

Ambassador Patrick Duddy

The Possible Decline of Venezuela's Hugo Chavez and the Bolivarian Revolution

Monday

February 27

12-1:00 p.m.

Latin American & Iberian Institute
(801 Yasle Blvd NE)

Ambassador Duddy, who served as the U.S. Ambassador to Venezuela for both President Bush and President Obama, will discuss the current political situation in Venezuela following the recent opposition primary to select an opponent to face President Hugo Chavez in Venezuela's October presidential contest. He will also review those elements of Venezuela's current economic and social challenges likely to figure prominently in this year's election campaign and the role of anti-Americanism in Chavez's political rhetoric.

Light refreshments will be served.
