UNIVERSITY MEN MUST BE GOOD CITIZENS
Says Dr. Boyd in Another: Offering Soliloquies of the Week

At the Monday evening assembly of the faculty in the hall of the University, Dr. Boyd made another offering of his soliloquies of the week to the faculty members. The audience was filled, the hall was jammed, and the students waited in eager expectation.

Dr. Boyd began his address by reminding the audience of the importance of good citizenship. He pointed out that the university community was a microcosm of society itself, and that the students had a responsibility to uphold the principles of good citizenship.

"We are not just here to learn," Dr. Boyd said. "We are here to be good citizens." He went on to discuss the importance of honesty, integrity, and respect for others.

Dr. Boyd then turned his attention to the issue of diversity. He reminded the students that Albuquerque was a diverse city, and that the university community should reflect that diversity.

He said, "We must learn to respect and appreciate the differences among us." He emphasized the importance of understanding and accepting cultural differences.

Dr. Boyd concluded his address by encouraging the students to be good citizens, to be respectful of others, and to be open-minded.

"Remember," he said, "we are all part of the same community."
WELCOME.

To the students who have not attended Albuquerque this week, in attendance at the convention of the Phi Theta Kappa Association, the University extends a most cordial and hearty welcome. Especially do we invite you to visit us, and to make more intimate acquaintances with us than you have been able to do up to the present time.

The University of Northern Colorado will be here soon, and we shall be delighted to meet our visitors from that distant State. The University of the South will also be here, and the University of the North will have representatives here also. We shall be glad to meet you and to learn from your experiences.
