for her recovery. The shock was more than mortal life could survive and the end came at 10:45 o'clock after five hours of terrible agony. The mother and husband were present at the end. Mrs. Chamberlin passed away peacefully.

Mrs. Chamberlin had lived in Albuquerque a number of years and was one of the most gracious and charming women of the city's social set. She was noted for her hospitality and her home has been the scene of many gay and charming parties. Her friends were numbered by all who knew her. The news last night that she had been burned caused sorrow to every home in the city.

GOVERNMENT HAS HOMES FOR MANY

Plenty of Land Available but Much of It is Not Good for Agriculture.

Washington, Oct. 15.—Outside of Alaska the United States owns 286,873,787 acres of land, which is subject to entry under the lands laws and is sufficient to supply homesteads of 160 acres each to 2,417,961 citizens. Unfortunately, most of the land is marked either "arid," "mountainous" or "swampy," and comparatively little of it is considered desirable for farming unless under irrigation. In Alaska there are 283,021,509 acres.

These facts are set forth in a pamphlet just published by the general land office. Naturally, the large unsettled tracts are in the western states and territories, but there are still considerable areas in the eastern states awaiting settlement.

TAILORS COPY THE KING'S CLOTHES

Edward Sets Fashions for Britons and Is Always Followed by Designers.

London, Oct. 15.—King Edward, notwithstanding the fact that he is now approaching his seventieth year and has come to be regarded as one of the most astute diplomats and statesmen in the world, is still recognized as the first gentleman in Europe in matters of fashion, and in accordance with his reputation as the acknowledged leader of men's modes, all those male inhabitants of European countries who desire to be regarded as smart and up to date in regard to their personal attire, model their clothes as nearly as possible after those worn by England's monarch.

Generally speaking it is only possible to procure passing glimpses of the king of England, so that those business men whose duty it is to study the fashions and to design the articles of male attire are not able to pursue their studies to their satisfaction. The only opportunity during the year which they enjoy in this direction is offered by King Edward's annual summer holiday at Marlborough, and consequently the leading tailors of London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Rome, St. Petersburg, Budapest and the smaller European capitals go there to carry out a systematic observation of the king during the three weeks in which he drinks the health-giving waters of the springs and lives the simple life to cure himself of the results of rich and luxurious living in England.

When the king arrives toward the end of August a swarm of tailors and outfitters from all the capitals of Europe are waiting to pursue their studies of the way in which the first gentleman clothes and decorates his august body. Hatters, hosiers, shirt-makers, shoemakers, vendors of underwear, collar makers and cuff manufacturers, glove makers and jewelers are all there to carry out the necessary observations in their respective spheres of activity. During the king's visit to Marlborough they exploit to the full so excellent an opportunity of watching Edward's taste in all departments of clothing and outfitting.

Every morning before 7 o'clock the king appears in the public promenade to drink the waters from the springs, together with hundreds of visitors from all parts of the world assembled at Marlborough, and at this early hour he invariably wears a lounge sack suit, with other articles of clothing to match, but whatever the color of the suit may be he always wears a colored shirt and brown shoes. It is noticeable that the king has an especial liking for red in dressing himself, for on nine days out of ten he wears a red tie, and almost every day red stockings can be seen peeping forth between his turned-up trousers and low shoes.

The king takes with him to Marlborough more than 100 large trunks for a stay of three weeks, so that he has a liberal choice of clothes from which to choose every morning. He dons a different suit on each morning and he varies the color of the shirts and hats in the same way, the red socks being the only point in which he prefers sameness from day to day. If he appears in a gray suit one morning, he wears a brown suit next day, a blue suit on the third day, another shade of gray on the fourth, a different hue of brown on the fifth, green clothes on the sixth, and so on till he has exhausted the stock of suits which he has brought with him, and begins again at the beginning. The color of the soft felt hat always corresponds to the color of the suit, so that a gray hat accompanies a gray coat, and a green hat a green suit.

Many of the king's shirts are made with the collar affixed to them, and the collar is made of the same material and is the same color as the shirt itself. Sometimes the king wears a white collar on a colored shirt, but the cuffs are always of the same color as the material of the shirt. The king's handkerchief also corresponds to the color of the suit which he is wearing. If the weather be cold the king reveals the possession of an amazing variety of overcoats and ulsters of all colors, lengths and styles, and altogether his early morning promenades yield a world of observations in regard to the kind of clothing to be worn on unceremonious occasions.

If the king goes out to lunch or to afternoon tea, as is often the case during his Marlborough visit, he wears, by preference, gray frock coats or gray cutaway coats with tails, adorned by a gray top hat, a style of dressing which is sometimes varied by a blue frock coat or blue cutaway, also surmounted by a gray top hat. In the evening the king either goes to the local theater or attends a small and comparatively informal dinner party given by some English, French or Austrian aristocrat in his honor, and on these occasions he wears a dining jacket with a black tie. Once or twice during his summer vacation there may be a more formal dinner to attend and then the king always goes out in full evening dress and white tie. Every Sunday morning he religiously attends the little English church, and then he dons the traditional tall black silk hat, typical of the English Sunday. Together with a black frock coat, colored waistcoat and gray trousers.

The makers of European fashions have thus ample opportunities for study. Every morning on the promenade they can be seen, notebook in hand, jotting down particulars of their observations, or making sketches of this or that feature of King Edward's outfit. If he goes for a walk they shadow him, and if he takes a drive they are again on the lookout to spy out any other alterations in his costume which may be worthy of imitation. On Sundays their rush to obtain seats in the English church became such a nuisance, inasmuch as they occupied seats which ought to have been available for English worshippers, who were thus excluded, that the officiating clergyman was obliged to give orders to exclude them, and now they have to content themselves with watching the king as he alights from the carriage and walks through the little churchyard.

In the theater, however, they have a fine field for observation, and many of them engage seats for every performance which the king attends, paying extravagant prices to make sure of their places. In the theater the king sits in a conspicuous position in the front of a box on the first circle, immediately opposite the stage, and his vigilant shadowers are then able to get the exact lines of the evening dress or dining jacket. The king's dining jackets this year are rather long, with graceful inward lines at the waist and with a link button. The waistcoat is cut rather more narrowly than hitherto, so that the visible expanse of white shirt has a smaller area than former fashions. With full evening dress the king wears a white waistcoat, quite narrowly cut, so that the visible expanse of shirt front is shaped like a V.

When the observations are completed the swarm of tailors and outfitters of all classes rush back to their respective capitals to order garments in accordance with their Marlborough records.

RICH CEMENT MAN IS SUING FOR DIVORCE

Names Two Co-respondents, Both Wealthy, With Whom His Wife Fell In Love.

New York, Oct. 15.—Naming two rich and well known co-respondents, for both of whom his wife confessed her love, Albert Moyer, a rich cement manufacturer of South Orange, has begun a divorce suit and action to obtain the custody of his 4-year-old daughter.

One of the co-respondents is W. Rudolph Kip, an artist who is famous both here and in Paris. The other is Dr. William R. Jamison, son of a wealthy family in Mexico. The suits were begun in Newark.

Mrs. Moyer's affair with Jamison was the first, her husband alleges. She was Miss Flora Howard before she married the cement man, the ceremony taking place in this city in 1898. From then until 1904 they lived happily at 504 West One Hundred and Twelfth street. But that year, while Moyer was west on a business trip he received a letter from his wife announcing that William R. Jamison, a former fiancee, had arrived from Mexico to study medicine and that she had invited him to call upon her.

Moyer made no comment upon this until he returned, several months later. Then his wife's strange manner worried him and he questioned her about Jamison.

"I love him with all my heart and soul," she confessed. "But if you do not wish me to love him, I will try my best to forget him."

There had been dinners and visits and parties in which Jamison figured, the wife admitted, during the husband's absence.

Three weeks after this confession Moyer's wife came to him, he says in his affidavit, and told him she could not do without her former fiancee—she must have him. She displayed a letter she had just written to the young doctor, telling him she was going to join him in Mexico, where he had gone fearing Moyer's vengeance.

Moyer pleaded with his wife to remain with him and forget Jamison. She refused and left the house, but after staying a couple of weeks with a woman friend, returned and agreed to give up the medical man. In return for this sacrifice Moyer agreed to send her on a trip to Europe and she started off after bidding him a cordial farewell.

But on this trip she met W. Rudolph Kip, the artist, and when she returned—Kip crossing on the same steamer—she frankly admitted that Kip now reigned in her affections. There was a stormy scene following this confession. At the end of it Mrs. Moyer announced that she was going back to Paris with Kip, who was wealthy and a famous artist.

They sailed together from Boston, the husband alleges. He says his wife's brother, Van Straubenzie Howard, told him he had found them registered at a Boston hotel and saw them engage passage as man and wife.

While in Paris Mrs. Moyer wrote and begged her husband to let her be divorced. One of her letters read, in part:

"I do not feel that I owe you anything; I will live and be free in spite of you. You know the Howard nature—we love independence, and when that is taken away we don't give a ——— for anything else. I tell you quite frankly that I shall see the other party as often as I choose."

To her mother-in-law, who wrote begging her to come home, Mrs. Moyer replied:

"I am going into business as an artist's model. I see your hands go up in holy horror. Mr. Kip is going to paint me for the salon and I shall get as a regular model 10 francs or $2 a day. That will help greatly. If you are shocked at my going to his apartment to pose, kindly remember that this is the Latin quarter and one does as one pleases without comment. His automobile is at my disposal and he is so nice I can scarcely believe he is human. Mr. Kip is too rich to make work a necessity."

In another letter to her husband she wrote:

"The time has come for us to get together and sever the bond that holds only in legal form. I implore you as you love your daughter's good name to let me get a divorce or I shall take steps that are considered disgraceful."

Mrs. Moyer came home early this year, her husband alleges, and made her home in Orange with her little daughter, although she told him she was not worthy to look at the child. Moyer in his affidavit says he could scarcely restrain himself from killing both Jamison and Kip when he learned of his wife's alleged relations with them.

ALL WRONG.

The Mistake Is Made by Many Albuquerque Citizens.

Don't mistake the cause of backache.

To be cured you must know the cause.

It is wrong to imagine relief is cure. Backache is kidney ache.

You must cure the kidneys. An Albuquerque resident tells you how.

J. W. Weir, living at 719 Eleventh street, Albuquerque, N. M., says: "I had trouble with my back off and on for a long time. For two years I could not straighten after stooping without help. As long as I would remain in an erect position I experienced no difficulty of any kind, but the least strain or tension brought onto the muscles of the loins caused me to suffer severely. I tried different remedies, but no relief of any kind was obtained until about two years ago I chanced to learn of Doan's Kidney Pills. The result was a complete and permanent cure and Kidney Pills, procured a box and one which has lasted up to the present time. I feel more than justified in vouching for the value of Doan's Kidney Pills and on innumerable occasions I have strongly advised their use to those suffering with backache or kidney trouble."

PLACE YOUR ADS IN THE ALBUQUERQUE CITIZEN

Some Reasons Why

The C

Because The Citizen is a home paper. It is either delivered by carrier at the house or is carried home by the business man when his day's work is done and it STAYS THERE. A morning paper is usually carried down town by the head of the family and hurriedly read.

I

The Citizen is not read hurriedly, but thoroughly, so that all advertisements receive their share of attention. It presents the store news a little ahead, giving the prospective purchaser time to plan a shopping tour for the next morning.

T

Wise advertisers patronize The Citizen because they know their advertisements are seen and read at the homes in the evening, and if they are offering something worthy of attention, their ad has accomplished its mission.

I

The Citizen has never given premiums to subscribers, but is subscribed to and paid for on the news merits, showing that its subscribers have money with which to buy what they want from legitimate merchants. These are the people The Citizen invites to your store.

Z

The Citizen employs a man whose business it is to look after your advertising wants. He will write your copy if you wish. If not, he will see that your ads are "set up" to look their best and he will attend to them from day to day.

IS THE GREATEST SPORT IN THE WORLD

Baseball Gets a Big Boost From McGraw, Manager of the New York Nationals.

President's Mail is Filled With Suggestions for Improving Country Life.

Baseball is today the greatest sport in the world, says John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Nationals.

It is even more than a sport. In the United States professional baseball is a tremendous business proposition, involving the investment of millions of dollars, the expenditure annually of hundreds of thousands of dollars and the employment of thousands of men.

From a modest start but a comparatively few years ago baseball has become an actual factor in the business world and a most important element in the everyday life of millions of people.

Why should baseball, primarily a sport, intended to appeal to the lighter or sport loving side of a man, become so powerful an element of daily life that nearly one hundred thousand people should strive to see a single game and millions of people throughout the entire country await with breathless interest the outcome of that same game? It is because there is an indecipherable something in baseball that grips the very heart of man.

Every one, be he layman or preacher, in his youth played more or less at baseball. As years stiffened his muscles and hardened his joints he played less and less. But did his interest cease?

Not a bit of it. The sight of a keen, close, hardfought baseball contest brings back today the youth of the man who sits on the grandstand watching with intense every move of the younger men who are playing the game for him. In mind and spirit he is a boy again. He is no older than the younger men whom he sees rushing back and forth on the diamond in front of him.

Baseball is clean, it is wholesome, it is filled with moments of breathless excitement. At critical moments there is an intensity in both player and spectator. The player learns to steel himself to let that moment pass unnoticed, but the spectator can no more help greeting the success or failure of a play upon which the result of the game hinges with groans or shouts than he can help the regular beating of his heart. It is that compelling intensity that has such a grip on the American people.

There is an uncertainty about baseball that furnishes the flavor of chance so essential if it is to appeal permanently to an American. The best player in the world may drop the easiest little fly or let the easiest little grounder roll through his legs. He may strike out or he may get a hit. Every one of these performances is necessary to the success of baseball. The error is just as important as the base hit.

When you stop to think that there are over thirty minor leagues, to say nothing of the larger and more important ones, each league averaging eight clubs and each club in the smallest league averaging twenty-five men to a club, it is possible to conceive to what extent baseball has grown in the country. In the National league I have over one hundred men on my payroll, all of whom are essential to carrying on the work of the team. A little more than a fourth of those are actually engaged in playing ball, but all the rest owe their occupation to the virility of baseball as a business.

All the men who are engaged in baseball today as a business are by no means men who could not make as great a success in any other line of business. The successful ballplayer is keen, alert, intelligent, and by nature gifted with the power to think with extraordinary quickness. It is true that through lack of application most ballplayers in the past, at least, have been unfit for other work when they have outlived their usefulness on the diamond. They have spent from fifteen to twenty years using their brains and their energy for the game, but had they devoted the same time and energy to anything else they would have made equally great successes in whatever they attempted.

For them would have been impossible, for they would have possessed all the qualities necessary for success, else they would have failed in baseball.

Moreover, the character of the men engaged in baseball is steadily becoming higher. College men, professional men, young and successful business men, all have turned to the baseball field as a means of earning a livelihood.

If an element above all else could be given as most essential for success as a baseball player, I think I should say that it would be the ability to think quickly. A man must have his hands, feet and head working in perfect unison and be able to decide instantaneously what to do. It is that one quality that I look for in a new recruit, and in my twenty years' experience on the baseball field I have found the youngsters that had it rarely turned out failures.

If there is really much difference between playing on one kind of a team and another, I should say that it was by far the hardest to play on a team that is a contender for the championship of its league throughout the season. Every member of the team feels today as though he had played for years, instead of months. He has been under a constant strain every day for seven months, and now that the time has come to relax they are just beginning to feel the effects of what they have

Washington, Oct. 15.—President Roosevelt's mail is stacked high these days with letters concerning the commission on country life, which he recently created, and the number of communications on the subject is growing greater daily.

A strange feature of this correspondence, considering the far-reaching significance of the commission, is that so far it has contained no word of adverse comment from any quarter. The suggestions are all constructive, and many of them will prove of great help to the commission when it formulates its plans of campaign.

Many of the letters to the president are from men whose names are known everywhere, but the bulk of them are from the men who are most vitally interested—the farmers themselves. The general tenor of the farmers' letters shows that not only are they deeply concerned in the work of the commission, but that they have clear-headed ideas of the president's purpose in starting the inquiry and of what the outcome may be.

The writers get down to the business and set forth their ideas with a hard-headed logic and clearness of statement that makes it seem a little doubtful if the belief of some persons that rural schools ought to be improved is well founded. The farmers themselves, however, agree that educational facilities in the country districts ought to be made over so as to fit country conditions and needs more closely.

The one point in which all the farmers without exception agree with the president is that the greatest trouble with agricultural life is its isolation. The remedy for this that is most frequently proposed is better roads. Another solution advocated by a large proportion of the writers is that a means be sought to prevent the holding of large farms by persons or corporations who do not work them themselves.

A number of the president's correspondents urge a revival in some sort of the old yeoman which provided a social center for rural communities. Several writers tell of excellent results that have been obtained in their own neighborhoods by literary societies, not so much in their educational capacity as in providing a community bond.

Many suggestions are made concerning the postoffice service. All these letters are befitly filed and the gist of their contents will be brought before the commission for its consideration.

gone through.

Great crowds, such as we played before on Thursday, to an old ball player do not look any larger than does a crowd of four thousand people. From the moment he takes his position on the diamond until the game is through, it is his business. He gives it that close application that any successful business man finds it necessary to give to his work. Whether the crowd yell or not is all the same to him, because he does not know it either way. The young player may be and is often indifferent. He has to school himself to be oblivious to his surroundings. He is apt to pay attention to the opinion and comments of others. He likes to read the papers and see what they have to say about him. They all do it at first, but they learn not to do it until, like myself, they scarcely ever look at the baseball stories in the papers during the playing season.

That ballplayers are born, not made, I scarcely agree. It is true that the best ballplayers are lads that have played the game ever since they were old enough to bounce a rubber ball along the sidewalk, but there have been many good ballplayers developed by plain, hard work.

A ball player learns to look at defeat with as much unconcern as he does a victory. It would be hard to express my desire to have won that game against Chicago last Thursday. I wanted to see the boys win it, for it meant much to them and they had worked hard for the greater part of a year. They had labored conscientiously and honestly and, moreover, they had actually won what they were fighting for. Still I am pretty confident I am right when I say that thousands of lovers of baseball took that defeat we sustained more to heart than I or any of the players did themselves. It was an incident, unfortunate it is true, in the course of a year's business.

Baseball is honest. Unfortunate decisions may at times result in clear injustice, but they are even at that, but mistakes. There is no such thing as deliberate dishonesty in baseball. The unfortunate position the New York club was placed in by a technicality has aroused lovers of baseball all over the country. It has even actually made baseball patrons, because hundreds have been aroused to a pitch of interest by that question coming which nothing else would have done. Since Thursday's game I have received scores of telegrams from all over the country congratulating the team for having honestly and actually won the National league pennant. That question aside, however, the fact remains that today baseball is one of America's greatest institutions and its enchantment has begun to spread all over the world. England now has its leagues, Australia has its teams and it is even being played in the far north, where they have to start the games at half past nine at night.

Why Colds are Dangerous.

Because you have contracted ordinary colds and recovered from them without treatment of any kind, do not for a moment imagine that colds are not dangerous. Everyone knows that pneumonia and chronic catarrh have their origin in a common cold. Consumption is not caused by a cold but the cold prepares the system for the reception and development of the germs that would not otherwise have found lodgment. It is the same with all infectious diseases. Diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles and whooping cough are much more likely to be contracted when the child has a cold. You will see from this that more real danger lurks in a cold than in any other of the common ailments. The easiest and quickest way to cure a cold is to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy
