Published: Wednesday, August 28, 1991

On Aug. 22, a group of retired Sandinista Popular Army (EPS) soldiers ended a 24-hour occupation of the National Development Bank of Granada. The demonstration was aimed at pressuring the government into fulfilling its commitment to providing them with early retirement compensation. Compensation is to include small business loans, and credit toward the purchase of heavy transport trucks and farm land. (Basic data from ACAN-EFE, 08/21/91, 08/22/91)
