

CNA Program Response to Comments from ARP 2017-2018

One of the strengths of this program include the advisement process: any student wishing to enroll in the Nursing assistant program must meet with program coordinator (s) prior to enrollment so course and program requirements and additional costs can be discussed with the students prior to their enrollment in the course. During this advisement session topics as career and educational goals are discussed as well as any student identified barriers they may encounter that may impact their ability to complete the program. This process has shown that completion numbers has increased incrementally over the semesters.

One of the weaknesses is the licensure rate.
