On April 22, Democratic Convergence leader Hector Oqueli told reporters that recent violent incidents in San Salvador constitute a "dangerous situation." Oqueli, also a member of the Revolutionary Democratic Front (FDR), political ally of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN), asserted that the civil war is the country's principal problem. If the war is not "resolved," he said, violence will continue, and economic recovery will remain impossible. Oqueli condemned the recent bombing of the home of vice president-elect Francisco Merino, and the assassination of Attorney General Roberto Garcia Alvarado. (Basic data from Notimex, 04/22/89)
