On March 2 in Vienna, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) development fund approved a US$250,000 loan to support cholera prevention efforts in Central America. The loan is part of a broad-based prevention program organized by the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) for Latin America. The loan is earmarked for purchase of medical equipment and supplies for hospitals, and the training of sanitation workers. (Basic data from Spanish news service EFE, 03/02/92)
