BABIES STARVING ON TIED-UP TRAIN

Sufferings of Passengers on Fort Worth.

NO FOOD AND BITTER COLD

Express Was Five Days Late—Stalled in Blizzard on Panhandle.

Fort Worth, Nov. 24.—Harrowing experiences were reported today by passengers when a Fort Worth & Denver passenger train arrived here from Denver over five days late. The train left Denver last Saturday night and was delayed by repeated snow storms in the sparsely settled sections of the Texas Panhandle. Eight babies on the train nearly starved, the supply of milk having been exhausted. They were fed on whiskey and water. Other passengers suffered greatly for want of food, it being impossible to obtain supplies. Traffic is now open and the weather has moderated.

El Paso Still Draped in White.

El Paso, Texas, November 24.—This afternoon, five days after the snow ceased to fall in El Paso, and five days after it began to fall, there is still considerable snow on the ground. In all of the unsheltered places there is snow that has not been melted by three days of sunshine and even tonight there will be some of it left, in sheltered nooks such as shady sides of walls, fence corners and ravines. This afternoon there is still some snow even on the spots that have been directly exposed to the sun for four days. This is another record breaker, for in the past snows have always melted in two or three days at the most. However, there was never so much snow on the ground in the history of El Paso, by an inch or more, the record fall this time being 8.25 inches, while in the past 5.12 was the heaviest.

As the snow melts, the streets are in horrible shape. The moisture from the snow does not drain off in the case of rain, but merely soaks into the ground where it is, works up with the mud and forms a perfect slush, growing deeper as wagons and other vehicles traverse the streets and cut into the earth.

Coal Famine at Carlsbad and Cold Close Schools.

Carlsbad, N. M., Nov. 24.—The last few tons of coal here sold recently at $20 each and now a coal famine is creating distress among all classes. The public schools have been closed because of the lack of fuel and the cold weather. Merchants have been burning bacon for fuel to heat their business places. Tent dwellers were caught without warning and suffered severely. There is not a ton of coal in the town and the coal loads en route have been confiscated by the railroads so it is doubtful when another supply will reach here. Mails are beginning to arrive the first received since last Sunday. The thermometer is still near the zero point and the snow is a foot deep.

Feaks of the Blizzard at Cloudcroft. Alamogordo, N. M., Nov. 24.—The weather has been good all the fall, until the recent blizzard played some freakish tricks here and at Cloudcroft which has made old timers wonder. Over a foot of snow fell, the wind blew a gale and the temperature dropped to zero. At Cloudcroft it was three degrees colder. Eighteen inches of snow is reported from lower Pecos.

Farmers Rejoice at Fall of White. Loveland, Colo., Nov. 24.—Several inches of snow have fallen here since Thursday. Farmers are rejoicing over the mantle of white because they believe it will be of benefit to the sugar beets that have not yet been harvested.

Snow Stops Work on Bridge. Salida, Colo., Nov. 24.—Work on the new concrete bridge being built across the Arkansas River here has been stopped temporarily by the snow storm which began Thursday night. The fall of snow continued all day yesterday and was accompanied by a cold east wind.

Snow Tied Up Automobile Line. Torrance, N. M., Nov. 24.—Last evening, the first automobiles in a week, arrived from Roswell at Torrance. The snow was so heavy in the Pecos Valley and southeastern New Mexico, that the automobile road was effectually blocked.

Colonel Ballard of Roswell Tells Cold Story.

Colonel Charles L. Ballard of Roswell, who was in the city today on personal business, stated to a representative of the New Mexican that the storm which raged over southeastern New Mexico last Sunday and Monday was the most severe he has experienced during his residence of twenty-eight years in that section. He hopes he will never again be compelled to face such an one. He also believes that the losses in cattle and sheep in that section were heavy, but that it would be a week or longer before their full extent could be obtained. Colonel Ballard is an extensive stock raiser and thoroughly ac-

ALLEGED TRAIN ROBBERS DEFENSE

Witnesses Strong for Black Brothers and Murphy—J. J. Thomas Not Shaken By Examination.

Las Vegas, N. M., Nov. 24.—The testimony in defense of the Black Brothers and Murphy charged with having held up and robbed a Rock Island train near Logan, given here yesterday was very strong and it looks as though the prosecution had counted upon J. J. Thomas who was the first witness for the defense, was unshaken in his testimony upon cross examination by the prosecution. He presented records, such as books and checks, from the mine at Sunnyside which showed conclusively that the Black Brothers and Murphy had been at work at the mine on June 29 and that they were also present and were paid off on June 30, the date of the hold-up.

Mrs. Lizzie Butcher who lived in the mining camp said that she was in the camp and saw the defendants leave the camp on June 30. Mattie Wilson also a resident of the camp, Mrs. Lizzie Butcher said, had been insulted by John Murphy and was crying when she went to the store on Saturday, June 30, to do some shopping. This was an important fact since it established the presence of Murphy in the camp on June 30. None of the witnesses wavered in their testimony. An attempt was made to get Mr. Thomas to admit that his books might have been faulty all the way through, because of several slight errors found by the prosecution, but he remained firm in his statements.

The defense will probably complete its testimony in the Logan train robbery case today and the greater part of Monday will be consumed in rebuttal. Argument will begin either Monday afternoon or Tuesday morning.

John Black, the eldest of the two Black brothers charged with holding up a train at Logan, went on the stand in his own behalf this morning. He gave an account of his whereabouts for several months before and after the train robbery and denied positively having made any confession to "Dee" Butler, the horse thief with whom he was in jail in Chickasaw, Indian Territory. He also denied being with a man named Markam or Boswell in Amarillo and said he never saw Boswell until he met him in jail a short time before he was killed. John Black will be under cross examination the most of the afternoon and Jim Black will probably go on next. It is not known whether the defense has any more witnesses or not.

COLONEL BETTS MAY CONTEST

For Seat in House From District 15—Not Yet Decided—Severe Snow Storm at Silver City.

Col. H. H. Betts, assessor of Grant County, who was in town today from Silver City, in answer to a query from a representative of the New Mexican stated: "I have not yet made up my mind whether I shall or shall not initiate a contest for the office of representative from the Fifteenth House District against Dr. M. J. Moran, who on the face of the returns has a majority of 97. Should I do so one of the reasons for bringing this contest will be the fact that on the official ballot prepared by the county clerk of Luna County for the election on November 6th last my name was placed under the wrong heading, namely under the heading of 'from the Seventh District,' when it should have appeared under the heading of 'Fifteenth District.' This naturally lost me votes. I am informed that on a number of ballots the name of M. J. Moran, my opponent, was placed over my name under the heading 'Seventh District.' These were counted by the judges of election in several precincts for Dr. Moran, a proceeding which I am informed by lawyers was illegal and should not have been made. I make no charge otherwise and if there has been any fraudulent voting in Grant or Luna County I am free to admit that I do not know of it. I personally believe that there were none such. My own county, although strongly Democratic gave me a majority of 101 votes; my own town, Silver City, gave me 217, although nominally Democratic. This has not given me the swelled head, but I must admit that it is very gratifying.

"You ask concerning the recent storm: Last Sunday and Monday we had a very severe blizzard and snow storm in our section, the most severe that I have experienced during my residence in Silver City for twenty years. The snow was a foot deep and the wind was very high. It was also very cold for Silver City, which as you well know has a very equable and mild climate. The weather has not been good all the week, but yesterday, when I left it was moderating and a telegraphic dispatch informed me that today is right nice."

GOMPERS HEADS FEDERATION

Unanimously Re-elected For 25th Time.

STRONG RESOLUTION PASSED

Declaration of Principles and Bitter Attack on Use of Injunction.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 24.—Gompers was today re-elected president of the American Federation of Labor. This is the twenty-fifth time he has been elected in twenty-six years. There was no opposing candidate. The entire executive and administrative board was re-elected by acclamation. Second in importance to the election was the declaration of the proposed principles drawn up for the federation by the resolutions committee. These were endorsed after two resolutions in regard to the involuntary servitude and initiative and referendum had been incorporated. The declaration of principles include the abolition of all forms of involuntary servitude except for the punishment of crime and an unrelenting protest against the abuse of court injunction.

FOUR DEAD IN BLIZZARD

Which Visited Torrance County—Mariano Serna Tells of Conditions There.

Four men frozen to death and another believed to have met a similar fate is a sequel to the recent blizzard in Torrance County. Mariano Serna, junior member of the meat market firm of Abreu and Serna, whose place of business is on lower San Francisco Street, returned last night from Torrance, bringing news of the terrible suffering caused there by the excessive cold. Mr. Serna made the trip into the Estancia Valley several days ago for the purpose of buying beef cattle for the local butcher shop. He was forced to return home without making any purchases. While he was at Torrance the body of one of the men who had succumbed to the effects of exposure and exhaustion was brought in by a party of men who had discovered the corpse lying half buried in the snow. He was informed that three other men had lost their lives and that another was reported missing. He said that the snow was sixteen inches deep on the ground and in some places was drifted to fully twice that depth. He did not learn the names of the victims who had perished in the snow or the one not accounted for.

REBATER WORSE THAN ASSASSIN

Says President Still Well of Orient Railroad.

STRIKES AT PEOPLE'S RIGHT

Would Like to See the Evil Punished by Fifty Years in Prison.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 24.—Arthur E. Stilwell, president of the Kansas City Mexico and Oriental Railroad in addressing the railroad club here last night, denounced the practice of rebating. He said:

"Of all the crimes in the whole category, the rebating crime is the most unjust. Rebating strikes at the people—the fountain head of all rights delegated to the average railroad. The hired assassin of old, may be pictured as a white robed saint compared with the rebater. I'd like to see all rebaters get twenty—yes fifty—years in the penitentiary."

Stilwell Caused Sensation in Railroad Circles.

The strong condemnation of President Stilwell relative to rebating caused a sensation in railroad circles. President Stilwell is one of the most widely known promoters of railroad projects in America and is fearless in business and on the platform. His speech before the club last night was well received although it precipitated a debate pro and con which has not yet reached an end.

HOW THE SOUTHWEST WAS SAVED TO THE UNION.

In the center of the Plaza at Santa Fe, stands an obelisk upon an artistic stone and marble base erected by the legislature of 1866, 1867 and 1868, to commemorate the dead who had fallen in the battles with the Indians and also the Union soldiers who had given their lives in the battles with the "Rebels" at Valverde, Glorieta and Peralta. Under the corner stone of this monument are various historical documents descriptive of these battles, the names of the officers who participated and other data, but no complete narrative of the campaign which saved the west to the Union, nor of the list of dead and wounded of its three principal engagements. The association which had charge of the erection of the monument comforted itself with the belief that these data could be collected later and "deposited in another part of the monument, with suitable reference." However, the monument was completed and dedicated without this being done and it is only this year that there has appeared a satisfactory volume descriptive of the campaign and also giving a list of the dead and wounded, at least of the Colorado regiment and independent companies that not only participated, but in the cases of the battles of Glorieta and Peralta, bore the brunt of the fighting.

This volume of 160 pages printed on heavy calendar paper, finely illustrated, bound handsomely in purple cloth with gold lettering, is the first of a series of similar volumes bearing on western history to be issued by the State Historical and Natural History Society of Colorado, and excepting the introduction and addenda, was written by the late William Clarke Whitford, D. D., president of Milton College of Wisconsin and whose visit to Santa Fe several years ago and exploration of the battle field of Glorieta, are well remembered by local residents. He did his work well for the book is not a dry history of facts but a fascinating narrative with character sketches that stand out like cameos and anecdotes that throw an illuminating sidelight upon the events of the year 1862.

Early in the Civil War, the Confederate government had decided to wrest the west from the Union, either to erect the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast states into a separate republic or to make them part of the Confederate States of America. It was the plan to send an army from Texas through New Mexico to Colorado and Utah to seize the gold mines and to enlist the Indians and Mormons against the Union. Another army was to penetrate Arizona to California there to seize the gold mines and the harbors which would frustrate the object of the blockade proclaimed by President Lincoln, who also regarded the gold mines of Colorado and California as the backbone of the credit of the United States. Incidental to this, negotiations were opened with the government of Mexico to cede the states of Chihuahua and Sonora to this new Rocky Mountain Republic, in order to make it more formidable, and were proceeding favorably when the battle of Glorieta, checkmated the entire ambitious scheme which had been hatched at Santa Fe by the secretary of the Territory, and not only saved the west to the Union but probably changed the course of the war although historians have been slow to recognize the battle of Glorieta, fought eighteen miles from Santa Fe, as one of the most important of the conflict even if the numbers engaged were comparatively small and the total casualties of the campaign did not exceed one thousand. But Dr. Whitford calls it the Gettysburg of the West.

To General Sibley was entrusted the scheme of marching to Denver. Early in January, 1862, he started from Fort Bliss, Texas, now on the outskirts of El Paso to Fort Thorn, north of Las Cruces. He had 3000 Texas rangers and depended for recruits upon disloyal inhabitants of New Mexico, for the Territorial officers before the war had been Southern sympathizers and several of them, including the Territorial secretary, openly joined the Confederate cause upon the outbreak of the war. However, the historian says, that while the people of Arizona were disloyal, those of New Mexico were loyal, with this exception: "The mass of the people of the Territory, a large majority of whom lived in the Rio Grande Valley, evidently were rather apathetic in their attachment to the Union and some of their former Territorial officers were bitterly antagonistic" and "two of the Armijo brothers of Albuquerque, positive rebel sympathizers, placed their stores of merchandise, valued at $200,000, at the disposal of General Sibley's troops." However, this may be, the Confederate government established the state of "Arizona," consisting of what are now New Mexico and Arizona rather significant when it is considered that Arizona has just refused to a reunion of the two territories under the same name, an evident manifestation that it is as lukewarm towards the Union today as it was in 1862.

General Sibley was opposed by Gen. Canby at Fort Craig and a small force at Fort Union, while the Federal authorities had gathered large stores

UNFORTUNATE FOR NEW MEXICO.

There are evidently in this great country many people of many minds. It is also apparent that Arizona did herself no good in turning down the joint statehood proposition and that New Mexico in some quarters will have to suffer for this foolish action on the part of the Arizona brethren. Of late, many editorials in various sections of the country have appeared containing more or less detrimental statements concerning this Territory. That sort of advertising cannot and will not do any good. Quite the reverse, it will prove of harm. It must be combated and that thoroughly and constantly. For instance, the Evening Dispatch, published at Columbus, Ohio, a paper of considerable circulation gives the two territories rather unenviable notoriety in the following editorial:

"Although the people of New Mexico voted for joint statehood with Arizona, the latter Territory refused to concur. If Arizona wants to remain out in the cold, certainly the rest of the country can stand it. It has but little to gain, and something to lose, by admitting any such fragment of a community to equal authority among the states and a share in the national government. A more rational method of disposing of the pair of cactus deserts would be to annex New Mexico to Colorado and Arizona to Utah, if they refuse to be joined, for neither is justly entitled to statehood alone. Both together have not one-tenth the population of Ohio.

"The persistent efforts to secure separate statehood is based upon a desire to secure for the railroads four more members of the United States Senate, to be controlled by the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific Railroads. This scheme is perfectly manifest. And the representative of any eastern state betrays his constituency if he participates in this palpable injustice.

"The two territories joined would make a small but passable state, considering that they are the last remnant of territory left and there is nothing to throw in with them. That two might present such a variety of interests that railroad control would be impossible. But to add two more to the 'rotten boroughs' like Montana, Idaho and Nevada is a gross imposition on all the older and larger states."

The language above is not only not based on fact but is, as far as the description is concerned, extravagantly overdrawn even for falsehood, but it has gone out to the people and has been read by many thousands who will not be reached by the details of the statements thereon which will be made by New Mexico newspapers. As far as Arizona is concerned the citizenship of the Sunshine Territory need not care. The railroad and mining corporations, the federal officials and the combines opposed to joint statehood have cooked the broth and therefore they should cut it no matter how hot, how bitter or how unpalatable. With New Mexico the case is different. The harm has been done and the worst of it is that it may continue for some time to militate against the advancement and progress of this commonwealth.

GUARD AGAINST EPIDEMICS.

It is reported that smallpox in a virulent form is general in the republic south of New Mexico and that typhus also is raging in epidemic form and is demanding many victims. There would be no danger to this territory from this if quarantine and sanitary laws were rigidly enforced, but unfortunately they are not. The territorial board of health while it has ample powers has been negligently remembered in a financial way by the Territory, something in accordance with the ideas promulgated of late by the Albuquerque Fakir Journal in all matters except where it itself and its allied interests are concerned. In consequence, it is no wonder that Indians from one pueblo, for instance, meander into another pueblo in which smallpox, diphtheria and other contagious diseases exist and then come to the towns and cities to spread the contagion. Local authorities like those at Carlsbad, are coping very ably with an epidemic of diphtheria, and have closed the schools on its account but few local authorities are competent enough to do this, or as the case at Santa Fe, are merely negligent. Until this state of affairs can be remedied, citizens should do all in their power to enforce sanitary measures, clean back yards and alleys, report violations of the health laws and insist that after such violations are reported the municipal or territorial authorities take cognizance of them. There should be general vaccination of school children and every safeguard possible should be thrown around the public health. Should smallpox break out in New Mexico it would cost less than ten thousands of dollars, for no tourist or healthseeker will go to a town or village in which he knows smallpox or other contagious diseases exist or where health laws are laxly observed or not enforced at all. Fortunately, thus far, Santa Fe is without any contagious disease but winter has come early and may be long and severe; this is a condition that favors sickness and epidemics for people will house themselves closely, will pay no attention to ventilation and weaken themselves by having too much warmth in the houses and then exposing themselves to cold and wind. If it were not for the wonderful salubrious air and the bacteria killing sunshine that prevails in Santa Fe year in and year out, it would suffer far more from neglect of its health authorities than it does or is likely to suffer. Nevertheless, every precaution should be taken, and every resident can help in that direction.

Those New Yorkers who have for several years been trying to get Senator Platt to resign, might get a pointer on how to bring him to book by having a heart-to-heart talk with Mrs. Platt.

The raking over he got for his legalized boss suggestion has convinced Secretary Bonaparte of the necessity of labeling all the jokes he makes public.

PAJARITO PARK
CLIFF DWELLINGS

Communal Habitations of an Ancient People.

REACHED FROM SANTA FE

Unique Sights Worth Seeing
--Stone Lions of Cochiti.

Under the head of "Pajarito Ruins--Their Accessibility," the magazine, "Records of the Past," published at Washington, D. C., and the acknowledged authority in the United States on matters archaeological, publishes a finely illustrated article from the pen of Hugh H. Harris, range rider on the Jemez Forest Reserve, and formerly on the editorial staff of the New Mexican. The article is of especial interest to Santa Fe which is the gateway to the region described and is herewith reproduced:

Six months of continual riding, as Forest Ranger in the Jemez Forest Reserve, has enabled me to see only a portion of the vast number of archaeological ruins in the Pajarito region. Every new canon explored, every new mesa opened by the extension of the system of forest service trails, and each out of the way place chanced upon shows its treasures of cave dwelling, communal house, watch tower or some relic of the cliff dwelling period.

Puye, Tsankaawi, Otowi, Navakwi, Thirege or more commonly called Pajarito, and the Frijoles have been brought to the attention of the public more than other regions, but to me there are sections far more interesting than these. Along the same general lines, of course, and possibly smaller in individual extent, there are groups of ruins within an easy day's trip that have apparently rarely if ever been visited by Americans. Here and there some Indian in hope of gain may possibly have done some rule scratching, but in the main these ruins are untouched. On the other hand the better known ruins show the signs of a good deal of modern research, or in other cases mere vandalism.

Peculiar Features of Some Ruins.

Some of these sections show an amazing number of ruins of all types in a remarkably small area. About two miles southwest of Puye are cliffs containing numerous cave dwellings. These dwellings do not seem to be as regular in size as the average cliff but vary from the smallest to the largest sizes I have seen. In one of these dwellings I took refuge during a stormy night with no saddle and pack horses, and found that it afforded ample room. It had been fenced in front, in years gone by, and used by sheep herders as a stable for their pack animals. This house, of course, is of unusual size, the average being either circular or in the shape of a rectangle generally with a dome roof and 4 ft. to 5 ft. across, when rectangular, and only slightly longer in the greatest dimension.

The crests of the cliffs in question are in the form of a narrow mesa. The mesa is broken in three places, practically forming four small mesas. Two of these sub-mesas contain communal houses several hundred rooms in extent each. They are in unusually good condition and the rough hewn rectangular stones form heaps some 15 ft. above the surrounding ground. The shapes of the room and of the entire structure can easily be seen. They are even distinct enough to show without excavating that the structures were several stories in height, the lower story containing a much larger number of rooms than the one above it.

To the north of these houses on the first cliff, and easily accessible on horseback or on foot, are two additional large communal houses, while on the slight ridge to the south, to which even any class of vehicles can be driven are two more houses. This gives a total of six large communal houses, uncounted smaller ones and watch towers, and hundreds of cave dwellings within a very easy day's trip.

Another interesting feature of these dwellings is that they all seem in about the same state of repair, and not as at Otowi, and some of the other points showing a disparity of ages. This apparently indicates that a large part of these ruins if not all were inhabited at the same time. If so it is hard to picture even what a busy hive of activity this section must have been.

Where Dwellings Are Located. It is especially fortunate that this group is situated as near as it is for those who desire to make a quick trip to the ancient abodes. The Puye ruins, previously most visited, are on the Indian reservation, and it is necessary to obtain permits to visit them, often necessitating a delay. All ruins in the forest reserve can be visited without permit, although excavating or any form of vandalism is strictly forbidden.

Unusual interest has been taken this year by the citizens of Santa Fe and Espanola in this region. Recognizing the value from a tourist's standpoint the business men have started a movement to advertise this great section as well as to put the roads and trails in better condition. In addition to this the Santa Fe Archaeological Society has taken on new life, and has added many new names to the membership roll. Its membership now embraces practically all of the prominent people of the city, and a number are very much interested in the work.

Scores of parties have been formed to visit the cliffs, and many tourists have also availed themselves of the opportunity offered to see the region. The number of people who have seen and will see the cliffs before the season is over far exceeds those of any previous year.

The cooperation of the forest service has been asked, and it is probable that a system of forest reserve trails will be made bearing in mind the sightseer and archaeologist. The ranger's cabins will also probably be built this winter, and be made large enough for the joint use of ranger and tourist.

Interesting Spots Easily Reached. At present a large portion of the ruins, both in the reserve and the Vigil grant, north of the Frijoles canon is easily accessible by road or trail. To a embodies the main portion of the country occupied by the Tewa tribes in this section.

Rito de los Frijoles (little river of the beans) and the Keres region contains the stone lions of Cochiti, the painted cave and other points of interest. It is to this region that efforts are to be directed to make it more accessible.

The main entrance up to the present time has been down White Rock canon, along the Rio Grande to the mouth of the Frijoles canon. Then over the steep Navaho war trail across the high mesa and then down again into the Frijoles canon. This trail leads over lava beds and is dangerous and difficult for both the tourist and the animals. A committee from the Santa Fe Society went over this trail with Professor Hewett and decided to put it in better repair for next season.

I have recently been looking over the country above, and have decided that a much easier trail is available across the tops of the mesas. It will be no longer, better time can be made on it, it is not dangerous, and the traveler will pass several other ruins of interest. This will be reported to the society in the near future.

Will Some Day Attract Thousands of Tourists.

Recognizing the fact that if this region is ever properly advertised to tourists, or known as it should be by archaeologists, thousands will visit it annually, there are numerous people who have made themselves familiar with parts of the region, and are ready to act as guides.

One can now secure conveyance at Santa Fe and drive to the ruins, or take the train to Espanola and go in from there, or still, if preferable, arrange with the Indian guides for horse or burro outfits. Espanola will enable one to go to the ruins and return in the same day, but few who have any interest in these wonders will be satisfied with such a short stay. A night or so spent around the cheery camp fire, where tales of the ancient race are told, will add much to the pleasure of the trip.

It is a matter of congratulation that the forest service is protecting these rich stores of archaeology, and the tourist who makes a western trip without a sight of this interesting region has in my opinion missed one of the best attractions in the west.

PRETTY WOMAN
CRUELLY MURDERED

Believed Men Who Killed Her Sweetheart Cut Her Throat and Crushed Her Head.

Nogales, Ariz., Nov. 21.—No trace has as yet been found of the murderers of pretty Victoria Vasquez, a woman of the half world whose horribly mutilated body was discovered a few days ago in the little room she occupied in the red light district of Nogales. The Nogales police are working on the theory that the crime was committed by three natives who had been arrested on suspicion of being the slayers of Philip Woodin, a gambler who had won her affections and who was killed in her presence three months ago at a mining camp near Nogales. The Vasquez woman had evidently been dead fully three weeks before the fact of her murder was discovered. Her throat was cut from ear to ear and her head had been beaten in with a flat iron which was found covered with blood near the body. Overturned chairs, a shattered plaster statue and blood spattered walls bore mute testimony of a terrific struggle for life on the part of the murdered woman. The supposition is that in spite of the gaping wound in her throat she had fought desperately and did not desist until she fell from sheer loss of blood and the brutal murderers ended her life with cruel blows from the flatiron.

Victoria Vasquez was a beautiful woman in spite of her dissipation and she had admirers by the score. When Woodin appeared upon the scene he became enamored of the woman's charms and induced her to leave with him to the mining camp where he was finally stabbed to death by five Mexicans. One night while the couple were in a tent together, the five men rushed in and killed her gambler lover before her eyes before she realized what they were doing. When she came to her senses she screamed for help, and her shrieks aroused the little town. The murderers had slain their victim and made their escape before her agonized cries brought forth assistance.

Three Mexicans suspected of the crime were arrested later from descriptions given by the woman, who was taken into custody by the officers as a witness in the case. They were released about three weeks ago when their accuser said she could not positively identify them, and the authorities believe that she was murdered shortly afterwards by the same trio.

INDIANS CARING FOR THEIR SHEEP

Interesting Sketch on Red Men As Livestock Raisers in Southwest.

A correspondent of the Sheep and Goat Breeder, published in Chicago, recently made a trip of inspection through the Navajo Reservation and through sections of New Mexico and Arizona where Indians under the control of the government are sheep and goat raisers. His observations show that the Indians are improving greatly in the methods of taking care of these animals and are carrying out the regulations proclaimed by the Indian Office in such matters. In giving results the correspondent sums up as follows:

On a recent trip through New Mexico and Arizona the writer was interested in the sheep dips in that part of the country erected and maintained by the government through the Indian Bureau and Commissioner Leupp. The one great source of life and living of the Indians in the Southwest is through their flocks of goats and sheep. Uncle Sam has gone to thousands of dollars of expense to erect these dips where the Indians may dip, or have dipped, their flocks without one cent cost to Mr. Lo. Of course, the reasons for these dips are: First, to prevent the dying off of thousands of sheep and goats which are attacked by scabies, ticks and other diseases. Second, to improve the quality and yield of wool, thereby assisting in a way these desert inhabiting Indians. Third, to show and teach the Indians how to care properly for their flocks so that the most may be attained from their sheep, and also to prove that the dipping process at proper periods begets financial results.

These dips are within the jurisdiction of Indian agents and are under the direct supervision of an official sent out from the Bureau of Animal Industry who sees that each dip is properly put up and the dipping fluid, which is made of sulphur, lime and oil, is rightly mixed and used at the proper temperature. He also counts the sheep dipped and instructs the Indians in different ways how to improve the health of their flock.

The government farmer in the Laguna district dipped 20,000 sheep twice in ten days this summer. It cost the government $175 for dipping material. The dip cost $250. The Indians furnished wood for the boiler and the necessary labor to operate the dip. The dip was made by Indians, Uncle Sam furnishing most of the material. The swimming vat is of cement and will last for years. The draining pens are of lumber and the dip is enclosed by a stone wall.

On the Navajo Reservation, under Mr. Perry's supervision, there are four large plants, one at Ft. Defiance; one at Tohatchi School; one at Wheatfields, forty miles north of the agency; one at Ganado. The cost to the government of construction and material was approximately $3200. The cost to operate them will be an additional $1000.

These dips are so located that they are supposed to be in the centers of the largest sheep districts on the reservation. Educated Indians were operating most of these dips. When I was there something like 600,000 head of sheep and goats had been dipped. The Indians were skeptical as to results at first, but now readily comply with the agent's instructions to prevent themselves with their flocks and have their sheep dipped twice. At the first dipping each man or woman in charge of the flock is given a slip of paper telling him to return in ten to fourteen days. It is no uncommon thing to see at these dips Navajos who have come for seventy miles with hundreds of sheep. They must remain near the dip for over ten days, the time necessary allowed between dipplings, and it is an interesting sight to see these "Bedouins of the Desert" in camp on the hills adjacent to the dips, waiting their turn.

The sheep are led into a long vat of the dipping fluid and after being entirely submerged by an Indian with a forked stick, (see illustration) swims 100 feet, being in the vat about two minutes. This fluid is heated by steam to a temperature of 90 to 100 degrees for lambs, and 100 to 110 degrees for old sheep.

It was estimated that at least 1,000,000 sheep would be dipped at these four dips this year. The flocks will be dipped again next year. On the other side of the mountains, in Superintendent Shelton's district, twenty-five small dipping vats have been running for two years, and much improvement has been noticed in the flocks. Their sheep were badly infected with disease, and even the Indians—I learned by inquiring of them—are very much elated already over the improved condition of their flocks and the anticipated increase in amount and quality of wool which will be shorn this fall.

MINES AND MINING.

San Juan County.

Last week drilling was started on the new oil location near Farmington and when the drill was down 55 feet it passed through conglomerate carrying gold. The drill then passed into shale and struck gas. The drill is going down at the rate of 100 feet a day.

Chaves County.

The Roswell Company, drilling two miles east of Roswell, has struck another pocket of oil at a depth of 1551 feet similar to those struck at 924 and at 1128 feet. However, the oil last struck is of a thin, greenish color and resembles kerosene while that struck before was a black, thick oil.

Socorro County.

Sixty men are at present employed on the Graphic at Magdalena and this force is soon to be doubled. Although $200,000 was paid for the mine by eastern people two years ago it has already paid for itself. At Kelly 100 men are employed and a number of mines that have been idle are to resume in the near future. The Mine Development Company is pushing work on its claims which cover 260 acres. The group extends from 7,500 feet along the summit of the Magdalena range. Three 8-hour shifts are being worked on the tunnel. A large stope of carnosite ore has been exposed in the workings on the east side. The tunnel is being driven, however, from the west side of the ridge to connect with the south workings that were commenced on the east side and driven on the ore horizon to the south-west. Shipping is to be commenced as soon as the workings are connected.

SUGAR BEET FACTORY FOR SAN JUAN

Will Be Located at Durango, Colorado, Providing 1200 Acres of New Mexico Land is Planted.

Durango, Colo., Nov. 24.—Plans are well under way for the establishment of a sugar beet factory at this place providing the farmers in San Juan County, New Mexico, will plant 1200 acres of land in the sugar producing vegetable. Representatives of a sugar manufacturing company, which contemplates the erection of the factory, visited this town recently and then went to Aztec, where a meeting of farmers and business men was held. It is proposed to erect the factory at once, providing the farmers consent to do their part.

The sugar factory people want guarantees of 5,000 acres of beets within a radius of fifty-five miles of Durango. It is said that 3,800 acres can be obtained in Montezuma Valley, Bayfield and around Durango, while San Juan County is asked for 1200 acres. Of this amount about 400 acres has been signed for around Aztec and Flora Vista, with additions being made every day. Committees of Aztec and Flora Vista business men are doing special work in getting land signed. Cedar Hill and Riverside will come into line also. The acreage must be secured as soon as possible to get the factory built for next year's crop.

With the beet sugar business on a sound basis and past the experimental stage, with the help given the grower in improved machinery and methods by the factory, an average of twenty tons per acre should be secured. These at $5 per ton on board cars, and deducting an estimated cost of $35 per acre for growing, leaves $65 profit per acre.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health is Worth Saving, and Some Santa Fe People Know How to Save It.

Many Santa Fe people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger when all diseases and aches and pains due to weak kidneys can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is the statement of a Santa Fe citizen who has regained good health by the use of this remedy.

Alberto Garcia, ex-police officer of San Francisco Street, says: "When a man has attacks of backache for four or five days at a time and these attacks extend over a period of two years, he must arrive at this conclusion, he is subject to some form of kidney complaint. In my case other symptoms plainly indicated that I required a medicine to strengthen my weakened kidneys, and allay inflammation of those organs. This led me to go to Ireland's Pharmacy for Doan's Kidney Pills. They certainly helped me a great deal and I am pleased to recommend them."

WINE OF CARDUI

LIVE STOCK IN KANSAS CITY

Run Fairly Good Last Week—Shortage of Cars Delay Range Shipments.

Special to the New Mexican.

Kansas City Stockyards, Nov. 24, 1906.—The supply of cattle last week was fairly liberal at 65,000 head, including 9,000 calves, and the run of 15,000 today indicates that there will also be a good run this week. Considerable stuff remains to come from the range country and there is still complaint of lack of cars, so that we shall probably have fairly good runs for three or four weeks yet. The market closed last week with a net gain of 10 to 15 cents on everything except medium to common short fed steers, which buyers neglected account of their poor killing qualities. The market is about steady today, stockers and feeders firm. Choice fed cattle are selling highest of the fall season now, which encourages feeders, and the demand from the country is the best it has been for more than a month. Colorado killing steers are selling at $3.75 to $4.50, New Mexico and Panhandle killers at $3.50 to $4.15, range stockers $2.75 to $4.00, feeders $3.50 to $4.00, Colorado cows $2.60 to $3.35, heifers up to $3.30, New Mexico and Panhandle cows $2.50 to $3.25, light veals up to $6.50, heavy calves $3.25 to $3.50, bulls $2.00 to $2.60. Prices on all range stuff are the highest now of any time this season.

Sheep runs have been liberal, and the market is 15 to 20 cents lower than a week ago. Medium to common range stuff has predominated, and only a small percentage of the supply has been desirable killing stuff. Run today is 6,000 head, nearly half of which is feeding lambs, market stronger. Utah and Colorado killing lambs have sold lately at $6.40 to $7.05, best fed lambs $7.30, range yearlings $6.00, wethers up to $5.50, including some Colorados today at that price, ewes $4.50 to $5.25. Some medium to common range wethers have sold at $4.50 to $4.75. Feeding lambs bring $5.25 to $6.00, feeding and breeding sheep $4.00 to $5.00.

BRIDGE DISCUSSION WAXES WARM

Farmington People Believe a Convention Should Be Called to Settle Question on December 1.

Reports from Farmington are that the business men of that place believe a convention should be called to convene there on December 1 for the purpose of discussing and deciding upon the location and plans of public bridges in San Juan County. A call for the convention has been issued. The attempts by various communities to have bridges located at various points in the county is said to be the cause for the suggestion of this method out of the difficulty.

COWBOY TAKEN 150 MILES OVERLAND TO DOCTOR.

Ben Cravey was brought to the home of his mother, Mrs. T. G. Cox, at Orogrande, on a stretcher, recently, suffering from internal injuries caused by a horse falling upon him. He was working on the VXT ranch, 150 miles from Magdalena, and was riding out on the range with a fellow ranch hand, when his horse stepped in a hole and fell. He lay under a tree for four days, and then was taken in a wagon 150 miles to a doctor, suffering intense pain meanwhile.

The public is showing its appreciation of the attractive circulars sent out by the New Mexican Printing Company, in regard to rubber stamps.

DRIVER UPSET BUGGY WOMEN RECEIVED INJURIES

Reports from Farmington are that while returning from the Atxet ruins in a buggy recently Mrs. Lord of that place was thrown from the vehicle and one of her arms was dislocated. Mrs. Behrend and Mrs. Bero were severely bruised. Mr. Bero was driving and in turning the horses aside to keep from driving through a mudhole, the wheels ran up on a bank and the rig upset. Fortunately the horses did not run away.

FLORES HELD TO GRAND JURY FOR RESISTING AN OFFICER

Roy, N. M., Nov. 24.—The case of the Territory vs. Flores was called before Tuesday of the Peace Seledon Ollivas recently and the defendant pleaded not guilty to resisting an officer on election day. Flores was bound over to await the action of the next grand jury in the sum of $800 waiving examination. Another case charging the same offense was then called and after waiving examination, the defendant was again bound over to the grand jury. His bond in both cases was fixed at $800 which he furnished.

Cured of Bright's Disease.
Mr. Robert O. Burke, Elmore, N. Y., writes: "Before I started to use Foley's Kidney Cure I had to get up from twelve to twenty times a night, and I was all bloated up with dropsy and my eyesight was so impaired I could scarcely see one of my family across the room. I had given up hope of living, when a friend recommended Foley's Kidney Cure. One 50 cent bottle worked wonders and before I had taken the third bottle the dropsy had gone, as well as all other symptoms of Bright's Disease. Ireland's Pharmacy."

POWER PLANT PROJECT FOR RIO PENASCO.

Artesia, N. M., Nov. 24.—Artesia business men at a recent mass meeting placed the stamp of their approval on the proposed power plant to be erected on the Penasco river at a point fifty miles west of here. The object of the enterprise is to obtain power for operating factories, lighting plants, pumping stations, and other enterprises in which motive power is used. Dr. R. M. Ross, of Artesia, cashier of the First National Bank, was the originator of the project. The estimated cost of the power plant is $250,000. Missouri capitalists have been interested in the matter, and will put up most of the money for the concern.

This is Worth Remembering. As no one is immune, every person should remember that Foley's Kidney Cure will cure any case of kidney or bladder trouble that is not beyond the reach of medicine. Ireland's Pharmacy.

When the tip of a dog's nose is cold and moist, that dog is not sick. A feverish dry nose means sickness with a dog. And so with the human lips. Dry, cracked and colorless lips mean feverishness, and are as well ill appearing. To have beautiful, pink, velvet-like lips, apply at bedtime a coating of Dr. Shoop's Green Salve. It will soften and heal any skin ailment. Get a free, trial box, at our store, and be convinced. Large nickel capped glass jars, 25 cents. Fischer Drug Company.

Dancing Proves Fatal.

Many men and women catch colds at dances which terminate in pneumonia and consumption. After exposure, if Foley's Honey and Tar is taken it will break up a cold and no serious results need be feared. Refuse any but the genuine in a yellow package. Ireland's Pharmacy.

Fortune for a Cat Squelcher

"A fortune," said Mr. Crompton, "awaits the man who can invent some simple, inexpensive and efficacious way of keeping cats from howling at night, some effective anticat that any man could bring into use, in any neighborhood, on occasion."

"In this advanced age throwing bottles and bootjacks and old shoes at the offending cats seems a crude and unsentimental method and then it is ineffectual. Why, I have known a cat to be hit square in the midriff and actually knocked off a fence by a large and heavy and fairly thrown Hessian—or it might have been a Wellington—boot and not only to escape being annihilated or even silenced by the same, but even to emit at the instant of the boot's impinging upon it shrieks louder than any to which it had given vent before. Recovering itself from the ground and scrambling up on the fence again, it gave forth long, waving, ear-piercing, blood-curdling, hair-raising screams, to which all previous screams seemed but as the gentle murmuring of a lute."

"No. You see, the cats have got so used to boots and bottles and bootjacks and bricks—singular, sort of, isn't it, that all the things we throw at cats begin with the same letter, the letter 'b'?" Ever think of that?—have got so used to them that they pay no attention to them whatever unless they are actually hit, and how often does that happen?"

"I forget how many tons of lead it takes actually to kill a soldier in battle, and the proportion of misses to hits is about the same—larger probably, really—in throwing things at cats. Think of the frightful waste of ammunition in this warfare and then consider that in this war on cats when we do hit the mark it only makes the cat scream the louder!"

"Oh, my, no! Bottles, bootjacks, boots and bricks are more than mediaeval, they are positively ancient and worse than useless as a means of warfare on howling cats. True, we derive a certain satisfaction from hurling these missiles, but that is the only result; they do no good, and what we really want now is something effective."

"There is the cat guard, composed of strips of wood with long, sharp spikes sticking up through, which we nail on the tops of fences to keep cats away, a good thing as far as it goes, but there's the rub; it doesn't go far enough. We live for a year in one neighborhood where everybody around puts cat guards on his fences and where we hear no cats, but then we may move to some other neighborhood where nobody puts up cat guards and the cats reign supreme."

"I won't attempt to describe to you their wild wallings and sweeping screams. I couldn't, for that matter, if I tried. And why should I anyway, when we—that is to say, the people living in the block around this range of back yards—are here to suffer? When that midnight—or it may be 1:30 a. m.—concert begins, the whole block wakes and shudders and then gets mad and some dwellers there are around that try to stop it."

"I hear a window go up somewhere and I know that somebody is sticking his head out, and then I hear him saying to the cats as fiercely as he can between his clenched teeth: 'Bast! bast! bast!' but even in my anguish this always makes me laugh, for you might as well try to stop a comet by sitting at it, and, in fact, I think it makes the cats laugh, too."

"Then pretty soon, the cats keeping on howling, we hear something slam against the fence with an old-time, familiar clatter—it sounds like a boot or a brush or a bottle, thrown probably by some old man sticking to old-time ways, but as far as producing results is concerned, it might as well have been thrown up in the air. And then—"

"Gerzoon!"

"That sounded as if it might have been a chair or a table or even a refrigerator or something like that, for it struck the fence with a mighty crash and shook every cat off to the ground, and then for a brief space there was silence, but a minute later they were all up again, screaming their wild, walling, waving scream louder than ever."

"And then somewhere down the block—bless you, my brother, I'd like to know you and shake you by the hand—there is a man who fires a gun—it may be only a pistol, but it sounds like a gun—to frighten the cats."

"It's singular about the effect of that gun—sometimes the cats only howl the louder when they hear it, but sometimes at the report they stop. And that has suggested to my next door neighbor, a somewhat sanguinary man, that we might rig up a gatling gun in the yard or a mitrailleuse or something of that sort, where it would sweep the fence tops and so actually rid these yards of cats forever, but when we came to think this over seriously, reflecting that maybe the maker of the cannon could give no guaranty about where the bullets would stop, we reluctantly gave this up."

"So now we are practically right where we were, with the cats still howling. And is there no inventor who can rise to this occasion, and not for our benefit alone, but for the benefit of all and to his own great profit as well devise something that will stop cats howling nights?"—Chicago Chronicle.

"I don't quite like this hat you trimmed for me. Can you alter the arrangement while I wait?"

"Certainly, Miss Hilda. I am very sorry it did not give satisfaction."

"Oh, there isn't much the matter!" and the young girl proceeded to instruct the milliner as to the alterations she desired.

"If you will sit down a few minutes, Miss Hilda, I will take the hat to the workroom and put it right."

Miss Hilda, however, could not sit still for long. She moved about the showroom, examining the goods with critical eye and, while thus engaged, the curtains which shut off this department from the shop opened and a lady and gentleman entered.

The former was tall and dignified, albeit young and beautiful.

Bestowing the merest glance upon Hilda, she said, in somewhat haughty tones:

"Will you please show me some sailor hats?"

"Certainly, madam. White or black?"

"Oh, of course—white!"

It was easy to select a goodly number from the pile on the table, and Hilda handed one after another, trying to make some apropos remark respecting each.

But a sudden confusion overwhelmed her on discovering that the man's eyes were fixed upon her face. Could he be anyone she ought to know? Surely she had never seen him before. If so, what must he think?

Luckily at that moment the milliner returned, and Hilda made a sign to her to attend to her new customer while she herself slipped into the background, feeling rather hot and uncomfortable.

When the two had departed, she said:

"They took me for one of your assistants, so I—"

"Oh!" the tone was quite shocked, but Hilda laughed gayly.

Meanwhile the other lady and her brother were riding home in a smart little dogcart.

"You know, Theo, there is nothing for you but a rich marriage," she was saying. "Where should I be now if I had not married well?"

"Exactly so!"

An irritated expression came into his eyes. "It is so different for a woman, though," he said. "And moreover, you were safely married before the crash came."

"Yes, thank goodness! But I don't understand the other part of your remark."

"Why, a man ought to be able to fend for himself, without wanting his wife to keep him. No, I can't do it!"

"Can't do what?"

"Make a mercenary marriage."

"Why, dear boy, only this morning you said that you had never been in love—that one woman was the same as another to you, and that you did not care whom you married so long as she was passable to look at!"

"Yes, but I am not going to marry; I intend to have just one little fling for the next few months while my cash lasts, and then go—oh—to the Klondike, the Philippines—anywhere."

"Theo! Are you mad?"

"No—just recovering my senses and my self-respect."

"Everyone says that Miss Everaley is very pretty, and she is fabulously rich."

"Oh, hang Miss Everaley!" And mentally, he continued: "But that little milliner! What glorious eyes she has, and what exquisite coloring, and what a mouth! The idea of such a divinity having to earn her living in a place like that!"

"At all events, you will see her next week, and then you can judge for yourself."

"See—whom?"

"Why, Miss Everaley, of course. Were we not speaking of her?"

She would have been hugely disturbed during the ensuing days. He haunted the little market town of Norton until he felt that he knew every pane of glass in every one of the windows, and before the draper's he planted himself for a full hour at a time every morning, reading the various tickets, examining the goods, and now and then venturing boldly inside to buy a pair of gloves or a necktie, until the proprietor began to regard him as an amiable lunatic.

"And to think she is a shop girl!" he said. "Her face, her voice, her accent are all perfect! Of course her dress must be—they have to dress well to keep up the honor of the establishment. Oh, hang it all! Why is fate so unkind? I know Miss Hilda will be wild if she gets a glimpse of the state of affairs, but—either that girl shall be my wife or I will remain a bachelor."

On reaching Mrs. Bertram's house, one morning he found that lady in a great state of excitement.

"I have seen her!" were her first words.

"And who is 'her'?"

"Miss Everaley. She is a lovely little thing, Theo, and—she is fancy free, for her own mother said so."

"To you! On first acquaintance?"

"No, indeed! I happened to overhear a remark she was making to an old friend of hers. I went to return their call to-day, and though I only had two minutes of the girl's company, I am convinced she would satisfy even you."

"Clearly Defined."

"What," asked the very young person, "is your idea of a dude?"

"A dude," answered the observer of things, "is a young gentleman who tries to behave in a ladylike manner."—Chicago Daily News.

'Twas Daphne stealing blackberries Across my garden wall!

Though stained were slender fingers And pointing lips with red— 'Twas Daphne blushed more deeply And hung her dainty head.

Then gravely I exacted The penalty incurred; A kiss for every berry; Witnesses: Bee and Bird.
