SAY STROVER WILL BE SURVEYOR GENERAL

Santa Fe Hears Rumor That
Morgan O. Llewellyn Is to be Succeeded by Rough
Rider Now in Washington.

(Special Dispatch to the Morning Journal.)—Santa Fe, N. M., Sept. 30.—Santa Fe has been much interested today in a rumor that Captain William Strover, for many years connected with the surveyor general's office here, is soon to become surveyor general of New Mexico, succeeding Morgan O. Llewellyn, who the rumor says is presently on his way to Washington to resign. It has been impossible to confirm the statement as to Mr. Llewellyn's resignation, of which there have been rumors current here for several days.

Captain Strover is now in Washington, and the statement is made that he went there for a conference at the interior department after the position as surveyor general had been tendered to him.

Captain Strover was formerly in the regular army, but resigned some four years ago, when he entered the office of the New Mexico surveyor general as a draftsman. He served in the department until the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, when he enlisted, but like many another soldier, failed to get into Cuba.

Following the war he returned to the surveyor general's department, having the position of examiner of surveys, and has since been connected with the land office in this territory. The rumor of the impending change in the surveyor general's office has aroused considerable interest here, since the matter seems to have its origin in reliable authority.

Nice Line of Denver Stick-up
Artists Headed This Way
With Full and Detailed Descriptions Traveling Ahead.

Chief of Police McMullen received a letter yesterday from Denver which made him smile. It was in line with his theory that as a result of the recent clearing out of the Denver denizens a considerable number of the bad ones might be expected to drift this way, and with that idea in view, he has been supplying the local department with carefully detailed descriptions of some of the more likely ones for several weeks past.

"They seem to think we are the real Rubens down here," said the chief last night, "and perhaps we are, but I can be brushed off as every passer-by."

The letter in question was from a Denver correspondent of the police department, and outlined in some glowing detail the probable coming of the Denver gang, and several other gangs of crooks, who have recently found it necessary to get out of Denver in some haste. The letter says that Meyer and his crowd have recently gathered in the "easy money" at the Littleton county fair in Colorado, and that they expect "to make a killing" in Albuquerque. The killing is very likely to be made, for with the letter and other which have been coming for several days are very carefully prepared descriptions of the men in question, who if they show up in these parts, will have all opportunity to give a reason for the journey. The migrating crooks appear to have managed their departure very badly. They were permitted to get out of Denver unmolested, but they neglected to arrange for their identity to be concealed in the rest of the country, and as a result peace officers all over the southwest are better prepared to do business than they have ever been before under similar conditions.

HOMESEEKERS HAVE THE CHANCE OF A LIFETIME

GOVERNMENT TO OPEN VAST AREA TO ENTRY

Indian Reservations Large Enough to Care for 35,000 Settlers Will Be Opened During the Coming Year.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 30.—(The Sun is planning to distribute homesteads in Indian reservations of the west to about thirty-five thousand homesteaders during the next year. This will be the largest distribution he has made since he threw Oklahoma open to settlement. The land to be opened up is located on eight different Indian reservations, and nearly all of it is regarded as first class for farming purposes. While the regulations for its disposal are only out for one reservation so far, it has been decided to open all the tracts by the lottery system. This has been tried twice by the government and works admirably. It precludes any trouble over contests and apparently satisfies everybody who obtains a ticket to the lottery, whether he is lucky or not. A loser knows that he had a fair show. The reservations to be opened, with their acreage, follows:

Reservation	Acreage
Great Salt Lake	210,000
Colville, Washington	1,000,000
Flathead, Montana	1,000,000
Lower Brule, South Dakota	54,560
Rosebud, South Dakota	825,000
Yakima, Washington	1,145,000
Lemhi, Idaho	87,000
Blackfoot, Montana	500,000

This makes a total of 4,910,500 acres. The land to be opened up is located on eight different Indian reservations, and nearly all of it is regarded as first class for farming purposes. While the regulations for its disposal are only out for one reservation so far, it has been decided to open all the tracts by the lottery system. This has been tried twice by the government and works admirably. It precludes any trouble over contests and apparently satisfies everybody who obtains a ticket to the lottery, whether he is lucky or not. A loser knows that he had a fair show. The reservations to be opened, with their acreage, follows:

Lower Brule, First.
The first reservation to be opened will be the Lower Brule, in South Dakota, with its 54,560 acres. The land has been surveyed and the regulations issued for its disposal. Homesteaders will have until October 7 to apply for tickets. The lottery will be held on the 10th of the month. Each applicant must go to the Pierre district and make out on his ticket that he is entitled to take public land under the homestead laws. Then if he is successful in drawing a farm he must pay the government the appraised value of the land, in annual installments. The value is placed at from $1.25 to $4 an acre.

In the case of the Rosebud reservation in Idaho land can be taken under the regular homestead laws or the mineral laws. The survey of this land is now being made. When completed the government will allow the Indians their share and then classify and appraise the surplus, amounting to 210,000 acres, and order the lottery held. It will take about a year to do this. Settlers will not be able to till their farms there until the spring of 1909.

Government surveys are now at work in the Colville reservation in Washington. They are not only required to divide that 1,000,000 acres into farms ranging from 40 to 160 acres, but must also lay out several government town sites. A reservation that reservation will be under irrigation. The irrigated farms will be limited to 40 acres. The others will be full homestead size—160 acres. The land will all be classified and appraised as arable, grazing, timber, mineral or arid.

Million Acres in Montana.
About three-fourths of the Flathead Indians in Montana have been allotted their land and the Indian Commissioner will soon appoint appraisers to appraise the one million acres of surplus land. The classification of the general land office to classify this land into first and second class agricultural land, timber, mineral and grazing. The survey is practically completed. It is the hope of the officials to have this reservation thrown open early enough next year to enable the settlers to put in a crop. However, there is many a slip in government work, and the opening may be delayed until fall.

It is estimated by the Indian bureau that it will take at least nine months more to complete the allotment of the Rosebud land to Indian children. But as soon as the allotment work is finally completed, the 25,000 acres of surplus lands can be opened to settlement. Several government town sites are yet to be located there.

Irrigated Land at Yakima.
One of the most important tracts to be opened is the 1,145,000 acres at Yakima, Wash. This will be disposed of in various ways. The government is engaged on an irrigation project there to cover about one hundred thousand acres of land. The irrigated tract will be divided into forty-acre sections and disposed of as was the land at the Huntley project in Montana. Settlers recently must pay the government back the amount of money it put into the irrigation plant in ten years.

This will make the land cost the settlers about $20 an acre, but it will be worth three times that amount for extensive farming purposes. It will be used chiefly for sugar beet and alfalfa culture. The timber land on the Yakima reservation will be sold under inclosed bids. All other land, except mineral, will go under the homestead act. The allotments and scheduled reserved lands have been approved and the land commissioner is ready to open the reservation just as soon as the reclamation project is completed. In fact, the opening is being held back on account of the irrigation plant, but the government officials hope to throw the land open to settlement in time for cultivation of next year.

Work has progressed on the Lemhi, Idaho, reservation sufficiently to justify the land office in announcing that that reservation will not doubt be opened to settlement this fall. This will provide homes for four hundred settlers, there being 64,000 acres in the tract. The Indians on this reservation have all been removed to Fort Hall, and the improvements of the land only are to be appraised. The appraisers will be appointed within a few weeks. The old homestead law will govern this opening and people will get the land at from $1.25 to $2.50 an acre.

Surveys are now at work on the Blackfoot reservation. They must
