On Dec. 18, according to a communique by the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN), Nicolas Hernan Solorzano Sanchez (aka Cmdr. Dimas Rodriguez) was killed in combat with government troops. The commander was the second-ranking leader and co-founder of the Fuerzas Populares de Liberacion (FPL), of the five organizations which comprise the FMLN. On Dec. 14, the FMLN in telephone calls to news offices in San Salvador reported the capture of FPL commander Ernesto Morales Carbonell. Military officials said they had no evidence of such capture. Then, on Dec. 15, military sources reported that troops had captured "rebel leaders" Morales Carbonell and Victor Armando Martinez, on Dec. 10 in the San Mateo suburb of San Salvador. Morales Carbonell, 30, is the son of Christian Democrat Party leader Antonio Morales Eirlich. The young Morales was detained in 1982, but was released at the request of his father, then a member of the ruling military-civilian junta.
