FRIDAY, APRIL 1.

Cuba must and shall be free.

The war cloud is gathering force and Spain will be the greatest sufferer should it break.

Hold your peace until Monday, men and brethren; light is breaking for free Cuba.

The country seems pretty well united on the Cuban question, regardless of geographical lines.

Politics are beginning to stir in the southern part of the territory. Up in this section a few city elections are attracting some attention, but that is about all.

A good representative man for mayor, that is what is wanted by the large body of Republican voters in this city. Such a man will be elected, if nominated on tomorrow.

The Republican city ticket should be elected. The Republican city convention tomorrow will nominate the right sort of men as candidates for city offices and they should be elected.

Every day adds strength to the war preparations of this country and does not do Spain any good. Mr. McKinley's policy is all right, despite the ravings of the yellow journals and hot-headed people.

It is not too much to say that never before, within the memory of men now living, was the whole world at such a tension by reason of warlike rumors. Hardly a corner of the earth is exempt.

On tomorrow the Republicans of this city will nominate candidates for city officers for the coming election. The indications point, that very good men will be selected and will be elected on Tuesday next.

The Republican nominations in the Second and Third wards are very good indeed and there is every reason why these nominations should be confirmed and voted for by the voters, having the best interests of the city at heart on next Tuesday.

New York to the front. In the space of a few minutes on yesterday, the legislature now in session in Albany appropriated $1,000,000 to be used for extraordinary military expenses in case of war with Spain, at the discretion of the governor. The Empire state is all right.

The south is not clamoring especially for war, but when war does come, the south will be found as loyal and will do as effective work for the cause of the Union in proportion as any other section of this great country. Politics will cut no figure when it comes to supporting the government in the present emergency.

Free traders are howling and yelling at the Dingley tariff law and assert that the operations of the law has not brought prosperity to the country. They say the daylight of prosperity has not yet arrived, it is still twilight and murky twilight at that. It may still be twilight, but if so, it is the kind that precedes the opening of a glorious and clear day of prosperity.

The British government has placed an order for 5,000 tons of steel plates for ship building with the Carnegie Steel company, of Pittsburgh, Pa. Before a protective tariff was a live policy of American government, Great Britain had a virtual monopoly on the steel business in this country, but since protection has been established, the United States has superseded that country as the great iron and steel producer of the world.

English press comments on the American-Spanish question is universal in favor of this country and amazement at American moderation is the general feeling among those best fitted to understand the feeling of America and the impulses of the Anglo-Saxon people. There can be no doubt that intelligent Englishmen sympathize with this country. They know its generosity, its charity, its humanity, and they can not understand why it has so long delayed to stretch forth its hand and save a helpless people from torment and butchery.

Solicitor General Bartlett's opinion in the matter of the law, requiring deposits to be made by insurance companies with the territorial treasurer to enable them to do business in the territory, is good and sound. Deposits with the treasurer of notes and mortgages, representing bona fide loans or of territorial, county or municipal bonds to the amount of $10,000 in each case, are a necessity before doing business. The letter and the spirit of the law require the loans to be honest, and bona fide loans, this is apparent. In abiding by the solicitor general's opinion, the treasurer will carry out the requirement of the law.

War with Spain cannot and will not last long in the very nature of things. The Spanish army is the poorest drilled and least effective of any of the European armies, and the worst drilled militia or national guard of this country is far ahead of it in military efficiency and drill. But the war with Spain cannot, for much the same reasons, be much of a light on land. It will consist of a few naval conflicts, and there is no doubt, in the minds of men well posted as to the relative merits and strength of the navies of the United States and Spain, what the result will be. Within six weeks after the declaration of war and the commencement of active hostilities the Spanish fleets will be swept from the ocean.

On the other hand, as they trust him to form a careful and honest judgment, they trust him equally to advise them of it in due time, to prepare to act on it when it shall be necessary, in the way and to the degree needed. They no more fear a conflict which can not honorably be avoided than they wish one that can so be turned aside. They would no more hesitate to follow him where duty points than they would impatiently hurry him. This, without qualification, is the unchangeable sentiment of the sober, peace-loving people of the country. There is impatience in expression, and a desire to free the Cubans, and much pressure is being brought to bear to bring about that end, but beneath all the clamor for immediate action there is an abiding faith in the public that Wm. McKinley's only desire is to do that which is right and best for the country.

Uncle Sam Has Troubles Enough.

It is reported that the United States has been asked by Japan to take a hand in the Chinese division scheme, just far enough to prevent Russia's securing control of Wei-Hai-Wei. Japan has held that port since the close of the Japan-China war, as security for the payment of a war indemnity by the Chinese, and now Russia threatens to seize the port.

As much as this country admires the "Yankee land of the east," and desires to see it become a great nation, yet Uncle Sam will in all probability beg to be excused from mixing up in the affair. For this action there are many reasons of the most substantial nature. Russia has ever been a friend of America and shown that friendship on different occasions in a very appreciable manner; Japan professes friendliness for the United States, and to take any part in the eastern question would, in the end, result in making enemies out of both those nations. And then, just at this time, your uncle has troubles of his own. Down in the vicinity of the Tropic of Cancer, near the southeast coast of this country, a little tragedy is being enacted which seems likely to engage the serious attention of this republic for some little time. Out on the Pacific ocean lies a group of islands which are clamoring for the privilege of flying the stars and stripes over their coral reefs, and, while for the present that matter is eclipsed by the more stirring events already hinted at, the question of annexation, or protection, will have to be settled in the near future.

The distance intervening between those two points of public interest is considerable, and should the questions involved come to a point where something must be done, there will be business enough on hand to keep this country busy without crossing seas and continents to find something to keep the people out of mischief.

Under the circumstances, it looks very much as if Japan will have to depend upon the fighting qualities of her own people to retain possession of a sea port with a name sufficient to prevent any great amount of fighting.

The People Believe in McKinley.

At the present moment it is easily to be seen that the administration is subject to a great strain, and is passing through perilous times. In congress there is almost a revolt against the conservative measures of McKinley; throughout the country there is an undeniable demand for war with Spain. Despite this uneasiness and the mutterings heard on every hand the people believe in the president, and place implicit trust in his integrity and desire to do that which is right at the right time.

He, more than all others—he, indeed, alone—knows all the facts, numerous, complicated, important, and delicate as they are. He has his responsible advisers at the heads of the various branches of the public service. He has the leaders of both parties in the national legislature within call. He has both the information and the counsel which our representatives to foreign governments are in position to give him. Unquestionably his responsibility is very grave, for it is the responsibility of great power freely conferred and backed by the loyal sentiment of the whole country. He need feel no suspicion of partisan motive on his part; it does not exist. He need fear no partisan prejudice against him; it could not survive the angry contempt of all rational citizens. His responsibility is only such as a clear, conscience and a sound mind can meet and must meet.

The people trust him. There is not a shadow of doubt of that. They trust him as one of themselves, their chief representative, sharing their principles and their convictions, and set apart only by his post of knowledge and of power. They desire no war that can honorably be avoided, nor does he. They long incessantly for continued peace if it can honorably be had, as he does. They wish that every resource of diplomacy, of discussion and reflection, shall be employed to the utmost to avert a conflict that, if it can be averted, would be monstrous; and this is his wish. They no more care to urge him than he cares unduly to hasten.

LOTS OF ROOM FOR MORE FACTORIES

Consumption of Sugar Constantly on the Increase—Five Hundred More Factories Would Be None Too Many.

According to the Statistical Trade Journal, the increase in consumption of sugar in the United States for the year past was 6.91 per cent, requiring to supply it 136,177 long tons of sugar or over 305,000,000 pounds. Below are the figures:

	Tons of 2240 lbs
Total consumption in 1897.	2,098,233
Total consumption in 1898.	2,236,086
Increase during the year 1897.	136,177

This is not unusual, for the average increase of consumption in the United States for the past 16 years has been 5.97 per cent annually. According to the same authority, the world's estimated increase in manufacture of sugar in 1897 was only 64,737 tons. There were in operation the past year nine beet sugar factories in this country. It would require three and three-fifths times the capacity of these nine factories to supply sufficient sugar for the increase alone, or 32 factories of the same average capacity. If we wish at the same time to provide for present consumption it would be necessary to build 55 times as many factories as are now in operation, or 495 factories of the average capacity of the nine we now have.

Now, then, if we were to build new factories at the rate of 50 a year it would take about ten years to catch up on present consumption of sugar, so that to supply this country with sugar nine total number of factories required to be built each year would be fifty, plus 32. As meantime increase of consumption would likely continue in about the same ratio, the number of 82 should be increased 5 per cent to provide for that, so that we have a grand total of 86 factories to be built annually, for ten years, before this nation can grasp the often quoted $100,000,000 we are spending every 12 months for sugar.

THE TALK OF EUROPE.

Brief Reflections Upon Events of Current Interest Across the Ocean.

In connection with the present Dreyfus case, it is worthy of note that M. Hanotaux, the exceedingly clever French minister of foreign affairs, did his best to prevent the prosecution of the captain, foreseeing the deplorable results of the affair for the prestige of France abroad. An official memorandum exists bearing the signature of M. Hanotaux protesting strongly against the action of his colleague, the minister of war, General Mercier, in inaugurating the prosecution.

The great opera house of La Scala, at Milan, has been closed, the government having refused the usual subvention. The explanation appears to be that La Scala, which has hitherto been looked upon as a sort of sanctuary of the musical art, has ceased to fulfill the object for which it was originally established—namely, the encouragement and development of the Italian lyric art. The modern Italian composers are few and far between, and La Scala has of late years produced more German operas and introduced more foreign singers, for want of those of home growth, than in strict accordance with its statutes.

The Russian anti-Semitic press is drawing attention to the rapid growth in the number of large Jewish traders in Moscow, a city which has hitherto been kept as free as possible from Hebrew influences. Twenty years ago the number of Jewish merchants belonging to the first guild was 84. At the present time this number has risen to 279. As the total number of first guild merchants in Moscow is 674 it follows that the Jews at present are able to exercise an enormous influence in the chamber of commerce and in other trading and financial circles in the Muscovite capital.

The ukase abolishing every kind of customs duty on agricultural implements and machinery entering Russia, and which was to have been issued on New Year's day, will not be promulgated until late in the spring, obstacles yet to be overcome having been raised by the minister of finance.

The municipality of the city of Sofia has issued a notice inviting tenders for supplying the Bulgarian capital with electric light and tramways. The concessions for the lighting and the tramways are to be taken up together and will be received up to March 17.

The general act of the anti-slavery conference of 1899 provides that after the lapse of six years a fresh meeting of representatives of the signatory powers shall be held with a view to revision of the liquor traffic regulations in Africa. At the instance of Great Britain, Belgium has recently issued invitations to the United States and other foreign powers for a new general conference to meet next April.

The Ottoman lighthouse administration has received instructions to resume the working of the lighthouses on the Mediterranean coast which have remained unilluminated since the outbreak of the war with Greece.

According to returns which have recently been published in Paris with regard to the incomes of professional men, there are in all France between 12,000 and 13,000 doctors, of whom 2,500 are to be found in Paris. Of this number only 6 make incomes ranging from $40,000 to $60,000 a year; 14 make incomes in the neighborhood of $20,000 a year, while not more than 100 make as much as $10,000 a year. With regard to lawyers, of whom there are 3,000 in Paris alone, there are not 400 of them who make as much as $2,000 a year, while a couple of score range as high as $10,000 a year each. The explanation is the very simple economic one that the supply exceeds the demand. Twice as many doctors, lawyers and other professional men are turned out yearly as there are places for, the prejudice against trade, industry and agriculture being even stronger in republican France than in monarchic England.

Among the important anniversaries this year is the fourth anniversary of the fiery martyrdom of Savonarola, which will be celebrated on May 28 at Florence. At Basel, in Switzerland, preparations are being made to commemorate the four hundredth birthday of Hans Holbein. The Portuguese will also celebrate in May with magnificent fetes the fourth centenary of Vasco da Gama's discovery of the Cape route to India, which occurred in 1498, exactly six years after the discovery of the new world. On June 29 there will be festivities in Ancona in honor of Leopardi, one of the greatest poets Italy has produced, who was born there in 1798, and on Aug. 21 the centenary of Jules Michelet, the historian, will be celebrated by the municipal council of Paris with appropriate meetings and banquets.—New York Tribune.

To Klondike in a Bale of Hay. The whereabouts of Charles Sleeman, a railroad man who suddenly disappeared a few weeks ago, has been discovered. He left Kalamazoo, Mich., with $3 to seek a fortune in the Klondike gold-fields. He rode in freight cars to Seattle and sailed from there Feb. 6 on a barge for a nine days' voyage to Skagway secured in a bale of hay. He left a wife and son, aged 16.

184 separate analysis, chiefly carload lots, showed AN AVERAGE of 17.01 per cent sugar in beet; 84.1 per cent purity.

THIS REMARKABLE RESULT was accomplished by raw farmers, unacquainted with the culture of beet root, on new land and under very trying circumstances, as the factory was not assured until June, and a majority of the acreage was planted between JUNE 1st and AUGUST 10th.

GOOD SOIL makes the seed germinate. WATER makes the plant grow. SUNLIGHT puts the sugar in the BEET.

THE ONLY THING left to be desired that the Pecos Valley has not, is an abundance of PEOPLE. We need thrifty farmers; 500 heads of families each on a 40-acre farm.

NO FAVORABLE terms or conditions of sale of beet and fruit lands were ever made.

More Gold Mines.

Stories of big "finds" of gold reach us not only from the Klondike, but from many parts of the country not hitherto suspected of being valued by the precious metal. A tremendous impetus to mining industry and the development of wealth in numerous directions has resulted. The exposure and hardships of frontier miners have ever been productive of rheumatism, one of the most obstinate and agonizing of complaints. As a means of ameliorating and preventing this malady, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is unequalled. The action of this fine medicine is also speedily felt in cases of malaria, dyspeptic and kidney and bladder complaints. Lumbago and other infirmities incident to advancing years are also counteracted by it.

Coming to Particulars.

I am sensible of the honor you do me, Mr. Spoonmore. In the proposal of marriage you have just made, said the young woman, with a slight curl of the lips, but circumstances over which I have no control will compel me to decline the honor. What are those circumstances, Miss Grimshaw? fiercely demanded the young man.

Your circumstances, Mr. Spoonmore.

Heard on the Judgment Day.

As Gabriel sounded the first call upon his trumpet, Mr. Averagman stirred uneasily from his sleep of centuries. Stop that snoring, Maria! he yelled. I suppose it's nothing to you to keep me awake all night after a hard day's work. Like a woman, selfishness, anyhow! However, a second blast for Philadelphia and a third one for hired girls soon assured him of what was going on.

Rev. E. Edwards, pastor of the English Baptist Church at Minersville, Pa., when suffering with rheumatism, was advised to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. He says: "A few applications of this liniment proved of great service to me. It subdued the inflammation and relieved the pain. Should any sufferer profit by giving Pain Balm a trial it will please me." For sale by A. C. Ireland.

Entitled to the Designation.

Harkins—Miss Fossick is always careful to address young Goshin as Mr. Harkins. She always used to call him Fred. Harker—that is because she had rejected him.

Harkins—Why should she call him Harker on that account?

Harker—Because he has missed her, I suppose.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

The remedy is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough and influenza. It has become famous for its cures of these diseases, over a large part of the civilized world. The most flattering testimonials have been received, giving accounts of its good works; of the aggravating and persistent coughs it has cured; of severe colds that have yielded promptly to its soothing effects, of the dangerous attacks of croup it has cured, often saving the life of the child. The extensive use of it for whooping cough has shown that it robs that disease of all dangerous consequences. It is especially prized by mothers for children as it never fails to effect a speedy cure, and because they have found that there is not the least danger in giving it, even to babies, as it contains nothing injurious. Sold by A. C. Ireland.

Too Sudden.

Clergyman (showing a lady visitor around the church)—Now, madam, you have seen the organ, the font and the nave. I should next like to conduct you to the altar.

Lady Visitor—Oh, this is so sudden!

I have been afflicted with rheumatism for fourteen years and nothing seemed to give any relief. I was able to be around all the time but constantly suffering. I had tried everything I could hear of and at last was told to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which I did, and was immediately relieved and in a short time cured. I am happy to say that it has not since returned.—Jesse Edean, Germantown, Cal. For sale by A. C. Ireland.

Not Edible.

Would you advise dogs or an ice locomotive for a trip to the Klondike? asked the man with the gold fever.

Dogs, everywhere, said the returned miner. You can't eat a locomotive.

Some Gold Truth.

Give a rogue enough rope and he'll hang himself! It is all right to say, but the chances are ten to one that he'll utilize the hemp to rope in fresh victims.

A Plunger.

Just saw an exciting game of poker down at the Red Light, said Chilkoot Cal. Dawson Dan held four aces pat. Did he bet 'em hard? asked Placer Pete.

You bet he did, said Cal. He threw a whole can of baked beans onto the table.

INDIVISIBLE.

A moment face to face they stood, While soul met soul in honest eyes That trembling glowed through unshed tears.

Born of a love that never dies.

They met to speak the saddest word That e'er on human lips can dwell. But, oh, the mockery to dream That such as these could take farewell!

For as two rosy cheeks unite In wake of the departed soul, Their kindred essence pure and sweet, Those twin had softly merged in one.

They might be severed pole from pole, Might live through all the years apart. What mattered time and space to them? Whose home was in each other's heart?

He craved a trace of that fine gold Whose wavy wreaths her forehead grace. Bending to grant the boon, he clasped A zone of pearl about her waist.

A moment more, and he was gone From sight, no more to see. High heart and mind, Stronghold of tenderness and truth, Defied the hour and said behind!

The seasons rolled, and ne'er again Thus face to face 'twas theirs to stand. Yet heart to heart they walked the world On to the goal, the silent land.

Oh, gifts of grief, a noble soul That wraps our own in full embrace Till all mean things in love's great soul Are lost and self hath no more place!

A COLLEGE CALL.

"The stories printed about Smith college lately appeal to me very strangely," said a Harvard man. "Man is of so small a part in it all. A senior year experience of mine will illustrate."

"When I met the girl, I didn't know she was a college girl. The front of her waist was decorated with crazy shaped jewelry of various sorts, but I was not sufficiently enlightened at the time to know that they denoted the feminine life academic. She was a mighty nice girl. She wasn't afraid to wet her bathing suit. She didn't mind chasing around in the mud after her own fiddler crabs, and, more wonderful still, she wouldn't even shudder when they crunched as she ran the hook through them. She was no stern, analytical, cold blooded thing either. You ought to have heard her yell when the fish bit; also, she knew enough when her hand was squeezed to squeeze back. I had a very interesting summer of it. In the course of the season I learned, of course, that she was a Smith girl, just as I learned where she lived and who her folks were and what her first name was and that she wasn't engaged to anybody (and never meant to be) and all that sort of thing. The Smith part didn't bother me at all. I began to feel that she was a type. The higher education was the thing woman had needed all these years to make her a little more rather than a little less than the angels."

"At the end of the season my goose was cooked all right, but I lacked sand. I wanted time to think it over. I also had a sneaking idea that perhaps after we had been separated for awhile the girl wouldn't be so all fired indifferent to personal comfort and my passing tentative expressions of interest in our future existence. I asked her if I could come up to Northampton to see her and if I couldn't take her to the Yale-Harvard football game at Springfield. She fairly grabbed at the chance to go to the game. She had never been to a Springfield game, she said, except with an Amherst man, and that, of course, didn't count. It would be too awfully jolly for any use to go with a Harvard man."

"I suggested that I would like to go over to Northampton a week or two before the game. Of course she said I must. Just at the time of the game there were so many men in the chapel every morning that there was no particular glory in having one there. But about two or three weeks before the game it would be glorious to have a real Harvard man in chapel all by his lonesome."

"Somehow this sort of response was not altogether satisfying, but I was too enthusiastic to inquire too curiously. In the fullness of elapsed time I don't mind telling you that I had some pretty definite plans about that visit to Northampton. In meditative moments I had pleasing ideas about certain confidences I would make to the boys before I appeared with the girl at the game."

"I went to Northampton. I arrived on a Thursday evening. I went to the cottage where she lived. I waited half an hour before she came down. Then she appeared with her hat on."

"I'm so glad you've come," she said, and I'm so glad that I have a voice club meeting to tell. The president is sick, and I'm the vice president, so I really have to go. I'm really awfully late now. You may walk over with me if you like."

"It was about three minutes' walk. She told me in that time how to come to chapel the next morning."

"I went back to the Norwood and retired to the little box in the basement that they called a cafe and contemplated things. After awhile the things contemplated became less gloomy. I met two Amherst men down there and told them my experience and disappointment. They looked at each other and laughed a good deal and said that it was rather strange, considering that I was not an Amherst man. They were rather bitter about it and not altogether polite, and I went to bed."

"I went to chapel in the morning. The girl was waiting for me in the vestibule. I was looked over impersonally by 600 or more young women as they came in, also when they went out. Then I was told to hurry away like a good boy and come back after dinner, say, about 8 o'clock. I gently intimated that I had 12 hours in Northampton as a lonely prospect. She was awfully sorry, of course, but there was an especially important basketball practice that afternoon. If she staid away, she wouldn't be allowed to play in the match game the next day. Might I come to watch the practice?—Gosh, no!—not if I was never allowed to stage at match games, and then only the very oldest and married members of the faculty."

"I went over to Amherst and saw some fellows I knew over there. The man I know best was going to have a beautiful time in his rooms that night. The window seat bulged with beer bottles. He wanted me to stay, but I regretfully broke away and went back to Northampton. I reached the cottage at 7:55. The girl was in the reception room waiting for me."

"Goodness, but you are late!" said she. "I came very near going without waiting for you. Astronomy lecture this morning was postponed until tonight, so that we could have the real stars, you know. I'm sorry, but of course it isn't my fault. I know you don't want to wander around town tonight, so I have asked my roommate to come down and talk to you."

"She went up into the hall and called her roommate, who was short and globular as a wheel, to discuss Kant in relation to the future. Woman. She wanted to know what that dear Professor James of Harvard was like and whether I had ever heard him explain what he meant by certain passages in his blamed old textbook. She went to her room and brought down the textbook to show exactly what she meant. After an hour and a half I fled to the cafe of the Norwood."

"Next morning I went to chapel again, as had been ordained by the evanescent young woman before she trotted away to look at the stars. Then she went away to the basketball match game. She said that if I wanted to walk down by the gymnasium I could have lots of fun hearing them cheer. I thanked her. She told me to come around at about 4 o'clock and we would go for a trolley ride to Florence. I didn't go down to the gymnasium to hear the girls yell, but my drooping spirits revived. I found that Florence wasn't much of a town, only a settlement really, and was five or six miles out in the country."

"I was at the cottage promptly at 8 o'clock, also at 4 o'clock. She came down very penitent at 4:15; said she was awfully put out, but the board of editors of some blamed magazine or other had had a meeting, and she didn't dare to stay away a minute for fear they would vote to print an article by a girl she just simply hated. They had been trying to get it printed against her will for two months, and she didn't intend that they should take advantage of the fact she had a man in town to slip it in, so there!

"We got on the car. So did 18 girls who seemed most interested in us. The car swung its rattling way out into the country. We talked about scenery. I saw lots of groves and shady lanes along the way. I spoke about them once or twice."

"It's ever so much prettier near Florence," she said.

"We ran off on a siding, and the 18 girls climbed out and began seeking asters and things beside the track."

"Goodness!" said the girl. "They are getting their botany specimens. I had forgotten all about mine. Won't you get some for me? That's a nice boy!"

"I did. The car started and sailed away while I was picking the lovely things. I chased a quarter of a mile. The 18 young ladies back near the siding were amused."

"Look at your watch, please," said the girl. I did so. She saw it and was much perturbed. "I'm going to be late for dinner," she said, "and it will be the third time this year."

"Why," said I, "aren't we going to get off?"

"Goodness, no! We are going back on this car as fast as it can go."

"But I haven't seen Florence," I yelled.

"Silly goose," she said, "this is Florence!"

"We only stopped once on the way back. That once was at the siding, and all the 18 girls piled on again. They remembered me, now."

"But I haven't seen Florence," said the girl as we hurried into the campus, and of course I have to go. Chapel tomorrow!"

"She said a lot more, but I confess I didn't hear her. She was very much surprised when I told her I couldn't possibly stay over."

"Anyhow, perhaps it's just as well," she said, "because you couldn't come to the house on Sunday."

"Yes, I took her to the game. I believe she had a good time. I have seen her once or twice since. But I don't think as much of the higher education of women as I did."—New York Sun.

He Wouldn't.

Fact and fiction prints—under the head of fact, we may assume—what purports to be the application of a man who wanted to be an army chaplain during the administration of President Lincoln.

Attached to it are a number of indorsements which are not only interesting in themselves, but as disclosing the characters of the two men whose influence largely molded the policy of the government in those turbulent times. The indorsements read as follows:

Dear Stanton—Appoint this man chaplain in the army.—A. Lincoln.

Dear Mr. Lincoln—He is not a preacher.—E. M. Stanton.

The following indorsements are dated a few months later, but come just before Lincoln's death:

Dear Stanton—He is now.—A. Lincoln.

Dear Mr. Lincoln—But there is no vacancy.—E. M. Stanton.

Dear Stanton—Appoint him chaplain at large.—A. Lincoln.

Dear Mr. Lincoln—There is no warrant of law for that.—E. M. Stanton.

Dear Stanton—Appoint him anyhow.—A. Lincoln.

Dear Mr. Lincoln—I will not.—E. M. Stanton.

The appointment was not made, but the papers were filed in the war department, where they remain as evidence of Lincoln's friendship and Stanton's obstinate nerves.

In the olden times it was no uncommon occurrence for sensitive, delicate women to be beset by nervous troubles, or by imaginary or fanciful fancies. In this respect the world has made great strides. Nevertheless, women still suffer death in a slow and more tortuous form, and for no offense but a little ignorance, or possibly, a little neglect.

The woman who suffers from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organs, whether she realizes it or not, is being slowly but surely tortured to death. She suffers almost continually with sick headache. She has pains in the back, what she calls "itches" in the side and shooting pains everywhere. She experiences burning and dragging down sensations. She becomes weak, nervous and despondent. She neglects her home, and is impatient with her husband. If she consults the average physician, there is not one chance in ten that he will hit upon the real cause of her trouble. He will attribute her bad feelings to stomach, liver, heart or nervous trouble. A woman in this condition should consult some eminent and skillful specialist who has had a wide experience. Dr. R. V. Pierce, for thirty years chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hospital and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., has with the assistance of a staff of able physicians, prescribed for many thousands of women. He has invented a wonderful medicine for all women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It has stood the test for thirty years. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in womanhood and motherhood, making them strong and well. It allays inflammation, heals ulceration, soothes pain and tones and builds up the nerves. It transforms weak, nervous women into healthy, happy wives and mothers.

It was an invalid for over a year with change of life, writes Mrs. C. Smith of Or. Cactus Co., Mont. "Had pains across the pit of my stomach and such extreme nervousness that I could hardly take one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and five of his 'Favorite Prescription' and am entirely well."

A GOOD BUSINESS HEAD.

Jennie Was Very Shrewd and Would Doubtless Become a New Woman.

He was reporting the details of a short trip on the cars with two particularly lively little girls.

"Predict," he said to their mother, "that Jennie will be a new woman when she grows up."

"Oh, I hope not!" replied the mother, who was one of the old fashioned sort.

"What makes you think so?"

"She has such a good head for business," he replied. "She fidgeted and laughed and talked on the train until she nearly had me crazy. I couldn't keep her still."

"No one ever could," said her mother. "She was born with a watch spring inside of her."

"Then, of course, she got her sister Josephine going, too," went on the fearless man who had dared to make such a trip with two children, "and they giggled and screamed and danced and down until I thought we would be off of the train for disturbing the other passengers."

"Very reprehensible," said the mother, "but it doesn't seem to me so much like the new woman as it is like the old woman."

"Finally," went on the fearless man without noticing the interruption, "Jennie asked me if I would give her a penny if she kept still until the end of the trip. To be real frank, it looked like a cinch, as they say in sporting circles. In view of my experience up to that time I would have unhesitatingly said that it wasn't a possible thing for her to keep still that length of time."

"And you would have been quite right," said her mother.

"I would have been quite right if she had been one of the thoughtless, old fashioned girls," asserted the fearless man, "but I found instead that she was a miniature edition of a crafty, businesslike new woman. She curled up in one corner of the seat and was asleep in two minutes. It was the only way that she could win, and she knew it."—Chicago Post.

Mistaken.

"Look here, Bridget," said an indignant lady, "I have missed things ever since you came to live with me, and today I took the liberty of searching your room and I found my lace handkerchief in your bureau drawer."

"Luk at that, now!"

"Yes, and I found my lace jabot and one of my vells in your trunk."

"Did anny one iver?"

"And you had a pair of my gloves in your room."

"Luk at that ag'in, now!"

"I have taken all my things to my own room, and I want you to leave the house today."

"Oh, but O'll have faith enough, for it's not O'll that wants to wurruk for anny laddy that so far forgets herself as to go pryin' round in a girrl's room! O'll t'ot O'll was wurkin for a laddy, but O'll found out the mistake an O'll lave this minute!"—Youth's Companion.

Sena, Perfecto Olivas, Sixto Garcia, Hilario Garcia, and Jose Gonzalez. For members of the city council Ignacio Sena for the two years' term and David Gonzalez for the one year's term were nominated, as was Nicolas Sena for member of the board of education.

The following nominations were made: For member of the council, A. C. Ireland, and for member of the board of education, Teodosio Castillo.

Primaries.

The primaries of both parties last night were well attended. Republican politicians are figuring out a majority of 150 for the Republican city ticket.

A. P. Hogle would make a first class case as a member of the board of education.

The nomination of Judge Walker for mayor on the Citizens' ticket seems to be in the air.

City politics are warming up. It does look as if the Citizens' movement will make a strong fight for success.

The nominees on the Republican ticket in the first ward are good men and, although that ward is generally Democratic, will make a good fight for success.

The friends of Marcelino Ortiz claim to have 20 votes out of 33 in the Republican city convention tomorrow, which they assert will secure his nomination for city clerk.

On the Republican side Captain J. R. Hudson is talked of for the nomination of mayor, although some claim that Mayor Spies will be renominated.

In ward No. 3 the Republicans made excellent nominations; W. J. McPherson and Celso Lopez for the council, and John V. Conway for the board of education. This ticket should certainly receive the full support of the voters of the ward.

DEPOSITS OF INSURANCE COMPANIES.

Opinion of the Solicitor General As to Notes and Mortgages in Such Cases.

Hon. Samuel Eldott, Treasurer. Santa Fe, March 30, 1898.—Dear Sir: Under chapter 41, session laws of 1897, requiring fire insurance companies to make deposit of not less than $10,000 in value of real estate, I would state for your information and guidance in the future, that, in my opinion, the law will be fully complied, on the deposit with you, of notes secured by mortgage upon real estate situated in New Mexico, to the amount of $10,000, when accompanied by a certificate from the president, secretary or manager of the company that the amount mentioned in the mortgage has been actually in good faith loaned by said company upon the real estate described in the mortgage; and also, an affidavit from the mortgagee that he has actually in good faith borrowed the amount named in the mortgage and given the same to secure said loan.

The fact that the insurance companies are willing to loan their money upon the property mortgaged, is certainly as good an evidence of its value, title of the mortgage and security for the amount loaned, as could be asked. The companies take all the risk in these particulars and the territory gets not only the security of the mortgage, but the commercial value of the indorsement by the insurance company.

I am not aware of what your practice has been heretofore in this respect, but the above requirements will meet all the objects of the law, and will fully protect you as well as the territory.

On receipt of this, I would be glad if you will advise me that your office will adopt this rule in the future in reference to such deposits. Very respectfully,
EDWARD L. BARTLETT,
Solicitor General of New Mexico.

RINCONADA MINING OPERATIONS.

Dredge to Be Placed on Placer Grounds—Shipments from Copper Mountain—General Mining Notes.

Special Correspondence New Mexican.

Rinconada, March 30, 1898.—Spring work has assumed very active phases in the Rio Grande mining district and considerable new capital is aiding in developing the slumbering resources of the region. S. deputy surveyor, will arrive here next week to survey the ditch above Cienegilla for Mr. Connor. ## RED RIVER NEWS.

Stella Company to Pay Up Indebtedness and Resume Operations.

Special Correspondence New Mexican. Red River, Taos county, March 30, 1898.—And still it storms. A snow storm every third or fourth day is the rule—and has been all through the month. March has been decidedly the most disagreeable month of the winter up in these mountains.

Dr. J. V. Slaughter and S. E. Moore, Philadelphia gentlemen, stockholders in the Red River Mining company, have been in camp this week looking after the company's interests. It is said the company intends to pay up its defaulted labor bills and resume work on the Stella. Their promises to pay have been plentiful for a year, but the money comes very much slower than it ought from men who claim to be millionaires.

B. J. Young and Dr. J. T. Reed went to Taos on business yesterday.

The "boozes" must be coming—at least things have been lively so far this week. Two or three cases of "boozes" on Sunday, two fights on Monday night, a "scrap" Tuesday noon and the school fund increased by $20 make a very good showing for a dull season. At this rate we ought soon to have enough money on hand for another month of school.

Work on mining claims has fallen off considerably of late—probably on account of the disagreeable weather. But the boys will all be at work again soon. The attitude seems too high for local politics this early in the season. We are not burdened with a city election, and so are giving all our spare time to the Maine disaster.
