FORCED VICTIM TO HELP BE OWN GRAVE

GREWSOME MURDER MYSTERY IN OAKLAND
Body of Woman Slain Last Summer Found in Bed of Quicklime Believed to Contain Yet Another Victim.

[By Morning Journal Special Leased Wire.]
Oakland, Cal., Nov. 26.—Following the arrests of M. A. Wilkins, of Elm-hurst, who is in the county jail charged with murdering his wife last July, a woman's body having been found in a shed in the rear of his home, buried beneath five feet of lime and sand, the sheriff and other officers are now endeavoring to locate the body of T. E. Kimmons, known as "Earl," who disappeared suddenly from the Wilkins home. It is suspected that Wilkins also murdered this man, who was 22 years old and a street car striker, from San Francisco. Wilkins, however, who is a native of San Francisco, recently inherited a large fortune and is now living in Houston, Texas. Sheriff Barnett early today and began a search for Kimmons' body.

An important development in the case today was the admission by Wilkins that he was never legally married to the woman who passed as his wife, and whom he is supposed to have murdered. He said the woman on a train, she was "broke," and came to live with me. She was between 30 and 35 years of age. She never told me who her parents were or where she came from, but she said her name was Verna Wallace. As to how she died I see that it concerns any one I myself. I was born in France of French parents, and have traveled all over the world.

An autopsy was performed at Elm-hurst today on the body, and although no official statement was made by the physicians, it is said that traces of poison were found. After consulting the autopsy the doctors consulted with District Attorney Brown and told him of their findings.

Other than to say that the physicians were to make a chemical analysis of the stomach, the district attorney would make no statement.

It was learned today of a bottle of strychnine in the shed where the body was uncovered has given rise to the impression that this poison may have been the agent which caused the woman's death.

The authorities are endeavoring to locate the name of the woman who before she was known as Mrs. Wilkins. A description with the name and address. "Mrs. Carmen, 6822 Washington Park, Springfield, Mo., may be the clue which will give them the information and allow them to learn Wilkins' history.

A friend of the woman, Mrs. J. Anderson, who had been staying in Wilkins' home the past few days, made the complaint.

Her suspicions first became aroused by the absence of Mrs. Wilkins, who, her husband said, had gone to the home of her parents in the east. In a dream she declares she saw the body of her friend lying on the ground, with her arms crossed over her breast. She reported the matter to the chief of police and a search resulted in the finding of the body, just as described by Mrs. Anderson.

Wilkins said at first that his wife committed suicide and afterward that he had killed her in childhood.

ALL DAY SEARCH FOR SECOND VICTIM FRUITLESS
Oakland, Cal., Nov. 26.—The day-long search for more victims of the Wilkins case today was fruitless. When Sheriff Barnett and a posse of Oakland police left Wilkins' home at midnight last night, after searching the partly decomposed body of Verna Wallace, who had been passing as Wilkins' wife, they were of the belief that one more victim at least had been buried on the premises. The supposed victim is T. E. Kimmons, a striking San Francisco car man, who knew of Wilkins' relations with the Wilkins family, whether they were a friend or foe, had aroused Wilkins' jealousy. Kimmons had been missing since July 23. Following out the theory that Kimmons' body was buried somewhere on Wilkins' property in Elm-hurst, Sheriff Barnett, Deputy Sheriff Hansen, District Attorney Brown, Detective Kyle and a number of attaches of the Oakland police department and the sheriff's office, resumed the search today. But the corpse of Kimmons was not found. Though baffled in their efforts to find a trace of Kimmons, the authorities have not discovered today that strengthened the theory that Wilkins murdered his "wife." The autopsy surgeons, acting under the direction of Coroner Tisdale, this afternoon made an examination of the body that developed the fact that the dead woman was gagged. A handkerchief had been securely knotted about her head and across her mouth. This would have prevented her making an outcry had Wilkins used forceful measures to kill her. Her body was far too decomposed to determine whether there were any marks of violence on it. The body of the woman had lain in quicklime for nearly five months, but a heavy porter, which was wrapped around her, prevented the time from doing effective work. The surgeons discovered that the corpse was in the seventh month of pregnancy.

Wilkins, in jail, still solidly insists that the woman committed suicide and that he buried the body, as he did to avoid publicity. In one statement he says she took strychnine on the evening of July 23, and died at 10 o'clock that night. Then he set about to provide for her burial and finished the gruesome job before morning. The statements as to the date and time she died, however, are conflicting. Finally he told Sheriff Barnett he did not know what took place on the fatal night.

He must have been crazy when I buried her," he cried in his agitation. The stomach has been removed from the body and sent to the city chemist for analysis.

In Mrs. A. B. Anderson, who was staying with her husband at the Wilkins home, and who gave the police information that led to the finding of the body, the police have a strong circumstantial witness against Wilkins. She assisted the police in their search for Kimmons' body today and is still convinced, because of words dropped from time to time by Wilkins, that he is responsible for the young man's death. The search for his body on the Wilkins property will be resumed tomorrow. Meanwhile, detectives are scouring the city for a clue to his whereabouts should he still be living. It was learned today that Kimmons was intimately acquainted with the Wallace woman. The two met in the east a year ago and Kimmons, who is much younger than Wilkins, was supposed to be a favorite with "Mrs. Wilkins." Kimmons was twenty-one years old. Wilkins is fifty-eight. On July 21 Kimmons visited Wilkins at Elm-hurst. The car strike had left him without employment. He was set to work as a messenger for Wilkins. E. F. Freely was employed in that work with him. The work was completed about July 23. It was at that time that the woman disappeared. Some days later Freely sought Wilkins on a business matter and inquired after Kimmons. Wilkins told him that the young man had fallen from a horse and gone home. He had not been seen since. To others Wilkins told different stories, when asked as to Kimmons' whereabouts.

In the search of the house today Sheriff Barnett found a level box with the inscription, "Mrs. L. L. Carmichael, 6122 Washington Park Boulevard, Springfield, Mo." Sheriff Barnett has communicated with the author of the box, who lives in the city.

Wilkins says he was born in France and educated in Rome. He speaks eight languages and by his own story has traveled all over the world. It has developed from the testimony of neighbors that he dug the grave of his supposed victim while she was still alive, and that he even had the unfortunate woman, who had been spending her spare time making baby clothes in anticipation of motherhood, actually assist him in the work.

While the grave was being dug last July, a neighbor's boy happened to go into the woodshed and discovered the big hole. He told his parents. They questioned Wilkins casually about the matter at the time, and he explained the excavation by saying that he was getting rich loam for his garden. It was the memory of these circumstances which caused the neighbors to believe that he had the body of the woman last night.

MURDERED WOMAN COMES FROM MISSOURI, IS BELIEVED
Kansas City, Nov. 26.—The woman found buried under the house of M. A. Wilkins, of Oakland, Cal., and who, according to the police, is believed here to be Mrs. Verna Wallace, daughter of Henry F. Linderman, proprietor of the Frain hotel, 6822 Washington Park boulevard, this city, was married to Louis Carmichael eight years ago. Carmichael is now an engineer on the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad, running out of Springfield, Mo. Mrs. Carmichael was then twenty-four years of age and Carmichael was fifty. They had one child, they ran a restaurant at 6818 Washington Park boulevard for a while. The Carmichaels left Kansas City about a year and a half ago. Mrs. James Martin, a sister of Mrs. Carmichael, said she had not heard from her brother for more than a year, but supposed she was living with her husband in Springfield. A letter dated September 25, 1906, from Sterling Minter, an uncle, in Sulphur, Okla., then passed in the territory, was the last Mrs. Martin had heard of her sister. The woman's father refused to discuss the case. Louis Carmichael, the woman's husband, was on his run tonight, and could not be reached.

Bryan Promises Democratic Support for Movement Inaugurated by Perry Belmont.

Washington, Nov. 26.—A meeting of the association for the publicity of campaign contributions, called by Hon. Perry Belmont, secretary of the movement, was held here today. The chief feature of which was a short address by W. J. Bryan. Mr. Bryan asserted that if the movement for publicity of campaign contributions were carried out, it would take the form of the next democratic national convention, providing for the disclosure of all contributions. While the democratic party is not in a position to draw its share of the campaign funds at present, he said, "it has been in position to do so before, and it will be in position to do so again when it makes the necessary promise. I hope that no party will yield to the temptation to let legislation or immunity for contributions. There is no doubt that such has been done in the past."

Mr. Bryan contended that the publicity should be made before a campaign instead of after it. He became known that he has made a contribution for a public benefit, he said, "why should he object to having it known to a public committee?"

A resolution was adopted declaring that senators and representatives shall be urged to aid in the enactment of the proposed publicity law.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Nov. 26.—In an interview with J. D. Hawkins, general manager of the United States Reduction and Refining company, Mr. Hawkins stated that during the past six weeks the gold ore output of the Cripple Creek district had more than doubled and that the district had not shown such activity for several years. This resurgence is partly due to the granting by the railroads of a reduced rate to the smelters on low grade ores.

AGONY OF THE LABOR CASES LAND CASES EXPECTED JOE CANNON

THE SOLICITOR GENERAL HAS LITTLE TO SAY
Grand Jury Meets But Only to Adjourn Until This Morning
at 10 o'Clock—Attorneys

[Special Dispatch to the Morning Journal.]
Santa Fe, N. M., Nov. 26.—"I came to New Mexico by direction of the president to look into pending federal litigation and to report to him." This very brief statement is the beginning and the end of what Solicitor General Henry M. Hoyt, who arrived in Santa Fe today, has had to say for publication concerning his mission to the territory. The solicitor general arrived with Governor Curry this morning, and in the afternoon was a caller at the executive office. With him came Special Assistant Attorney Ormsby McHarg, of the department of justice, and Special Agent E. P. Holcombe, of the general land office. Neither Mr. McHarg nor Mr. Holcombe have had anything to say concerning pending action in the land cases or concerning the conditions surrounding their return to the territory.

The federal grand jury reconvened this morning at 10 o'clock, but at that time Mr. McHarg had not arrived, and adjournment was taken until 2 o'clock, when another adjournment was taken until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Although there are many conjectures, it is impossible to say how much longer this jury will be in session, or what line of work it is to follow out.

In the mean time attorneys representing Phelps, Dodge & Co. are in Santa Fe in force. Hon. W. A. Hawkins, who represents the big copper corporation in New Mexico, is here, and with him, his law partner, Judge Franklin, of El Paso. Charles A. Spiess, of Las Vegas, who is among those indicted in the blanket indictment returned against Phelps, Dodge & Co. and its employees, is also here. It is understood that attorneys for the corporation propose to make some move tomorrow or in the near future toward a dismissal of the indictment, but what this proposed action is can not be ascertained.

ALLEGED MURDERER SEEKS RELEASE

Oakland Student Accused of Killing Comrade, Seeks Writ of Habeas Corpus.

[By Morning Journal Special Leased Wire.]
Oakland, Cal., Nov. 26.—Counsel for Harry G. Kleinschmidt, accused of the murder of Frank Bellows last July, are busy trying with every effort to secure a writ of habeas corpus. The writ was issued by Judge Brown on Friday at 2 p. m. District Attorney Brown today said he will fight hard to have the proceedings continued until after the grand jury has a change to act on the case, which will be Friday or Monday.

M. Peck, of 2409 Dana street, accompanied Frank Bellows to the corner of Pine and Russell streets on the night of the murder. As he waited for his friend on the corner, six persons passed him coming down the street from the direction of the Kleinschmidt place. Two of them are known to the authorities, the four others are yet to be located. Bellows went to the home on Sunday, an appointment to meet the accused student, who was supposed to have in his possession letters taken from the house, where he met Mrs. Bertha Kleinschmidt, who told him that Harry, her brother, was awaiting him in the rear of the house. That was the last time Bellows was ever seen alive by any person, except the young man who is now in the Oakland jail, accused of his murder. The Kleinschmidt family say that within five minutes after the arrival of Bellows at the house Harry Kleinschmidt came into the house by the rear door. As he was being driven by called out as if to some one in the darkness in the rear. "Bellows, you can't have those letters."

The police theory is that Bellows was at that time dead, a victim of cyanide or potassium, forced into his mouth or his lips while off his guard by the accused student. How this was accomplished in detail they refuse to say.

THE LABOR BANK PRESIDENT A SUICIDE

HOWARD MAXWELL CUTS HIS THROAT WITH RAZOR
Released From Jail Monday Night Head of Brooklyn Borough Institution Lacks Courage to Face Future.

[By Morning Journal Special Leased Wire.]
New York, Nov. 26.—Howard Maxwell, deposed president of the Borough bank of Brooklyn, who was under indictment for grand larceny and forgery, and was last night released from jail on $20,000 bail, committed suicide today. He cut his throat and left wrist with a razor and pen knife in the bath room of his home in Brooklyn and died tonight at Long Island hospital. He was 40 years of age. He was locked up last Thursday, had felt his humiliation keenly and during his incarceration had appeared hopelessly despondent. His wife, however, gave his family no intimation so far as known, that he contemplated suicide. His wife was prostrated by the tragedy, and was under the care of a physician tonight.

Maxwell was released late last night from Raymond street jail, where he had been held prisoner since the three indictments charging him with misfeasance in connection with the management of the suspended bank were returned. There was some difficulty in obtaining bail, and officers of the jail reported that Maxwell was greatly nervous. All yesterday and the day before he laid on his bed and appeared oblivious to his surroundings. He declined to receive any visitors except his wife and counsel.

Last night Justice Burr signed an order for Maxwell's release, when bail to the amount of $20,000 was furnished.

Maxwell, in company with his counsel, L. R. Oeland, was driven to his residence at 182 Congress street. Maxwell spent this morning quietly at his home. In the afternoon he announced his intention of taking a bath and going for a walk. Shortly before 2 o'clock a maid heard a sound as of some one falling on the second floor. She went to the door and found the banker lying on the bath room floor, half dressed, with gaping wounds in his throat and left wrist. On a washstand nearby lay a white, bone-handled razor half opened, and a pen knife with blades open at each end, and both covered with blood. As she turned to summon help the maid stepped on a second razor which lay half opened in the hallway leading to the bathroom.

Maxwell was conscious and tried to articulate, but failed to make himself understood. Dr. C. E. Brown, the family physician, was hastily summoned and he called in Dr. Horace Greeley. The banker was bleeding profusely. It was decided to remove him to Long Island College hospital, where an operation for tracheotomy was performed. The windpipe was found to be nearly severed, and his left wrist was cut almost to the bone. Maxwell died a short time after the operation.

Soon after the physicians began to work over him the banker had lapsed into unconsciousness. He was given a brief and half lucid periods that followed, he made no statement so far as known. Coroner Brewer began his official investigation tonight.

Maxwell was 40 years of age, married and leaves a wife but no children. On November 21 he was jointly indicted for grand larceny with former Cashier Arthur Campbell and Director William G. Brown of the Borough bank. There were other indictments against him involving forgery in a quarterly bank statement made to the state banking department. When these three men were arraigned Campbell and Gov. secured bondmen, but to the surprise of many who knew of Maxwell's popularity in financial circles and social life, he was offered to go on his bond for some time only his four sisters, who, offering the home left three days after the bank suspension, could only secure a $10,000 bond, came to his rescue. This desertion on the part of men to whom he had looked for his freedom, it is said, embittered and depressed Maxwell, and the despondency increased before his release was brought about.

During his arraignment Maxwell's counsel stated that his client had put up every dollar in the world that he possessed to secure the bank, and that he had absolutely stripped himself to protect the institution. Later on he said to his counsel, Maxwell is said to have borrowed $15 with which to buy a meal or two from a nearby restaurant. At the time he had declared that he did not have a cent with which to provide himself any extras outside the prison fare. His humiliation was aggravated when, like a common felon, he was measured and fingerprinted, and his pedigree placed in the jail records.

BRYAN BOOSTS THE HUMBLE JACKASS

SKINS LORDLY ELEPHANT AS FRIEND OF COMMON FOE

Nebraskan Compares Emblems and Aims of Republican and Democratic Parties to Disadvantage of the Former.

(By Morning Journal Special Leased Wire.) Washington, Nov. 26.—William J. Bryan was tonight tendered a banquet and reception by "The United Democracy of the District of Columbia." Five hundred democrats partook of three-dollar dinner, and more than double that number participated in the reception and feast of oratory which followed. While the capacity of the Raleigh hotel banquet hall placed a limit on the attendance, the "old" was completely off as to enthusiasm, and the long speech of Mr. Bryan, like the half dozen shorter ones in his praise, were proceeded by continued demonstrations of political accord and personal regard for the guest of honor.

Mr. Bryan's subject was "The Point of View," and his speech consisted of illustrations of the difference in the point of view from which questions are examined. Before taking up the serious presentation of this subject, he referred to some of the remarks made by preceding speakers, and apropos of Mr. Hagan's suggestion that Tammany Tigers would make better playthings for children than Teddy bears, he said that party emblems, as well as political toys, had their places, and he spoke a word in defense of the democratic donkey. "The donkey," he said, "is really a better emblem than the elephant for a party. This was impressed upon my mind when I visited other countries. I found that the donkey is a resident of every country and that everywhere he is serving the people, and that, too, the common people. He is not an aristocrat. Whether you visit the mountains or the valleys, the densely populated regions of the Orient, the fertile tillers of the Nile or the sacred soil of the Holy Land, you will find the donkey—patient, persistent, and always at work. The elephant, on the contrary, is only to be found in certain latitudes, and is seldom seen except on dress parade. If greatness is to be measured by service, instead of by size or appearance, the position of honor must be given to the faithful donkey. As the democratic party is being a universal party and is everywhere justifying its claims to the confidence of the people by the service it is rendering them, it is entirely appropriate that it should prefer the donkey to the elephant for an emblem."

SAYS ROOSEVELT BORROWS DOCTRINES OF DEMOCRACY
After dealing humorously with the charge that the republicans were stealing democratic thunder, he proceeded to point out the things which the president has borrowed, the democratic doctrines which he has ignored and the anti-democratic doctrines which he has advanced, saying:

"The president has advocated railroad regulation, which is a democratic doctrine, but he has gone as far as the democrats would have him go, and the republican leaders are not willing to go as far as the president does. He has taken some steps toward the enforcement of the laws against trusts. In this respect he has been following democratic doctrine, although he has not prosecuted all the trusts and has not recently made any effort to secure additional anti-trust legislation. Here, too, the republican leaders don't support the president's position. The president has advocated an income tax; the republicans, but none of the leaders of his party has yet attempted to carry out his recommendation on this subject, and Secretary Taft, whom he has designated as his heir-apparent, is not in favor of an income tax at this time. The president has also recommended arbitration as a means of settling labor disputes. This doctrine was taken bodily from the democratic platform, but it seems to be as unpopular with the republican leaders as other democratic doctrines."

"Here are four policies which the president has endorsed, which are distinctly democratic, and which were being urged by the democratic party for from five to twelve years before the president ever said a word in their favor, and it is a significant fact that they are the very things that have given him popularity. Surely no democrat will find fault with democratic policies which are so popular and necessary that a president of the opposite party is forced to accept them."

There are, however, several democratic doctrines which the president has not endorsed. He has not yet endorsed tariff reform, although the sentiment is growing so rapidly that Secretary Taft admits that tariff revision is needed, though he yields to his habit of postponing and would put the reform off until after election. The president has not endorsed the election of senators by direct vote of the people, although this democratic reform is so popular that the house of representatives has declared for it five times by a nearly unanimous vote. The president has not recognized the right of the Philippines to the promise of ultimate independence, although the democratic position on this question has been vindicated by experience. He has not yet endorsed the democratic position on government by injunction, but in his last message he intimated that it might become necessary to restrain the use of the writ of injunction if the abuse of this writ continued. He reminded me of the man who went to the theater on a pass. The play was so unsatisfactory that the audience hissed and booed, but the man with the pass kept quiet. Finally one of the audience asked him why he didn't join in, and he replied: 'I do not like this play any more than the rest of you. I am in here on a pass, but if this play gets much worse, I'll go out and buy a ticket and come back and then I will hiss with the rest of you.'

"Here are four democratic doctrines that he has not yet endorsed, and now let me call your attention to some very undemocratic doctrines which he has endorsed. In the first place, he favors the monopoly of railroads and other interstate commerce corporations, and this is in line with his position that the federal government can, through a treaty, interfere with the school system of California. The democrats insist upon the recognition of the right of the state to exercise its constitutional control over domestic affairs. He has recommended a ship subsidy, which is so un-democratic that it has the solid opposition of the democratic party and the opposition of a number of republicans from the interior states. He has advocated an asset currency, which is also un-democratic, and he has manifested a military spirit entirely out of harmony with democratic ideas and democratic ideals. Here are four positions taken by him which are undemocratic, and I may add that the republican leaders have supported him quite enthusiastically in all that was undemocratic and have opposed him quite persistently where he was democratic."

JUST WHAT A GOOSE DOES WHEN IT FLIES

Animated Discussion Upon "Hang" and "Yang" Which Costs a Nature Fakir Five Cold Bunches of Currency.

Three men interested in the financial situation met on a street corner yesterday and before they had stopped to begin to talk.

"Well, what do you think of it?" one asked.

"Everything is lovely and the goose hangs high," one quoted.

"You mean 'honks'," said the third.

"I was reared on a farm in old Missouri," the quoter replied, "and heard my grandfather say 'hang' more times than I've loaned you money, and I reckon he was correct. How do you make 'honks' of it?"

"Honk" is the term applied to the cry of the wild goose, that's how, and the 'honk' has been corrupted into 'hang'."

"You are both wrong," said the man who asked the initial question. "To say that 'hangs' in this sense, has been corrupted from 'honks' is nonsensical. In making that change it would be necessary to change the 'onk' sound in 'ang,' and I don't believe another instance in the language could be cited. There is a word which has been corrupted into 'hangs,' because many people never heard the word, and naturally think when they do hear it that it is a mispronunciation of 'hangs.' The word is 'yangs.' 'To the marshes where the other geese do congregate,' said one of the men. 'I never heard the word, and I don't believe you ever did.' 'Yes, my grandfather used it, and he said that in Scotland, where he heard his grandfather and father use it, it was always 'yangs.' 'Just the same, I don't believe there is such a word.' 'To give point to the discussion, I'll bet you $5 there is.' 'How'll you prove it?' 'By the dictionary.' The bet was taken, the money was posted and the hunt for a dictionary began. The financial situation, its possibilities and joys and sorrows had been forgotten, it was real knowledge that was wanted, and the three got it. A search of the dictionaries was made, and it was found that all of them, Webster's International, the Century and the Standard, gave standing to 'yang,' but also gave 'honk' as a synonym. The bet, however, was as to the existence of the word, and not as to whether it was the one originally used in the quotation. The word is admitted by all of the dictionaries to be of imitative origin, and as a noun to mean the cry of the wild goose. As an intransitive verb it means to make the cry of the wild goose, hence it is possible for the wild goose to yang."

"And if the wild goose can 'yang,' it can do so as high as its wings can carry it," said one of the men. "Hence, as the wild goose fly high in fine weather, for we have all seen them when they were only points in the ether, the definition fits our case. 'I guess you've won,' said the loser, as he watched the money pass from the stakeholder to the backer of 'yang.' 'Everything is lovely and the goose 'yangs' high,' said five plunks per yang is a little too high."

CURRY OFFERS CLANCY THE POSITION

INVITES DISTRICT ATTORNEY TO BE GENERAL

Mr. Clancy Goes to Santa Fe to Meet Governor But Declines to Discuss the Appointment.

Governor Curry, on his arrival in Santa Fe yesterday, offered to Hon. Frank W. Clancy, of this city, the position of attorney general of New Mexico, succeeding Judge A. B. Fall, whose resignation will take effect as soon as his successor has qualified.

Mr. Clancy left last night for Santa Fe. He continued to maintain silence as to the position which has been tendered him, and declined to say whether or not he would accept it. Mr. Clancy's closest friends were not in a position to say last night what his action would be, the district attorney simply stating that he desired to talk with the governor before making any statement.

The honor extended to Mr. Clancy by the governor is meeting with very general approval in Albuquerque, where Mr. Clancy is one of the most popular public officers the county and district has ever had. His notable services to the county have made him a firm place in the esteem of the people, and he is regarded as one of the strong men of New Mexico. Very general interest was expressed last night among lawyers and citizens generally to what Mr. Clancy's action would be.

ARMORY BEGINS TO LOOM LARGE IN ALBUQUERQUE

Las Vegas Raises Money; Deeds Will Be Made Out in Very Short Time, and Bonds Will Be Advertised.

It began to look as if Albuquerque would have that long-sought and long needed national guard armory in a short time. As stated a few days ago, the proposition has been filed pending the selection and purchase of a site for the Las Vegas armory, as the bonds for the two institutions are to go in a lump. That this difficulty is removed is shown by the following telegram received by Major B. Ruppe yesterday from Colonel R. E. Twichell, president of the Commercial club, of Las Vegas:

"Las Vegas, Nov. 26.

"Major B. Ruppe, Albuquerque:

"Raised balance to purchase armory site today. Deeds will be made as soon as possible and placed in the hands of the attorney general with abstract. It is TWICHELL.

The news will be received with considerable satisfaction by the public. Albuquerque needs that armory in her business and needs it bad. There is reason to believe that the bonds will be at once disposed of, and the beginning of work on the new building will be a matter of a comparatively short time.

MORE OPTIMISM IN WOOL CIRCLES

Less Disposition Among Weak Holders to Sacrifice Their Wool—Prices Well Maintained On Last Week's Basis.

A more optimistic feeling prevails in wool trade circles, and while there has been little increase in the volume of transactions, there is less disposition among weak holders to sacrifice their wool, and prices are being well maintained on the basis established a week ago, says Bradstreet's Trade Review. Manufacturers are buying only for current requirements, in small lots at current rates, dealers meeting their views on the price scale of a slightly lower level, from which there has been no further recessions during the past week. On good wools, particularly, there has been little shading of prices, as worsted goods are in very light supply and most grades of staple wools are scarce. The money situation is improving daily, and while suit preventing all buying of a speculative nature, admits of more available currency and a noticeable improvement in collections. Thus far the weakness in foreign markets has had little effect in Boston except to limit sales. While the domestic wools have lost the support of foreign firms, they have at the same time been placed above fear of competition by the cessation of buying abroad and the certainty that manufacturers will be forced to rely to a greater extent upon the domestic clip for future supplies. Owing to the scarcity of staple wools, the main part of the trades which have moved in small lots, territories being more active than others, owing to the larger stock on hand. A few worsted wools have sold in the original bags and some staple has changed hands, but the total of such business has been very small. New fall Texas wools are arriving on consignments, and sold last week at 18 1/2c for average and 21 1/2c for best, though financial conditions prevented Boston interests in the San Angelo, Fall California wool, baled and skinned, is coming in slowly, and sold moderately at 45 cents for average and up to 52 cents for the best. Australian wools are reported easier, wools suitable for this country

FINE HANDICRAFT OF THE INDIANS TO BE SOLD

Benham Indian Trading Company Secures Some 10,000 Pieces From New Mexico Pueblos and Others.

About ten thousand beautiful pieces of Indian pottery and other handicraft from the pueblos of Tesuque, Santa Clara, San Domingo, San Ildefonso, Taos and from other New Mexico Indians, have been secured by Howard Clarke, of the Benham Indian Trading company, as the result of a long trip taken by him among the Indian villages. These and hundreds of Navajo blankets, pieces of Mexican drawn work, and arts and crafts leather work will be placed before the public in the big special sale which begins at the beautiful Benham store on Dec. 2.

Manager John Lee Clarke, of the company, said last night that the sale has developed into an annual affair since the remarkable success of the first one. The prices will be cut away down. Handmade prizes are to be awarded between Dec. 2 and Christmas day, and the lucky purchasers will receive some of the finest pieces of handicraft in the big store. Coupons to be published later will entitle each purchaser to ten cents. The drawn work displayed will be reduced in price 25 per cent during the sale.

PADILLA HAS PUT HIS FOOT IN IT

San Rafael Man Arrives Here to Face Charges of Assault, Bigamy and Other Offenses.

Zacarias Padilla, a well known resident of San Rafael, N. M., against whom grave charges have been preferred by his wife, Juanita de Padilla, arrived in Albuquerque last night, accompanied by his father, Ramon Padilla, and Manuel P. y Chavez, also of San Rafael. The party came here to consult Chavez and Sedillo, Padilla's attorneys.

Mrs. Padilla, in her action for divorce, charges Padilla with cruelty, abandonment and adultery, and in another action charges him with bigamy. She also seeks a division of property, which it is alleged Mr. Padilla does not own.

Besides the divorce suit, two business men of San Rafael have preferred charges against Padilla, charging him with assault and battery with intent to kill.

FIGHTING BOB HAS GREAT RECORD IN THE NAVY

CURIOUS MIXTURE OF FIGHTER AND DIPLOMAT

Something of Character of the Man Who Will Guide Great War Fleet of United States to the Far East.

[Special Correspondence Morning Journal.] Washington, Nov. 24.—"Fighting Bob" Evans, the pride of the American navy, who will be in command of the big battleship fleet on its trip to the Pacific coast, is a strange mixture of gentleness and combativeness. Despite all the things that have been said and written about this old sea dog who loves a fight better than he does a square meal after a season of fasting, it is doubtful if any person who reads this has ever known that the man who leads the bridge of the finest fighting craft in the new navy, facing storm and sea in the high seas, is the same impulsive, grim, determined, hot-headed man who would face shot and shell from an enemy's broadside, is an adept at knitting, crocheting and embroidery.

It is true that many people have been led to believe, and with good reason, to remain firm in that belief that "Bob" Evans could not be the English language and do it in such fashion that left him without a rival, but he is equally skilled in the art of embroidery as practiced by a gentlewoman in the quiet of her own boudoir.

Admiral Evans is a man of intense activity. He has been active all his long life. For him the years have been strenuous to a degree. He played out fighting, and has kept it up ever since. As this country has been largely at peace with the world during the time he has been in a position of authority, Admiral Evans has had to devote his time to the study of the execution of the maneuvers carried on in actual war conditions; but he will find ample time to engage in that other occupation from which he takes so much comfort, for he does not believe in permitting his hands to lie idle.

Imagine this great fleet of battleships sailing along the coast with "Fighting Bob" seated in his cabin, quietly knitting socks or crocheting a tidy or doing the latest valanchian stitch on some little finger, and you will not miss the picture that will be presented on occasions. He is a good knitter, as he is good at everything else he undertakes, and he finds lots of solid enjoyment out of this pastime. Many a pair of socks has "Fighting Bob" knit when his thoughts have wandered off from quarter decks, big guns, projectiles, range finders, torpedoes and things of that sort, and every pair he ever made fit the man for whom they were intended.

In the embroidery line he can wield a needle with all the skill of an expert seamstress. And he can throw his knitting aside, pick up a prize fight, superintend divine services, play a game of poker and take part in a song or mix up as fine a bowl of punch as ever went down the throat of a sailor. Is it any wonder that such a man is the idol of his men? Strict discipline that he is, his men love him, for they know he is fair and square, and he is just the man who will stand any oppression or any infringement upon their rights. It is for such a man that the other men will risk their lives to be the forefront when danger is impending.

The people of the Pacific coast have not seen many of the big men of the American navy, and when they look upon "Bob" Evans, as his ships drop anchor in San Francisco bay, they will see one of the biggest and one of the bravest. He began his active service in the civil war, where he was wounded in the leg from the effect of which he walks today with a very perceptible limp. He is perhaps the only man in the navy with such an injury who is on the active list, and who has been permitted to serve until he reaches the retiring age provided by law. His combativeness has played itself when quite a youngster. As a lad it is told of him that he was sailing a toy boat on day when a bigger fellow than he broke his big ship with a brick. Young Evans broke the head of the boy who destroyed his toy with another brick.

He was just as ready to fight when grown to manhood and he has retained the sublimity of "Fighting Bob" on account of the famous incident to which he figured at Valparaiso, Chile, in the early nineties. These were the days when there was hot blood boiling between the Chileans and the Americans. One of our merchantmen had been molested and the sailors on the Baltimore, commanded by Admiral, then Captain, Schley, while on shore leave, had been mobbed by a thousand or more of the citizens of the Chilean city. This had been settled amicably by the two governments before Evans appeared upon the scene, but the Chileans were still resentful.

This was the situation when the Yorktown, a cruiser of small weight as a fighting craft, with Captain Evans, dropped anchor in the supposedly friendly port. The officers of the Chilean navy had nine men of war in the harbor, and among them some torpedo boats. They maneuvered these torpedo boats about the harbor in the most tantalizing fashion, seeing how near they could come to the Yorktown without actually hitting her. This made Evans mad, and he notified the officers of the torpedo boats that if one of them should hit the Yorktown he would shoot him down. To this the Chileans retorted that the harbor was Chilean waters and the Chileans would use it for drilling purposes as they saw fit. And what was the reply of Captain Evans? He called his men to quarters, cleared the decks of the Yorktown for action, loaded every one of his guns for serious business, and then sent out this message to the commanding officer of the Chilean navy: "The Yorktown and the point on her belong to the United States. If either is defaced by one of your boats, hell will smell with garlic."

The tone of this message of the Yorktown indicated the temper of the commander, and the insolence of his men all the liberty that within reason can be given them. He knows Chileans became notably less friendly their life aboard ship is hard enough at best, and for that reason he favors Sunday amusements, and he goes on the theory that all work and no play makes Jack a very dull fellow. Since Admiral Evans has been in command of the fleet the men are given shore leave on Sundays in large numbers and have had the most interesting amusements on Sunday have been in the city. In addition to keeping the men contented, it gives them exercise, and the admiral believes it is better to play ball on Sunday than to put in the day in some neighboring gin mill. Recently, while at Provincetown, Mass., with his fleet, the citizens objected to the Sunday ball playing. The admiral notified them that if they did not care for the Sunday amusements he would take his fleet somewhere else. As the presence of the fleet meant the loss of expenditure of large sums of money, objections immediately ceased.

Another thing about the admiral his men like is his insistence that he shall be fairly treated. It is said that if a sailor while on shore is mistreated or "rough-housed" without having given cause for such treatment, it is an easy matter for a score of husky Chinamen to get shore leave after the incident. This shore leave following such imposition usually winds up in prompt and thorough retaliation for the wrong done the sailor. The "misconduct" of sailors on such occasions is not investigated so thoroughly as are other offenses that are committed under different conditions.

One of the stories of the admiral is told at the time he made his first trip to South American waters as a captain. The ship's men had a pig for a mascot. This animal got lost in the coast of Peru and was given up for dead, but one night the pig was recovered from his threatened death. About 2 o'clock an orderly appeared at the captain's door and handed him an envelope. The envelope had been found. With one of those customary oaths so familiar to the sailors of "Fighting Bob's" fleet, the captain asked who the devil Dennis was. When told that Dennis was the mascot and that he was in a bad way, and the men wanted the captain to come out and see if anything could be done for him, the angry captain, and he went forward where the mascot was being carefully tended by the sailors.

Captain Evans spent the remainder of that night feeding the ship's pig with the spoon and bringing him back to his original activity. The men never forgot that act, and so it goes wherever this old fighter happens to be. He has men who had a cow and was given up for dead, but one night the cow was recovered from his threatened death. About 2 o'clock an orderly appeared at the captain's door and handed him an envelope. The envelope had been found. With one of those customary oaths so familiar to the sailors of "Fighting Bob's" fleet, the captain asked who the devil Dennis was. When told that Dennis was the mascot and that he was in a bad way, and the men wanted the captain to come out and see if anything could be done for him, the angry captain, and he went forward where the mascot was being carefully tended by the sailors.

Nothing Doing. A sophisticated mother who felt responsible for the future of her daughter, Anna, what did young Mr. Jones say to you last night when he was buttoning your glove? I saw he was slightly excited, and he said to me, "Why," answered Anna, "he said that the person who made a glove so hard to button as that deserved to be killed."

"My dear," retorted her mother impressively, "don't waste any more of your time on young Mr. Jones." Philadelphia Ledger.

He Lost Out. "Yes, sir, he was afraid," the banks bustin' on him, an' so he buried his money."

"Has he got it yet?" "No," he forgot to, blame the tree war it was, an' the man who owned the land put up a sign, 'No trespassing on these grounds.'"—Atlanta Constitution.

Notice of Creditors' Meeting. In the district court of the Second judicial district of the territory of New Mexico, sitting for the trial and hearing of causes arising under the constitution and laws of the United States—

In the matter of G. A. Burtner, Bankrupt. In Bankruptcy. To the creditors of G. A. Burtner, of Albuquerque, in the county of Bernalillo, and territory of New Mexico, in the above cause, the said bankrupt was granted leave to correctly set his schedule a certain judgment rendered in Cause No. 6282, entitled, A. G. Stein, plaintiff, vs. G. A. Burtner, defendant, rendered by the district court of Bernalillo, in the state of Kansas, on the 25th day of September, A. D. 1901, at the September term of said court, for the sum of thirteen hundred and seventy ($1,375) dollars, with interest from said date until paid, at the rate of 3 per cent per annum, together with costs of suit, and

Whereas, the undersigned Referee in Bankruptcy was by said court directed to give notice, as required by law, for a hearing thereon, and to all other and further acts required to be done by law, in this respect, and Whereas, the said G. A. Burtner was by said court, heretofore duly adjudged a bankrupt. Therefore, notice is hereby given that a meeting of the creditors will be held at the office of the undersigned Referee in Bankruptcy, in room No. 2, in the Barnett building, on the southeast corner of Central avenue and second street, in the city of Albuquerque, county of Bernalillo, and territory of New Mexico, on the 10th day of December, A. D. 1901, at which time creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting. M. E. HICKER, Referee in Bankruptcy. Albuquerque, N. M., Nov. 23, A. D. 1901.

THANKSGIVING DAY TO BE OBSERVED APPROPRIATELY

Sweet Charity Will Enable Every Family in the City to Give Thanks Tomorrow; the Charity Ball.

If there is any man, woman or child who hasn't reason to be thankful tomorrow, Thanksgiving day, it is not because the charitable people of Albuquerque have not made every effort to find them out and supply their wants. As usual the Non-Sectarian Benevolent society has taken the lead, and under the direction of Mrs. H. H. Ray, whom a speaker at a recent public meeting, characterized as "Albuquerque's Good Angel," has made a systematic canvass of the city with a view to looking after every one. The big charity ball at the Elks hall tomorrow night, under the auspices of the society, gives the general public a fine chance to show its appreciation of the generous work being done by the ladies.

In response to the invitation from the territorial school superintendent, James E. Clark, and city superintendent, W. D. Sterling, the pupils of the public schools, including the school buildings with their donations of provisions, clothes, money and other desirable which will be distributed by four or five big wagons today, to the needy of the city, by the Benevolent Society.

Appropriate exercises will be held in the schools this afternoon as a prelude to the good, old-fashioned festival of gratitude tomorrow.

Albuquerque in general will lay aside the rush of business for a day and give thanks. Albuquerque has more reason to give thanks, all things considered, than ever before in its history.

The sale of turkeys has been a record-breaking one, and Albuquerque will live high today. No one has attempted to make an estimate of the number of pumpkins that will be made today and tomorrow, or the bushels of cranberries which will accompany the drum stick and the wild-bone and other choice portions to their final resting place.

HOW THE MAJOR FIT THE INDIAN'S YEARS AGO

Blood Curdling Story By John L. Cowan of the Last of the Southwestern Pioneers.

The full details of the strenuous career of Major William Henry Harrison Llewellyn, recently resigned as United States attorney for New Mexico, of the story of his single-handed struggle terror to the hearts of the savage Mesquero Redskins and reduced them to a state of awe-struck obedience, how he ran away from home when he was only thirteen (unlucky number); how he fought Crazy Horse and did other things; all this is set forth at some length and somewhat startlingly by John L. Cowan, an about "The Last Southwestern Pioneer," in the current number of the Weekly Northwestern Miller, published at Minneapolis.

Among the other heroes of the pioneer days treated, are of Ellego Baca, how an attorney of this city, whose desperate fight with the eighty-two high in the halls of fame, Alexander Schurz, Molden Hildes, Captain Simpson, of Taos; Oliver Perry Wiggin, Kit Carson and that greatest of picturesque heroes of the wild and woolly southwest, the dauntless Indian fighter and celebrated journalist, Colonel Max Frost, of Santa Fe.

The article is illustrated with various photographs, including a fine likeness of Ellego Baca, of this city. It is written in Mr. Cowan's best style.

Fine Thanksgiving Dinner at The Highland

Everything the Hungriest Could Wish. Fresh and Inviting For Sale At Brand New Grocery of Mr. Conroy.

Thanksgiving day involuntarily brings to the mind tender thoughts of turkey, mince pie, pumpkin pie, cranberry sauce, celery and trimmings. If you want to get the very best of the Thanksgiving substantial and the trimmings, there isn't a place in the city where they may be found fresher, in more variety or better than at Charlie Conroy's attractive brand-new, up-to-date, thoroughly stocked, and cozy inviting Highland Grocery, at the corner of South Arno and Coal avenue. It will fairly make your mouth water even to talk to the Highland store. The place is the place.

The Conroy store has the daintiest and most appetizing array of the finest of delicatessen—fancy groceries and delicacies that you can find in the length and breadth of Albuquerque. And it's the cleanliness and newness and freshness of things that particularly appeals to the purchaser.

mushrooms, cranberries, raisins, grapes and all kinds of dried and evaporated fruits, mince meat, plum pudding, fruit cake, honey, all kinds of salt and canned and dried fish; cured meats, popcorn, coffee and teas and spices, cheese, breakfast foods, bakery products, butter, eggs, and— Well, what's the use of trying to tell everything that Conroy has? Drop in and see. It will open your eyes. The Highland Grocery has them all skinned.

Miss Yola D. Black, who for the past year month has been studying music at the Quincy (Ill.) Conservatory of Music, returned to her home here last evening.

Plans for the new Albuquerque federal building have been received by Postmaster R. W. Hopkins from the supervising architect, James Knew Tyler, of Washington, D. C. The building will be of gray brick with granite facing. The United States court is to occupy the second floor, the postoffice the first floor, and boiler and storage rooms in the basement. Plans will be opened in Washington for the building January 1.

"THE MAYOR OF TOKIO" A HOWLING SUCCESS

Los Angeles Newspapers Have Kind Words for Clever Comic Opera.

Richard Carle's marvellously rich and picturesque production, "The Mayor of Tokio," which comes to Elks theater Monday night, has had remarkably successful engagements thus far this season and the "Mayor" has provided a liberal feast of entertainment in jolly, sparkling music, gorgeous scenery and pretty girls by the dozens. John L. Kearney is said to be a continual joy to his countless admirers. The piece contains many brilliant musical numbers and an oriental atmosphere pervades the play that is both pleasing and restful.

The Los Angeles Herald says of the "Mayor": "The Mayor of Tokio" is elected at the Mason last night by a good majority on an apathetic vote. The play is a clever comedy, with a management that was "in bad" with habitual theater-goers who have not yet forgotten the Vanderbilt "cup" scandal, in which Joseph M. Galtier figured prominently, and a few of whom also had somewhat unpleasant recollections of "Little Johnny Jones." If Mr. Galtier is wise, he will print his name in smaller type when he next sends a company to Los Angeles, for it will be many days before the odor of his gasoline atrocity is completely dispelled.

The mayor, however, is a jovial chap, a good fellow and a capable officer. He is a little bit of a fellow and it is too bad that his razor is sharing sheets with Galtier. However, even that we may forgive him, for he is a good fellow and a capable officer. He is a little bit of a fellow and it is too bad that his razor is sharing sheets with Galtier. However, even that we may forgive him, for he is a good fellow and a capable officer.

Kearney Makes a Hit. Mr. Kearney scored a hit last night of more than ordinary proportions. He is a fairer of good ability and five minutes after his appearance he had the audience so thoroughly convinced that he was a continuous laugh that they didn't stop long enough to figure out just what they were laughing at.

"I bought an cow," said Mr. Kearney, guffaws of laughter from front. He repeated it. More laughter. He said it again. Still more laughter. Then he explained that the dictum was quite proper because "cows" was the cow's name, and the guffaws became roars. At that stage of the proceedings he might have recited the multiplication table and brought down the house with it.

A good second to Kearney in the laugh-making line is Jane Griffith, as Madame Storch. Her name is like her namesake in the songs—she is never the same. Her straight-front is a marvel—the short distance between two points—her make-up and costume constitute a veritable nightmare of feminine unbecomings.

Look Who's Here. The lemmie, the upstart, the conspirators, the sailors, the American heiress and the rest of the crew we know so well are about up to the usual mark. The chorus is beyond all praise. There is a young woman, Sue Winkie on the program, who is cuter than a bug in a rug and several times as "sassy."

The foxyity is of the well known Carleian brand. For instance, Marcus Irlanda Kidder, impresario of an American opera company, has taken the aggregation to Australia, where business was bad and from there has continued into Japan, where the company stands. He refers feelingly to the love of that Australian trip. "Yes," says Mme. Storch, "but it was a long way to go for eggs." "Well, we got em, didn't we?" he retorts. "The one I got was a big one."

Musically the best things in the piece are "Tokio" and "I Like You." The "Black and White Dance" of the second act is a lively number, excellently costumed. The scenery is effective and apparently new.

HOW PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE IS PREPARED

ITS DISTRIBUTION AN INTERESTING OPERATION

Thousands Know Its Contents Many Days Before It Is Sent to Congress, Yet Contents Remain Secret.

(Special Correspondence Morning Journal.)

Washington, Nov. 25.—The preparation and distribution of the president's annual message to congress is an interesting proceeding to the uninitiated. It is an intensely secret document; yet, in its preparation the president is compelled to consult his cabinet officers and subordinate officials frequently, know more of the workings of their important bureau than does the secretary, who presides over the department. General knowledge of the conclusions determined upon by the president is lodged in the minds of many officers before the president has drafted the final text and dressed his message up into its finished shape.

Then the point is reached where hundreds of printers are taken into the confidence of the president and after the message is put into print it goes into the hands of the great press associations for distribution to their members in advance of the day of delivery. Every editor of a daily paper throughout the country from Maine to California, is supplied with a copy several days before the opening session, in order that it may be put into print and that proper editorial comment may be prepared, and such careful and critical comment is possible only after a thorough reading of the document.

So it happens that before the message is read in the two houses of congress its contents are known to thousands of men in whom the president has placed his confidence either because of his personal acquaintance or the integrity of character that is pledged by responsible agents. And to the credit of the newspaper profession be it said that only at rare intervals is this confidence violated by premature publication of the message and this almost invariably has been the result of an accident or misunderstanding and the publication has preceded the delivery only by a matter of a few hours by some afternoon paper.

When the president finally has completed his message the manuscript is sent to the government printing office which, it may be said in passing, is the biggest printing office in the world. The public printer has corps of trusted men who have been in the government employ for years and these men are assigned the duty of putting the secret document into type. The portion of the text handed out to each compositor, however, is so small and each succeeding "take" is so far removed from the context that if a dishonest printer should attempt to utilize the information for any purpose he would be unable to obtain enough to do him any good. When the proofs finally are taken they are sent to the president and the type and all the office proofs are carefully locked up in a big steel vault.

The president frequently revises his message half a dozen times, and every scrap of paper involved in the construction of the document is accounted for. The printing done under the eyes of trusted men and the completed copies sent to the white house. Thousands of copies are printed and each of the three press associations is given a copy for each of the papers it serves. Each copy contains a printed slip announcing that it is supplied under an injunction of secrecy and is not to be used until released by telegraph. These copies are sent out by express to the distributing offices of the news associations and at those centers are transmitted by messenger or by mail to the individual papers. Occasions have been known when at the last minute the president saw fit to make an addition to his message, and in that case this "insert" is telegraphed to the papers.

So, while everybody is wondering what the president will say, the message is in possession of the papers, only awaiting the flash from Washington to let it go out, and this flash is given the moment the executive clerk appears at the bar of the house or senate—which ever place he happens to go first, and usually, the senate—and the presiding officer announces a "message" from the president of the United States. Within a few moments from that time the newsboys are on the streets crying "extras," which in some cases have been printed in advance.

President Roosevelt has extended this practice of sending out early copies of the message, so that his predecessors, even now on the ocean on their way to England for use in the British press. In view of the cable tolls on a document of this sort or even on liberal extracts, which never are satisfactory, this courtesy of the president is greatly appreciated by the British press. Of late years much of what the president has to say on matters that may affect the stock market has been discounted by the men who manipulate stocks, but it is quite probable that influential directors would give a pretty sum to know in advance just what the president will say on the subject of further corporate control and the precise character of currency legislation he will urge upon the coming congress. While these financiers are wondering what Mr. Roosevelt has in store for them, it might be possible for a few here and there who have friendly relations with financial writers to gather some definite ideas from conversations with those writers a day or two before the opening of congress, for an adroit financier might skillfully draw out such a man in conversation and by reading between the lines gather the reflected ideas of the president from the man who had carefully read what the president had prepared. There has been occasion, however, when the text of the message has been on the desks of Wall Street magnates hours before its delivery. Of late years there is a strict accounting for missing copies of the message and as every copy is numbered and the possessor of each copy is known and registered, it would be a comparatively easy task to trace back to the origin of the leak.

In much the same way the government printing office prints the treaties and state department papers relating to confidential relations between this and foreign governments, and the vast amount of executive session business of the senate. The decisions of the supreme court also are printed in advance of their being handed down. Secrecy here is of the most vital importance, as matters of the gravest consequences are dealt with in these opinions of the court of the last resort, and advance information of the findings would be worth hundreds of thousands of dollars in some cases.

The printing of the Congressional Directory may be cited as an illustration of the rapidity with which great pieces of work are turned out by the government printing office. This directory is a book of upwards of three hundred pages, bound in cloth, and is sold on the desks of members of congress and given members of the press entitled to admission to the gallery on noon of the day congress meets. The last of the copy for this directory, as a rule, does not go to the printing office until some time Saturday night. Between that hour and the following Monday at noon the last of the stereotypic plates are made, the press work is done, the sheets folded and the books bound.

MILLIONS OF TONS OF WOOD USED FOR PAPER

Enormous Drain On Forests Necessary to Sustain Country's Supremacy in Amount of Reading Matter.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—More than three and one-half million tons of wood were made into pulp during the last year. Most of this was converted into paper, and of the paper the greater portion was used for printing books and newspapers. The supremacy of the United States in using the greatest amount of reading matter per capita is maintained at the cost of an enormous drain upon the forests.

Yet besides paper, there are a number of other special uses to which great quantities of wood pulp are put. From pulp factories it went to other establishments where it was made into a number of different articles of very different uses. Among these articles is the water pump made of wood fiber, which is now a more familiar sight than the one made of actual wood. In addition to pump, wood pulp is used in the manufacture of buns, dishes, boxes and picture frames. The use of wood pulp for car wheels has long been known, but a new use reported from Germany is that for telegraph poles. Articles of wood pulp have considerable bearing on electrical industries as in the case of conduits and insulators in various forms.

Americans now use wood pulp steam and water pipes, shoe heels, horseshoes, spoons, tool handles, buttons, pulleys, paving blocks and caskets. Paper—of wood pulp—surgeons splints have many advantages over those of other materials, in their lightness, strength and flexibility. Perhaps the most unique use for paper pulp in the laboratory comes here again. Its lightness, strength and flexibility commend it, and in addition it has none of the disadvantages which arise from the use of metallic substances near to sensitized instruments.

Mr. Robert C. Burke, El Paso, N. Y., writes: "Before I started to use Foley's Kidney Cure I had to get up from twelve to twenty times a night, and I was all bloated up with dropsy and my eyesight was so impaired I could scarcely see one of my family across the room. I had given up hope of living, when a friend recommended Foley's Kidney Cure. One 55-cent bottle worked wonders and before I had taken the third bottle the dropsy had gone, as well as all other symptoms of Bright's disease." J. H. O'Reilly Co.

"Bill" Waterman, Apache Indian, who shot and killed Henry Smith, another Apache, last week at the Indian camp near Fort Whipple, was arraigned on the charge of murder in Prescott in the court of Justice McLane, and held without bonds to appear before the next grand jury.

The Falcone marble quarries of Alamo, Arizona, have been taken over by an incorporated company, and will now be worked on a paying commercial basis. At least 75 men will be employed in the quarries. The name of the company is the El Paso-Alamo-gordo Stone company, having a paid up cash capital of $10,000, the stockholders being Orlan Hilberts, Marshall P. Wright, of El Paso, and Charles W. C. Patterson, of Alamo-gordo.

W. D. Tipton has purchased a half interest in 600 acres of land at Tularosa, thirteen water rights and six town lots of Judge A. E. Fox. He previously owned the other half interest and now owns the whole works. This land is an addition on the west end of the town of Tularosa and is considered valuable.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs. The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

CONLEY DENIES HE THREATENED HIS WIFE

Declares Bond Was Simply Renewed and Increase for $500 Was Made Without Objection—District Court Doings.

"I have not seen my former wife for the last five months. The story that my peace bond was increased to $500 because I had threatened her is untrue," said Santa Fe brakeman J. P. Conley, yesterday. "No testimony was taken in the case today and proceedings for the custody of my child are still pending. My bond was simply renewed, and I had no objection to its being raised from $250 to $500. I could easily have given bond for double the amount."

Conley appeared in the district court yesterday, the cost of the proceedings were assessed against the child. His bond was renewed, being changed from $250 to $500 by Judge Abbott. Conley, it will be remembered, was placed under bond to keep the peace on complaint of his divorced wife, Birdie Conley, with whom the former husband has been disputing for some months the custody of the child. Mr. Conley is now living at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Miller, 602 South Arno street. It will be remembered that there was a rather sensational episode some months ago at the Santa Fe station when Conley tried to take the child away from Mr. and Mrs. John Reub, who had just been going to carry the babe to his mother in California. He applied for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that the child was being taken from the jurisdiction of the court. The matter was temporarily adjourned and the custody of the child is still pending.

Marcellina Crespin, placed under a peace bond by Justice Craig, appeared before Judge Abbott yesterday and waived a jury trial. He consented to a trial by the court.

The peace bonds placed upon the following men were dismissed by the court: Jose Lopez y Ruiz, Joe Mesdill, Vito Matranga, Felix Mesdill, Carlota Le de Lucero, Antonina Aragon, Nestor Vadil, Manuelita Nuanes de Chaves.

Arguments in the suit of Gregoria Gutierrez versus Romaldo Gallegos, an action to quiet title were heard in district court chambers yesterday afternoon. W. C. Hancock is attorney for the plaintiff, while Judge B. F. Adams is attorney for the defendant. Judge Abbott deferred his decision. The property in dispute is situated in the Chilli land grant.

A divorce was granted and a suit for divorce filed in the district court yesterday. Teresa Delosery was divorced from Joseph Delosery upon the ground of non support. The action was filed in McKinley county. The plaintiff was given the custody of three minor sons.

Abandonment and desertion are the grounds upon which Frank W. Bemis seeks to be separated from Jennie S. Bemis. Felix H. Lester is attorney for Bemis.

AN HONORABLE COURSE.

Aside from all party, partisan or factional considerations, Mr. Fall is pursuing a high-toned, honorable course in withdrawing from the attorney-generalship of the territory. Whatever else may be said of or for Mr. Fall, no one is ignorant of the fact that he is a "big" lawyer, in the sense in which that term is commonly used, and is able to command big fees in big cases. And it is also well known that in the present disturbed condition of affairs in this territory the position of attorney general would be likely to cause him at many times the loss of fees much greater than his salary, and at other times make it necessary for him to turn over to some other person, temporarily, the duties of the office. While all this would not be dishonorable on his part, it would certainly not be profitable to him nor satisfactory to the territory. He knows this and he knows, also, that owing to his peculiar personal relations to Governor Curry it would not be fair to make the governor take the initiative in the matter. For these reasons he is entitled to much credit for pursuing, as we have said, a high-toned, honorable course in the matter, and one that will cause him to stand higher in the estimation of the people of New Mexico.

But in what violent contrast to the gentlemanly course taken by Mr. Fall, is the narrow and ungracious policy being pursued by Mr. Bursum, in holding on to the chairmanship of the republican territorial committee, when he knows, or at least has the most ample opportunity to know, that such a course on his part, renders the defeat of the republican party in the territory at the next election absolutely certain.

But we do not regard Mr. Bursum as a man who is bad, in himself, he is simply weak, and hasn't force of character enough to rise to the fact that he is being used by bad and designing men to carry out their personal ends at the expense of the republican party. He is merely permitting himself to be made a tool of by dishonest men who will be the first to kick him down when they have no further use for him.

The present object of the men who are using him seems to be to have him manipulate the party machinery in such a way as to enable them to force themselves on the party as the delegates from the territory to the national republican convention, and thus enable them to pose as the elect, while the great majority of the republicans of the territory can be denounced by them as "merely kickers," not worthy to be considered.

And immediately after that end is accomplished the wheels of the party machine are to be greased and set in motion to pack a convention that will force Bull Andrews on the republican party of the territory again as the candidate for delegate. Not satisfied with the disgrace which has already been brought upon New Mexico by being represented for four years at the national capital by a man with such a national reputation, he is to be forced upon the party as its candidate for the third time.

Both of these schemes may succeed. The party machine has such a very great advantage over the organized opposition that it can organize a convention in almost any manner it chooses, and then do what it pleases with its own convention, trusting to the party whip to make the "kickers" come under the yoke. But when the voters of the territory come to deal with this program at the polls they will cause the eyes of the territory and of the whole country to be very rapidly opened to the fact that the republican party of New Mexico has not yet become the mere plaything of a band of corruptionists and public plunderers. If Mr. Bursum's head could be pierced by a few rays of political sagacity, or even ordinary discretion, he would stand firm under.

IT MAKES A DIFFERENCE.

Our esteemed contemporary at the territorial capital, which an impious public irreverently calls "The Almanac," believes that the Morning Journal is not a republican paper, and the Morning Journal knows that its Santa Fe contemporary is not a republican paper. And all that comes to pass by reason of the fact that we don't use the same dictionary. According to the dictionary used by our Santa Fe neighbor, a republican paper is one that pays no attention to the principles of the republican party, but devotes all its energies to the securing of a good place at the pie counter, and when a party boss cracks his whip it bends the pregnant hinges of the knee and crawls in the dirt for pie. Whereas, the dictionary we use in this office tells us that a republican paper is one that loyally supports the principles of the republican party, and when a corrupt boss, who has stolen the liver of the party to serve the devil in, cracks his whip, it politely invites him to go where the weather is said to be warmer than it promises to be in New Mexico this winter.

There is a difference with a distinction, and acting upon the definition given by our own dictionary, the Morning Journal continues to dish up sound republican doctrine to the people all over New Mexico, seven days in every week, notwithstanding the Sunday law.

THE POSTAL SAVINGS BANK.

The one-year fifty-dollar certificates at 2 per cent—practically short time United States bonds of small denomination—are being so rapidly seized upon by the people all over the country that the case furnishes one of the very strongest arguments that could be advanced in favor of the proposed postal savings bank. There is, of course, no necessity for the calling of any witnesses to establish the fact of the great popular demand for a government savings bank; that point is already settled beyond question—but the additional testimony furnished by the popular demand for these certificates shows that this demand is so imperative that congress will hardly dare to ignore it any longer.

The impelling purpose behind the demand for these certificates is the desire of the people to put in some safe place where it will draw a little interest, the money they have been hoarding at home, because of their lack of confidence in the banks, and the purpose behind the issue was directly in line with this—that is, it was to give the people a chance to dispose of their money in a way that they knew would be absolutely safe, and at the same time let it get into circulation, to relieve the general embarrassment. And the postal savings bank will do both.

AS AN OBJECT LESSON.

Postmaster General Meyer is encountering many obstacles in his campaign to establish the parcels post in connection with the postoffice department, and even the president, who must have been consulted at the beginning, has not given enthusiastic endorsement to the scheme. The most recent blow was the action of the National Hardware association, in session at Atlantic City, which declared that the parcels post would be a menace to 250,000 retail merchants throughout the United States. But Postmaster General Meyer has continued undismayed in trying to convert the business world to his scheme. As a valuable first step toward the complete materialization of his idea, the postmaster general might trim down his plan so as to make it operate only on the rural delivery routes centering at the office of mailing; that is, assuming that the Albuquerque postoffice had the rural delivery service, let the law provide that a package mailed here might be delivered for a nominal charge, at any point on any of the rural routes starting from this postoffice. Of course, that would only accommodate the people living within the areas served by offices having the rural delivery service, and would only benefit the merchants of that one town, but it would be highly valuable as an object lesson, and the people of that district would be so greatly accommodated by it that public sentiment would soon demand its extension to the whole country.

It is reported that King Edward carries with him a tiny photographic camera, which is attached to his watch-chain, and that while pretending to chat with this he snaps the various personages and officials who are presented from time to time. The films, which are almost microscopic, are given to an expert photographer, who enlarges them. The temptation to take a picture of a well known statesman or a court official is sometimes too great to be resisted, and the collection which his majesty owns is unique.

The building department of New York has just finished counting the lofty buildings in the city; 549 of them have been erected since 1890. Including the Metropolitan Life building, which is not finished, the census of high buildings is: One of 45 stories, one of 41, two of 38, three of 35, two of 34, four of 32, nine of 26, two of 19, nine of 18, two of 17, nineteen of 16, nineteen of 15, eighteen of 14, thirteen of 13, 169 of 12, 181 of 11, 164 of 10.

Good authorities give the average duration of human life as about thirty-three years. One-quarter of the people of the earth die before the age of six, one-half before the age of sixteen, and only about one person of each one hundred born lives to the age of sixty-five.

Andrew Carnegie thinks this country needs more negroes. And the Record-Herald thinks if the lack of negroes is all that Andrew has to worry about he may as well cheer up. The colored folks are not drifting very rapidly toward race suicide.

PROBABLY the Mayor still refuses to talk to the special agents.

THE LLEWELLYN family is now enjoying a grand lemonade picnic.

IF THE MORNING Journal means the United States attorney, let us know wherein he or any of his assistants has failed in the proper performance of the duties of that office.

THE UNIVERSITY of Arizona has been in the throes of a fight between the college men and the pros. The latter are attempting to violate all tradition and wear corduroy trousers in defiance of the upper class men. It is hoped the college are not mixed up in this disgraceful dispute.

"THAT FELLOW McHarg has been successful only in creating a disturbance, not one of his charges having been substantiated when gone into by the courts."—Carlsbad Argus.

Now it's queer that you forget the case of Alarid and rigors jury fixers. The court really seems to have substantiated at least ONE charge. What a poor memory you have, Mr. Bursum.

"THE KING of tax dodgers and sharpers in the Duke City gets out of paying taxes whenever it possibly can, through its organ, the Albuquerque morning sheet."—The Almanac.

Dear, dear—tax dodgers! Could you, by the way, recall the name of the gentleman who testified that the witness stand in Santa Fe that he had rented his "prestige and standing" to a corporation to help it dodge its taxes?

THERE is too much swaggering and too much braggadocio on the part of certain federal agents whose duty it is to investigate matters referred to them fairly and carefully and who should not at all rush into public print, try cases on street corners and in the saloons and endeavor to prejudice the public mind in such matters.—The Almanac.

"SOLICITOR General Henry M. Hoyt, of the department of justice, is to visit this city, to look into the territorial affairs and to examine court conditions and legal matters. This is the first time that so important an official has undertaken such a mission in New Mexico, is evidently 'some pumpkins' in the national capital. These Rough Riders will be heard."—The Almanac.

THE EDITOR of the Moriarty Messenger really ought to be restrained. In the last issue of that sprightly newspaper he burst irrepressibly into the following ebullition: "When asked for a kiss the girl of Moriarty will giggle a bit and pick at the edge of her fan, and beat a tattoo with her neat little shoe, and answer, 'That's just like a man.' And when the assault on her peach-blossom lips she has most courageously braved, she'll rub at her chin and exclaim with a grin: 'Great Godfrey! Why don't you get shaved?'"

WISTFUL WILLIAM and Sauntering Samuel were resting by the roadside when William broke the silence by remarking:

"I was just a thinkin', Sam, as how I'm about the only Rough Rider that ain't took care of the colonel's fixed all the rest of 'em, I guess."

After an interval of silent cogitation Samuel remarked: "I say, Bill, I read in that newspaper that you and the woman wrapped around that last hand-out that the surgeon-general was dead."

"Well," said Bill, "what's that got to do with it?"

"Why, a whole lot," says Sam. "Why don't you strike the colonel for the job?"

My exclaimed Bill, "Why, I ain't no doctor; I wouldn't know whether to cut off a man's leg or his head."

"Of course, I know you're not," said Sam, "but watch-in'-it's that got to do with it? Ain't you a Rough Rider, and didn't the colonel make a district attorney out of the major?"

What the Editors of the Southwest Are Saying

A Superheated Bunch.
The Carlsbad Argus rightfully hands a warm bunch to the Santa Fe railroad by enumerating a long list of cattlemen, who are compelled to turn gathered stock loose on account of inability to ship thousands of dollars' worth are withheld from the Pecos valley, and much individual loss imposed. However, Carlsbad is not alone in this matter, for practically every shipping point on this division is suffering from the same condition.

fering from the same condition, and it has contributed to no small degree in the prevailing financial depression. The worst thing about the matter is that there does not seem to be any available remedy. It is something of a relief to know that the railroad, but that doesn't make the law to carry, and from long experience we know that the railroad doesn't care what the people think about it.—Roswell Register Tribune.

Should Have a Clean Sweep.
Quay county, N. M., has three broom factories disposing of the home grown product, and Roosevelt county has twelve banks conserving the made wealth. These things are the product of three years' growth with no start at all. New Mexico deserves staidness as a matter of common justice and decency, and when the appeal is made to the American people on these elemental grounds, the right thing will be done.—El Paso Herald.

A Misrepresented Pancher.
That yarn about an Arizona cowboy holding up people in Chicago for a joke, and not knowing that it was against the law to carry, played in Chicago, is a libel both on Arizona and Arizona cowboys. It is the publication of such rot which makes eastern people think that Arizona is a semi-civilized country.—Prescott Courier.

Marrying Some.
Lillian Russell may know what she is talking about when she says that nine out of ten marriages are unhappy, but we believe that any one who has to marry so often to find happiness must be afflicted with the disease like a cross-eyed saw.—Tucson Citizen.

slake.
The man who has an intimate personal acquaintance every day in the year with the condition diagnosed as financial stringency, cannot for the life of him understand why so much fuss is made when the disease breaks out in Wall street.—Phoenix Republican.

This Is Interesting.
Dispatches from Washington the first of the week said that President Roosevelt had dismissed certain charges against Major Llewellyn, and indicated that he would have no more of them, and dispatches a day or two later from the same source asserted that the prospects were bright for the passage of an enabling act for New Mexico during the first three months of the sixteenth congress. Grief and more grief for the Albuquerque Morning Journal.—Socorro Chieftain.

A "Little Ways."
The railroad trip from Santa Fe, the capital of New Mexico, to Artec, in San Juan county, just a "little ways" to the westward, consumes three days and two nights, and requires a detour into Colorado. The sheriff is taking a prisoner from Santa Fe to Artec for trial on a charge of venue, and he chooses to drive 150 miles over the mountains to taking the long railroad detour. Yet there are people in Washington who maintained that New Mexico was only half as large as it ought to be.—El Paso Herald.

AS OTHERS THINK.
Everyone in Albuquerque Has a Right to His Own Opinion.

While everyone has a right to his own opinion, yet it is wise to always consider what others think and profit by their experience.

Nothing makes life so miserable, or interferes so widely with the usefulness of the average American, as indigestion, and it is well for us to give fair consideration to what others think about this remarkable affliction.

J. H. O'Reilly & Co. are positive that in Mi-na stomach tablets they have an absolute cure for indigestion and the many disagreeable symptoms that follow this disease, such as distress after eating, coated tongue, bad taste in the mouth, distention, flatulence, nervousness and debility.

Their action in settling Mi-na on a guarantee to refund the money unless it cures, shows plainly their belief in the value of this remedy. They take all the risk, and there will be no charge whatever for Mi-na unless you are satisfied that it has relieved you of indigestion.

Mi-na wakes up the stomach muscles and strengthens them so that they take care of all the food you eat in a natural, healthy way, without pain or distress after meals.

It costs but 30 cents a box, and does more real good than a dozen boxes of the ordinary digestive tablets. The absolute, unqualified guarantee of J. H. O'Reilly & Co. shows their faith in the value of Mi-na.

The Belen Town and Improvement Company

(Incorporated)

Are the owners of the Belen Townsite, consisting of 1000 business and residence lots, size 25x142 feet, fronting upon eighty and ninety-foot streets and avenues, right in the business center of the new city and directly upon the Santa Fe Railway depot grounds. The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company is now grading its extensive depot grounds and yard limits 800 feet wide and a mile long (capacity of seventy miles of side track) to accommodate its immense passenger and freight traffic, Harvey eating house, roundhouse, coal chutes, water tanks, machine shops, etc.

THE CITY OF BELEN

Has a population of 1500, and several large Mercantile Houses, the Belen Patent Roller Mills with its 150 barrels a day capacity, winery, etc. It is the largest shipping point for Flour, Wool, Wheat, Wine, Beans, Hay and Fruit in New Mexico. From its location upon the great trunk line leading north, south, east and west, to all points in the United States and Mexico its future growth as a commercial point can not be estimated. All fast limited, mail, express and freight trains will pass through Belen to Chicago, Kansas City, Galveston and the Pacific Coast. The water is good and the climate unsurpassed. Belen has a $16,000 public school house, two churches, a Commercial Club, three hotels, restaurants, etc. It needs right now a good up-to-date newspaper and a good hotel. The lots offered are low in prices and the terms are easy. One-third of purchase money cash, two-thirds may remain on note and mortgage for one year with interest at 8 per cent per annum. ## 63,000 ACRES TO BE PLACED ON THE MARKET

Cubra Springs Grant Near Cuervo to Be Opened Up Soon—Something About the Thriving Town of Cuervo.

(Special Correspondence Morning Journal.)
Cuervo, N. M., Nov. 25.—Cuervo's dormant prospects are made more flattering by the announcement that the Cubra Springs grant of some 63,000 acres is to be opened up and put on the market in the near future.
This tract contains some of the finest agricultural and grazing land in eastern New Mexico. It is all patented land and the opening of the tract will do much to bring in more settlers to this locality.

Cuervo, forty miles west of Tucumancari and 250 from El Paso, on the main line of the Rock Island, with 250 population, is a town of great possibilities, as is demonstrated by the fact that half of the population has farmers already located hereabouts who have raised splendid crops during the past year, corn and vegetables especially showing up well. A big acreage of winter wheat has been sown.
Cuervo is surrounded by deposits of the finest building stone; lime can be made on the spot and there is an abundance of good sand. Consequently it is easier and cheaper to build a substantial home here than in many places.

A. A. Jones and J. H. Hicks have been experimenting with dry farming here with the very best results. Their success has had the effect of causing many others to test the system here.
The town now has a well with an abundant supply of the purest water and a plan is on foot for a city waterworks system, the water to be brought from the hills by gravity.

The owners of the Cuervo townsite are J. L. Taylor, a well known stockman; Mr. Weist, merchant; and Al Lone, son of Judge E. V. Lone, the well known Las Vegas attorney. Mr.
Lone is an all-round hustler, being United States commissioner, insurance agent, owner of a livery barn and of a bunch of 6,000 fine sheep.

Bond and Weist have a large wholesale and retail store here under the personal management of Mr. Weist, resident partner and a thoroughly up-to-date business man. Postmaster S.

P. Morrison runs a retail general merchandise store. Mrs. Kelly manages the comfortable Cuervo hotel, just across from the station and the hostel is a popular one. H. M. Brown is proprietor of a big lumber yard.
Among those who own property in the town are Gross Kelly and company, of Las Vegas.

J. M. Longfellow, manager of the Cuervo company, is pushing the sale of lots and there is quite a boom at present in Cuervo real estate. It could not be otherwise, as the place is most favorably situated in the midst of a splendid farming country and is bound to grow.

SCARLET FEVER SCARE OVER AT ESTANCIA

Schools Ordered to Resume—
Santa Fe Central Shops Lay
Off Men—Plans For the Big Rabbit Shoot.

(Special Correspondence Morning Journal.)
Estancia, N. M., Nov. 25.—No further cases of scarlet fever appearing lately the public school is ordered by the directors to resume work on Monday, Nov. 25. Three families have suffered, but only one death occurred.
The Santa Fe Central paymaster is two weeks behind payday, said to be owing to the money stringency. The management is also laying off shop hands, presumably for the same reason.

A big rabbit shoot is to be pulled off
Thursday and Friday, the 28th and 29th, in which it is proposed for 200 men with guns to sweep the valley from Moriarty to Willard. Free coffee is furnished, cartridges at cost, and transportation for bedding furnished.

A snowfall of perhaps 20 inches in all occurred last week, and is melting rapidly. It will put a great deal of moisture into the ground.
The Torrance County Leader people have installed a gasoline engine to run their presses.
The Santa Fe Central shops have an engine rigged with snow plow ready for a time when the snow may lie just a little deeper.

LOSES $8000 FOR NEGLECTING THE MAIL

Santa Fe Gets It in Neck For Failure to Fulfill Contract in the Pecos Valley.

(Special Correspondence Morning Journal.)
Roswell, N. M., Nov. 25.—The Pecos valley lines of Santa Fe have lost some $8,000 for failure to fulfill mail contracts with the government in the Pecos valley. Being short of equipment the company would fail to send the mail car to points south of Roswell until twenty-four hours late. The matter was finally reported to the postoffice department and investigation showed that trains had been thus annulled twenty-one times. Forfeiture of pay for every trip amounted to $5,000. The company is believed to have provided by the rather costly lesson and better service is expected in the valley.

Lake Arthur Has a Kick.
Lake Arthur, south of here, is registering a vigorous kick on the lack of coal in that locality, the scarcity being largely to confusion by the railroad company and negligence. Fifteen cars of coal, some of it shipped two months ago, have never arrived. Ten well drilling outfits have been forced to shut down on account of lack of coal and the country is suffering from the Santa Fe company's negligence.

Clovis, New Mexico, is the New Santa Fe Division Townsite, Situated Nine Miles West of Texico, New Mexico, on the Belen Cut-Off

The surface of the land on which the townsite is located is level. Clovis is situated in the best portion of the level plains country and is in the center of the best dry farming and stock raising section of Eastern New Mexico. All this land is settled upon by homesteaders who are improving their land. The Santa Fe Land Improvement Company have 213,000 acres of railroad scrip land, commencing five miles north of Clovis, New Mexico, which is considered the finest farming land in Eastern New Mexico. This land will shortly be open to homesteaders and sold in small tracts on terms to suit purchaser. The country around Clovis, New Mexico, will command trade for fifty miles to the north, thirty miles to the east, twenty miles to the south and twenty-eight miles to the west. There is a settler on every 160 acres, which assures its future rapid growth and permanency. Clovis is on the main transcontinental line of the Santa Fe which is called in this territory, the Eastern Railway of New Mexico, or the Belen Cut-off. Clovis will be the division for the main line of the Santa Fe, the Pecos Valley line and the Brownwood Extension, thus making it a Division Point for three distinct lines of the Santa Fe System.

The Pecos Valley tracks will be taken up between Texico, New Mexico, and Cameo, New Mexico, and be moved west eight miles to make Clovis the northern division point of the Pecos Valley line. The Brownwood Extension will be run out of Clovis which will give a through line from California to Galveston, Texas. The Railroad Company has retained 320 acres for railroad purposes and there are extensive machine and car shops being erected at Clovis. Clovis will be the first division point west of Amarillo, Texas, and the Santa Fe have just completed a twenty-one stall concrete roundhouse, graded miles of siding and yards, are erecting a $30,000 concrete two-story depot and a $62,000 two-story Harvey hotel and $40,000 three-story recreation building for railroad employees. The recreation building will have a standard library, pool and billiard halls, swimming pool, auditorium and living rooms for railroad employees. All these buildings are of solid concrete and the latest style of mission architecture. The Company is drilling ten large wells to secure all the water that will be required for railroad purposes, the supply being inexhaustible. The Railroad Company will erect a one-hundred ton ice plant for icing refrigerator and passenger cars.

The concrete coal chutes, costing $42,000, are half completed and are the largest west of the Mississippi river. There are numerous other railroad improvements to be started, but the engineers' reports have not been completed and we cannot give data on the same. As soon as the Belen Cut-off and connecting lines of Clovis are completed, the Company will put all of its extra California fast passenger, freight and perishable fruit traffic on this line, which will be the shortest between Chicago and Southern California and Galveston, Texas, and New Orleans, Louisiana, and Southern California. It will also carry all the Pacific and Oriental mail which is now being largely handled by the Rock Island and Southern Pacific.

Clovis has two national banks with $25,000 and $35,000 capital, respectively. There is a water, electric light and ice company located in Clovis, owned and controlled by rail-road officials, with equipment now in operation. A complete telephone system is in operation connecting with all adjacent towns and the long distance lines. There are thirty-five business houses, six hotels and rooming houses, four lumber yards, three livery stables, cold storage and other buildings already erected. Clovis has nearly eleven hundred population, is four months old and growing very fast. If you are looking for a business location or a new town for investments, look the situation over at Clovis. The lots being offered for sale are all residence lots and can be purchased at from $70 to $90 per lot, one-half down, the balance in six months at 8 per cent interest. On all sales over $500 10 per cent discount is allowed. On all cash sales, 10 per cent discount allowed. Clovis will make a city of ten thousand in a few years. This is the best proposition ever offered in New Mexico for small investors and now is the time to purchase these lots, as the prices will double within six months' time.
