On Feb. 6, representatives from the UN Development Programme (UNDP) and the governments of Costa Rica and Denmark finalized a US$1.6 million agreement for construction of low-income housing. Of the total, Copenhagen will contribute US$1.5 million, and the UNDP, US$100,00. UNDP representative Bruno Guandalini said water and electricity is to be installed in all new homes built under the five-year program. Construction will begin in Limon department, Puntarenas, and the Alajuelita district of San Jose. (Basic data from Agencia Centroamericana de Noticias- Spanish news service EFE, 02/06/92)
