Convoy Of U.S. Army Reserve & National Guard Troops Attacked In Honduras

Deborah Tyroler

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalrepository.unm.edu/noticen

Recommended Citation
https://digitalrepository.unm.edu/noticen/2961

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Latin America Digital Beat (LADB) at UNM Digital Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in NotiCen by an authorized administrator of UNM Digital Repository. For more information, please contact amywinter@unm.edu.
Convoy Of U.S. Army Reserve &amp; National Guard Troops Attacked In Honduras

by Deborah Tyroler
Category/Department: General
Published: Wednesday, April 19, 1989

On April 13, unidentified persons attacked a convoy of US Army Reserve and National Guard troops in a remote area of Honduras. According to US officials, there were no injuries, but one US vehicle was disabled by an "explosive device." The incident marked the first involving the thousands of US guard or reserve troops flown in for two weeks of training, and the third attack on the US military in Honduras since early February. Honduran armed forces spokesperson Juan Sierra Fonseca said that it was unclear how many assailants attacked the convoy or what weapons were used. US spokesperson Lt. David Fruck said 15 guardsmen from North Dakota and reservists from Los Alimitos, Cal., and Salt Lake City, and two regular Army soldiers were involved. (Basic data from Washington Post, 04/14/89)

-- End --