The Authors

Barry Furrow is a Professor of Law at the Widener University School of Law and Director of its Health Law Institute. He received his law degree from Harvard Law School and his undergraduate degree from Harvard College. Before going into teaching, Professor Furrow practiced law in Boston, Massachusetts. He has taught on the faculties of the law schools of the University of Michigan, the University of Detroit, American University, the University of North Carolina, and George Mason University. His publications include Malpractice in Psychotherapy and more than four dozen law review articles and reviews.

Thomas L. Greaney is a Professor of Law at Saint Louis University, St. Louis, Missouri. In 1993 he received a Fulbright Fellowship to study competition law in the European Community. Prior to joining the faculty he was a trial lawyer and Assistant Chief of Antitrust Division of the United States Department of Justice (1975–1985). In 1985–1986 he was a Victor Kramer Fellow and visiting lecturer at Yale University. He received his law degree from Harvard Law School in 1973 and his B.A. magna cum laude from Wesleyan University in 1970.
The Authors

Sandra H. Johnson is a Professor of Law at the Center for Health Law Studies of the St. Louis University School of Law with joint appointments at the School of Medicine and the School of Public Health. She is a past president of the American Society of Law, Medicine & Ethics and director of the Mayday Project on Legal and Regulatory Constraints on Effective Pain Relief at the Society. Professor Johnson is a member of the American Bar Association Coordinating Group on Bioethics and Law; a Fellow of the Hastings Center; and past chair of the Section on Law, Medicine and Health Care of the Association of American Law Schools. In addition to having presented endowed lectures at several universities in the United States and Canada, she has been a consultant or project member for projects at the Institute of Medicine, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, the Federation of States Medical Boards, the New York State Public Health Council, the National Center for State Courts, and the American Bar Association Commission on Legal Problems of the Elderly, among other private and government organizations.

Timothy Stoltzfus Jost holds the Newton D. Baker, Baker & Hostetler Chair in the College of Law and is a Professor in the Division of Health Services Management and Policy at the Ohio State University. He is the author of numerous articles and books on health law and policy and was a member of the State Medical Licensure Board of Ohio for five years. He spent seven months in Europe studying quality assurance in health care under a Western European Regional Fulbright grant in 1989. During 1996-1997, he was a Fulbright Scholar at the University of Göttingen.

Robert Schwartz is a Professor of Law and a Professor of Pediatrics at the University of New Mexico, where he teaches courses in health law and bio-ethics as well as church-state relations, legislative and administrative practice, and civil procedure. He was the first Chair of the New Mexico Health Policy Commission and has been general counsel to the New Mexico Human Services Department. He has also taught at the University of Tasmania in Australia, and was a European Regional Fulbright scholar at the University of Granada in Spain.

Professors Furrow, Greaney, Johnson, Jost and Schwartz are authors of a casebook that is the most widely used health law teaching book in the United States and have published a health law treatise for practitioners.
