5-30-1991

Argentina: Decree Abolishes Guaranteed Employment Stability In Civil Service

Barbara Khol

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalrepository.unm.edu/notisur

Recommended Citation
https://digitalrepository.unm.edu/notisur/6635

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Latin America Digital Beat (LADB) at UNM Digital Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in NotiSur by an authorized administrator of UNM Digital Repository. For more information, please contact amywinter@unm.edu.
Argentina: Decree Abolishes Guaranteed Employment Stability In Civil Service

by Barbara Khol
Category/Department: General
Published: Thursday, May 30, 1991

On May 27, government officials described as "revolutionary" a decree abolishing employment stability for public administration employees. President Carlos Menem said that with the creation of the National Administrative Profession System (SINAPA), nepotism and corruption in public sector administration have come to an end. The new system, similar to counterparts in the US, France and Britain, affects 80,000 public employees (excluding employees of state-run companies) who will be reclassified in the next 60 days. Automatic promotions every two years were eliminated, and an evaluation system was installed for new employees and promotions. In addition, grades or levels were reduced from 24 to six. (Basic data from AFP, 05/27/91)

-- End --