WHAT WE MAY EXPECT.

The New York World prints a copyrighted report of an interview between a staff correspondent of that paper, and the president-elect, setting forth the policy of the new administration, and as the article was submitted to Mr. Taft, and revised by him before publication, it may be accepted as perfectly authentic. The writer says:

Mr. Taft was "on the road" in the campaign forty-one days, and spoke from seven to eighteen times a day, with the exception of Sundays, in all making 415 speeches. When all was over I asked him if he would not tell the people through the World, concretely what they might expect if he became president. He consented to do so, and what he said I prepared, and then submitted it to him for revision. As it came from his hands, here is the statement of the next president of his purposes:

"A republican victory means primarily that the Roosevelt administration is approved by the American people. In the enormous business development of the last twelve years there have been corporate abuses, invasions of great corporations, among the railroads, and invasions of financial trusts. There came among the people a moral awakening, a quickening of the public conscience, and the exponent of that feeling, the man who led public opinion and who guided its expression, was Theodore Roosevelt. He asked congress to help him with needed legislation, and it did, and in a few short years there have been taken to stamp out those abuses—a change has come over our great business, corporations and railroads that it is hard to overstate.

"There is more to be done. Along this line, not so much in the way of originating correctional legislation, but in the path has been laid—but in the development of machinery for the efficient enforcement of measures now on the statute books, and some legislation making more certain the exact and prompt discovery of corporate evils and their prompt and just correction and punishment.

"Great corporations—all them trusts, if that is the popular term—when conducted within the law are a considerable part of the force that makes for the prosperity of the country. I am in favor of combinations of capital, just as I am in favor of combinations of labor, when those combinations are rightly conducted. I would not more think of destroying a corporation to cure evils that it might contain than a physician would think of cutting off a man's head to cure a cold in that particular part of his body. But I would cure the evil, and the earlier all combinations of wealth understand that under a republican administration this will be held strictly accountable to the law, the earlier will business conditions get on a basis that will be a solid foundation for the building of a new prosperity.

"I intend to carry out to the best of my ability the Roosevelt policies that work for the correction of evils to business without ruining the business itself, on which the livelihood and happiness of millions of men and women now depend. I have not furnished the capital spent.

"My record in labor, my attitude toward labor, were misrepresented from the beginning of the campaign. I believe that I convinced the intelligent labor men of the country that I had been misrepresented, I proved to them that, far from being an enemy of the workingman, I was not only his friend, as long as he conducted himself within the law, but that further, with on the bench, in an opinion, I laid the foundation for the prospering and effective labor union as it is constituted today.

"A feat was expected at the close of the campaign that Mr. Compere should be able to make me understand labor generally, and that in case of an election later would be either a poor antagonized actively or passively. I have been as a President Roosevelt in the last four years, adding him to the legislative reminder that he could recommend in the aid of labor. He has honored me by consulting me every time, and I want to say that the opposition of Mr. Compere and the other labor leaders will not turn me aside the slightest from the purpose I have to continue the course of President Roosevelt's administration in doing everything possible to put labor on an equality with capital and to give labor an equality of opportunity in the negotiations between them, to give labor that which we like to believe belongs to every American citizen—equality of opportunity, but no particular privilege.

"I believe in the revision of the tariff, and shall do what I can within the jurisdiction of the executive office to bring it about. Two years ago at Bath, Me., in a public speech, I announced that the time had come for revision, but the republican leaders did not all agree with me then. The republican party is pledged now to give a thorough and genuine re-examination and revision of the tariff, but it has specified exactly the plan it proposes to pursue. It will take the difference between the cost of production here and the cost of production abroad in the making of any product, whether of the farm, the factory, the mine, and it will impose a customs duty equal to that difference in the cost of production. That cost of production is made up of at least of three elements—the cost of material, the cost of labor and the manufacturer's profit of interest on capital. Taking that difference, you have the measure by which the republican party has pledged itself to revise the tariff. In other words, it has pledged itself to protect every industry and to give every industry that needs protection the same measure of it.

"The next congress will be called in extra session by me immediately after the adjournment of the present congress, to carry out the party's pledge. I shall exercise all the legitimate influence that a president or the head of the republican party can exercise to see to it that the pledged faith of the party on this subject in letter and in spirit is observed.

"Corporate interests in times past have attempted to block the progress of the party where their own selfish interests were threatened; but, as shown in the most inspection bill, the pure food bill and the rate bill, which I have given my opinion in a statement of the party on this subject in letter and in spirit is observed.

"The election of a republican president and a republican congress disposes of the democratic plan to guarantee deposits in national banks. I believe that the next congress will pass the bill providing for postal savings banks. Objection has been made that this is paternalism and socialism and is interfering with the government into the banking business. The answer to this is this: Where a general service to the public can not be well discharged by private enterprise, and can be very effectively and economically discharged by the government, the government should undertake it. The postal savings bank comes exactly within this principle. If there were savings banks in all the country as numerous and easy of access as they are in Massachusetts, in the New England states, and in New York, it might be said that the postal savings bank would be an invasion of territory properly occupied by private enterprise. But when it is considered that in only eleven of the states are there savings bank facilities, it is seen that private enterprise does not supply the need. We should not deny to the people of thirty-five states opportunity to make small deposits, with the security of the government, promise to pay principal and interest.

"I am very, very glad that I took that trip into the south. It was not taken with the idea that I would get a lot of the electoral votes this year, but I wanted to express personally to the southern people my interest in them and their welfare, and to urge them to abandon tradition, and take their proper place in the affairs of government. It is not natural or right, as I told them, that those who oppose the governing party should have the voice in government of those who have supported it, but so far as I am able I shall promote the interests of the south as well as of the north, the east and the west. There should be no sectional lines in this nation, and I hope that four years hence the men of the south who really believe in the principles of the republican party will have the courage to depart from the traditions that have led them to support democracy, and that the solid south will be broken in several places.

"I believe thoroughly that the return of the republican party to power will mean the immediate removal of prosperity, and I can picture to me the happiness of millions of men and women who have not furnished the capital spent.

"My record in labor, my attitude toward labor, were misrepresented from the beginning of the campaign. I believe that I convinced the intelligent labor men of the country that I had been misrepresented, I proved to them that, far from being an enemy of the workingman, I was not only his friend, as long as he conducted himself within the law, but that further, with on the bench, in an opinion, I laid the foundation for the prospering and effective labor union as it is constituted today.

"A feat was expected at the close of the campaign that Mr. Compere should be able to make me understand labor generally, and that in case of an election later would be either a poor antagonized actively or passively. I have been as a President Roosevelt in the last four years, adding him to the legislative reminder that he could recommend in the aid of labor. He has honored me by consulting me every time, and I want to say that the opposition of Mr. Compere and the other labor leaders will not turn me aside the slightest from the purpose I have to continue the course of President Roosevelt's administration in doing everything possible to put labor on an equality with capital and to give labor an equality of opportunity in the negotiations between them, to give labor that which we like to believe belongs to every American citizen—equality of opportunity, but no particular privilege.

that have to be attended to, during that short period, that there will be no time left to give to such a big work as tariff revision.

In addition to this, there are several other good reasons why the present congress will not undertake the work, and they are very clearly stated by the Washington man when it says: "The talk about tariff revision the coming winter affords against several propositions. (1) This congress has no mandate on the subject, and a number of its members are going out of commission March 4. They have just been defeated at the polls. (2) Mr. Roosevelt could not very well make a recommendation without in effect criticizing himself. He has tried with the tariff ever since he has been in office. He promised on one occasion a message adding revision, but canceled the promise after his general message was printed. (3) There would not be time enough for the work. The fall time of the session will be required for routine business. The rapidly little should never be rushed.

The back on every account, is for the next congress, and at a special session. That was originally decreed at the late session. At Chicago tariff revision was promised in set terms, and the republican campaign was to be based upon the promise. So that Judge Taft was elected President and a new house chosen with revision as a feature of the program. And, for that matter, Judge Taft was committed to revision before his nomination. Two years ago in several speeches he advocated a reduction of tariff duties where they were too high.

Business interests are not at all disturbed, and need not be at the present. The recent poll has assured the whole business world. An upward bound is already discernible, sound money will remain sound, and protection will continue to provide at the custom houses. Readjustments, here and there will be necessary, but none of a radical character. The speaker that haunted the scene in 1892-4 does not and will not appear now. The leaders among the men who will prepare the new law participated in the preparation of the bill. Instructed as they are to lower duties to conform to these times, they will have a large knowledge of the subject to draw upon, and should have no great trouble in obeying orders.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

In its recent decision of the celebrated Bona College case, the United States supreme court has settled the status of white and negro pupils before the law. The interest in this decision, which holds that a segregation of the races is lawful, is widespread, and many have been affected by it. It will help to solve some of the vexing problems that have come up in many of the states where the race question is an issue.

The court seems to have decided what the law is, and the fundamental principle, under the organic law of the nation, of state statutes prohibiting the segregation of white and colored students. It fairly reveals saying that it is not unusual for the courts to limit themselves rigidly to the facts before them and ignore questions that are not necessarily involved in a legal sense in the controversy to be adjudicated. And in this case the court has waived the great mass of detail involved in the controversy and simply decided the case on the ground of public welfare, holding that the segregation of white and black school children, under the law of the state, is in the maintenance of peace. This is an opinion that can be understood and accepted in by the people of both races who have the interest of all at heart. Negro educators are almost a unit in the belief that segregation is an evil for negroes as for white school children. The separation of the races, in some states, at least, will undoubtedly be a great evil, although all should have equal opportunities for the accomplishment of a liberal education.

VERY DIFFERENT METHODS.

There is little doubt that Mr. Roosevelt would be happy as a United States senator from New York, if he were being asked to accept it, and this position may be open to him through the resignation of Senator Platt. The officials of the Tucson Building and Loan association are investigating a serious shortage in the accounts of Secretary John A. Black. It is alleged the company is now nearly $25,000 in debt.

Las Vegas reports a phenomenal increase in railroad business east and west, which the republicans of course are crediting to the result of the election.

Tif. Las Vegas Optic editorialized with a strong anti-Andrews editorial declaring against any further honors for the delegate from the republican party.

C. H. Akers, editor of the Arizona Gazette, of Phoenix, and president of the Maricopa Commercial club, said in an interview in El Paso the other day that Arizona and New Mexico are both certain to be admitted to the union within six months. He further asserted that statehood would release Arizona from bondage to the express companies, railroads and other corporations.

INTELLIGENT FARMING.

The New York Evening Post discusses with very good reason from these assertions of a contemporary. "All the science there is about farming can be easily acquired by the young man as he grows up with the farm, and assimilated with the practice of agriculture." The Post shows that among post-ill-fortured orchards there will be an occasional exception because the farmer has assimilated science with practice not by toiling round in a "natural occupation," but by close study and application, and it goes on to say that "the common assumption that any boy born and bred on a farm is a natural farmer has been one of the most potent influences in driving from the farm the very class of boys who might make the most enterprising and successful farmers." Bright boys capable of succeeding in commercial and industrial life, often leave the farm simply because they see no practicable way to roll it out of the rut of "inhibition" with the practice of agriculture.

These young fellows need employment for their minds as well as for their muscles, and they undertake farming because the men about them move along according to custom and seldom have new ideas. Ultimately they seek the excitement and distraction of the city from sheer weariness over the monotony of their lives, and in the hope of making a dazzling success and becoming prominent citizens. Nevertheless, the fact remains that few occupations in the city require anything like the intellectual application that is required for scientific farming and that is more especially true of those sections of the country like New Mexico, in which farming has to be done by irrigation.

One can not read the personal reminiscences of John D. Rockefeller, which are running in The World's Work, without forming the opinion that he must be a pretty likable sort of an old chap, regardless of the countless evil things he has been indirectly accused of doing in the past. He has played in building up the Standard Oil company to its gigantic proportions—Topeka Journal.

According to the story told by New York retail tobacco dealers there are 5,000 more cigars being smoked daily in the metropolis than there were six months ago. They say that this is one of the signs of prosperity's return—on the principle, we suppose, that "where there is so much smoke there must be some fire."

Some of our Highland fellow citizens give a hint of their position on the vexed question when they tell us that "water will run down hill." And the same degree of superior sagacity ought to keep such persons in mind of the fact that typhoid fever "will run up hill."

An Albuquerque man, temporarily out of town in Denver where the Morning Journal yesterday, "It's colder'n hell up here." And tumbled down here, unless the temperature of the well known region referred to has been greatly misrepresented.

It makes one feel good on such an afternoon as yesterday, to look at the orders of extinct volcanoes just across the river and imagine how warm it must have been in this vicinity a few thousand years ago.

In view of the kindness with which the weather department has treated us thus far during the present year, it would be very unreasonable to complain because of a little spell of November-like, like that of yesterday.

Special Examiner W. E. Lamb of the Maricopa Commercial club, is sitting in El Paso hearing complaints by the Maricopa county Commercial Club of Phoenix against the Wells Fargo Express company and the Valley Flour mill of the Arizona capital against the Santa Fe. Both complaints allege gross discrimination by the express and railway companies.

Earl West, of Roberts, Ill., is in the Santa Fe hospital at Las Vegas, in the back, right side and right arm being fearfully scalded as the result of a hazing administered by some of his fellow employees in the Santa Fe shops where Roberts went to work as a boilermaker. He was induced to pull a plug out of a locomotive boiler, and was developed in a jet of steam and boiling water. As a joke it appears to have been a ghastly one, as Roberts had a narrow escape from being boiled alive.

"THE ROYAL CHEF" MAKES BIG HIT IN PHOENIX

Newspaper Publishes Most Favorable Criticism of Performance Which is to Appear in Albuquerque Next Week.

The Phoenix Republican comments most favorably on the appearance in that city of "The Royal Chef," which is to be placed on the boards in the Elks' theater here next week. The Republican says:

"The Royal Chef," which was presented at the Elks' theater last night played to a large seating capacity. The book and lines are the compositions of Stoddard and Taylor and the music is from the brain of that versatile writer of popular comedy music, Ben M. Jerome.

Jerome is also the composer of that most popular and pleasing musical comedy, "The Tale of Spicy," and his new effort "Mink World," which has played to large audiences in New York, Chicago and St. Louis, is the talk of the season.

William H. Conley, who took the part of Henry Lemphreus "from Chicago" is an artist of rare ability and portrayed the part to perfection. His "Tale" makes all Chicagoans yearn for that "dear old Chicago town," and many in the audience could be seen with bowed heads and thoughtful faces as the strains of this popular Chicago air were rendered.

"The Royal Chef" played to packed houses at the La Salle theater in Chicago for a run of 222 performances, and at that time Cecil De Mille and Florence Holbrook were the big hits in the play.

The company presenting this most amusing and ludicrous comedy musical at the Elks' theater were all past-masters in the art of stage conception. Many faces were noticed who were in the original company on the long first run, and the chorus was resplendent with unusually fine costumes and pretty faces.

The song "It's a Way They Have in Chicago" was received with great applause.

made a bargain with the thief to purchase the articles before he stole them. Just what Dumas had to say through this performance is not known, but it is likely that he did not say to go to the work of "stealing" the goods unless he was sure of this point of it. Dumas was taken away to the county jail, where he will likely remain until some action is taken on the matter by the grand jury.

With the placing of Dumas behind the bars, the police believe that the rather mild methods of handling the case have been provided for the case. It is not likely that the case will be taken up by the grand jury, as the police believe that the case will be taken up by the grand jury.

MAJESTIC RANGE DEMONSTRATION CLOSING TONIGHT

Generous Offer of Manufacturers of Celebrated Stove Is Extended to Prospective Purchasers.

The expert from the Majestic Range company, who has been in the city for the past week, making investigations, the Western Electric Stove Co. on West Central avenue, the local agents for the Majestic line of ranges, will make his last demonstration of the popularity of the Majestic line of ranges at the Wagner Hardware Co. on Saturday night, from 7 o'clock to 10 o'clock. The expert will make a number of demonstrations, pointing out the superior quality of the Majestic line of ranges, and explaining the many advantages which are put to the hands of every purchaser of a range while the expert is in town. Among the principal points which the demonstrator will explain all day today and this evening, will be the reasons why the Majestic range is better than any other range of its kind in the world, why it uses only about one-half of the fuel used in ordinary ranges, and why it lasts longer and works more satisfactorily than the other ranges. A special feature in connection with the visit of the expert to Albuquerque, is that all persons who express a desire to purchasing a range in the near future, and leave a deposit to evidence their good faith in the matter, will receive as a bonus the fine set of cooking and other utensils upon the range being delivered to them. These utensils are offered as a special gift from the Majestic factory. The special offer will hold good only during the demonstrations of the expert and those who are considering the matter of purchasing a range, would do well to call at Wagner's store today and inspect the presentation.

COLD WAVE HITS CITY FRIDAY THE 13TH

East Wind Sends Thermometer Down the Toboggan With Rush; Heavy Snow in the Mountains.

Friday, the thirteenth of November, dawned yesterday morning with a brisk little breeze, with a temperature of 40 degrees, and a light snowfall. The cold wave came after several weeks of light and hazy weather, and was the first real taste of winter since early in October, when a cold snap arrived and lasted for a few days. Heavy snow fell all yesterday afternoon in the mountainous east of the territory and western New Mexico and Arizona. The weather man predicts the cold snap will last several days, and it is evident that winter has settled down to business.
