On July 12, Costa Rican government spokespersons announced that San Jose will receive $7 million from the UN Development Program (UNDP) and the Italian government to finance a variety of resettlement and training programs for 100,000 refugees and displaced persons currently residing in Costa Rica. At a recent international conference in New York on the Central American refugee problem, San Jose requested $12 million. (Basic data from Notimex, 07/12/90)
