According to results of a survey released May 20 by a private business school (Universidad Argentina de la Empresa- UADE), average wages in the manufacturing sector last month surpassed March levels by 15%. The April figure (US$443 per month) was 3.5% higher than the 12-month average, and 4% below the average for April 1990. The average wage for bank employees in April this year ($570) was 5.7% less than the previous 12-month average, 2.9% less than the March 1991 average, and 8% less than the April 1990 figure.
