1-1-2006

Denial

Antoinette M. Sedillo Lopez

University of New Mexico - School of Law

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalrepository.unm.edu/law_facultyscholarship

Part of the Law and Gender Commons, and the Law and Race Commons

Recommended Citation

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the UNM School of Law at UNM Digital Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in Faculty Scholarship by an authorized administrator of UNM Digital Repository. For more information, please contact amywinter@unm.edu, lsloane@salud.unm.edu, sarahrk@unm.edu.
DENIAL

Antoinette Sedillo Lopez

alcoholics drink all the time.
faces falling loose around the head, hair dull with shame.

he really was not an alcoholic he only drank on week-ends and he looked good.

alcoholics smell like sour beer bodies yellow like the babies jaundiced with the strain of living on their own.

he really was not an alcoholic he smelled like mint and leather and his skin was bronze.

1 This poem, in 2001, won First Place.
2 Professor Sedillo Lopez received her bachelors (magna cum laude), from the University of New Mexico in 1979. She graduated from UCLA Law School in 1982. After clerking for the District of Columbia Circuit Court, she joined the law firm of Modrall, Sperling, Roehl, Harris and Sisk, P.C. She joined the faculty of the University of New Mexico Law School in 1986. She has taught Land Use, Civil Procedure, Professional Responsibility, Family Law, Election Law, Comparative Law, and regularly teaches and practices in the Clinical Law Program. She has published various articles in national law journals, including articles on international child abduction, a review of Spanish/English legal dictionaries, and international advocacy on women’s rights. She has spoken on topics in her areas of expertise to regional, national, and international audiences. She has published a six volume anthology, Latinos in the United States: History Law and Perspective (Garland Press). She is the series editor for the Garland series, Latino Communities: Emerging Voices—Social, Cultural, Political and Legal Issues. Her poetry and creative writing has appeared in Women’s Studies, Chicano studies, and literary journals.

She has served and chaired various boards and commissions. She has served as president of the New Mexico Hispanic Bar Association and chair of the Clinical Section of the Association of American Law Schools. She is the past President and currently serves on the Board of Directors of the Clinical Legal Education Association.
alcoholics lose their jobs random life styles choke their friends and family who finally leave.

he really was not an alcoholic he worked hard and he only called her “puta” when he was borracho; it’s just the drink, don’t you think?

alcoholics go to bars everyone knows who they are drinking their pay while kids cry hambre eating up their hearts.

he really was not an alcoholic he drank his whiskey at home and gave grandma his check every week alcoholics die young bodies rotting from the poison eating livers and love.

he lied
about living
to see me finish school pride
eluded his life when he died.