On Nov. 7, the Justice Ministry's women's legal defense office requested that the Interior Ministry launch an investigation to determine who was responsible for producing a series of pamphlets which "promote sexual crimes and violence against women." The pamphlets were distributed at the University of Costa Rica law school in San Jose. Next, a women's group filed charges against a group of law students believed to be responsible for the pamphlets. (Basic data from Agence France-Presse, 11/07/91)
