STUDENT-BODY ELECTION OCCURED LAST TUESDAY

Mr. McCanna, Mr. Wolking and Miss Hope Chosen for President, Secretary and Vice-President, Respectively.

At a meeting of the student body of the University last Tuesday after assembly, officers of the student body were elected for the coming year. Mr. Joe McCanna was chosen for the presidency, Miss Myrl Hope, the vice-presidency, and Mr. Clifford Wolking, the secretaryship. In all three cases the choice was unanimous, so with the full support of the growing student body behind them, the officers for the coming year, the biggest in the University's history, should find their work not only a pleasure but also enlarged into new fields which the growing attendance has opened up.

GYM CLASSES TO GIVE EXHIBITION FEB. 22

Coach Hutchinson is planning to exhibit the gymnasium classes to the public at the armory February 22. The boys will perform "setting-up" exercises, exhibit feats in tumbling and the like. The girls will go through various drills and exercises. To this the public is most cordially invited to attend. It will no doubt prove a surprise to many to see all the Varsity students doing "stunts" not often seen outside of a circus. The gym has been furnished with new equipment and the students are practicing hard for the event.

With added equipment in the gymnasium Coach Hutchinson is this semester trying to persuade every student forcibly or otherwise that he should "take gym."

Every Monday, Wednesday and Friday between the hours of nine and eleven every male student of the U. N. M. almost without exception is to be found in the gym doing "setting up" exercises, learning to keep step, twirling the Indian clubs, or making violent efforts to get his feet down first in an attempted hand-spring. The new mats make it look like a soft job—but it isn't. The floor seems every ready to meet one half way.

The girls also have been impressed as to the value of exercise to the workings of the brain and have joined the "more muscle more brains" movement.

LITERARY SOCIETY IS GIVEN NAME

Much Interest Shown in Literary Work—Next Program to be Given February 8.

In keeping with the Pueblo architecture and the characteristic Indian names at the University the newly-organized literary society, at its regular meeting, January 25, adopted the name "Khiva," for the organization. The meaning of the word is "council chamber."

There is much interest manifest in the society, and all who realize the value of such an organization, and are ambitious to derive the benefits it will give, are urged to become members at once.

The next meeting will be held at 4 p. m. February 8 at Rodey Hall. Following is the program:

Reading Miss Mary Brorein

Vocal Duet

Misses Evelyn Trotter, and Alberta Hawthorne.

Descriptive, "Climbing Pike's Peak" Pryor B. Timmons

Debate: Resolved, That Federal and State Legislation providing for compulsory arbitration is essential to the adjustment of disputes between employer and employee. Affirmative: Fielder and Miller; negative, R. Hall and A. Feather. Everybody invited.

Dr. L. B. Mitchell will talk on The Attitude of the Roman Government on Early Persecutions at next Sunday's assembly.

PRES. AND MRS. BOYD TENDER RECEPTION

Violin Recital by Mrs. J. D. Clark
Special Musical Feature of Evening.

The special feature of the annual reception given to the faculty of the University by President and Mrs. Boyd Thursday evening at the Boyd home on South High street, was what amounted to a violin recital by Mrs. John D. Clark, wife of Dr. Clark. Mrs. Clark is a violinist of marked ability, and has a great natural talent for music.

She played half a dozen numbers for the faculty, all of which evoked enthusiastic applause.

E. S. Seder also played Chopin's "Nocturne" in E. flat, and Grieg's "Minuetto."

Mrs. Clark's numbers were as follows:

Walthern's—Prize Song.
Beethoven—Minuet.
D'Ambrosio—Canzonetto.
Wieniawski—Second Mazurka.
Cadman—At Dawning.
Neinda—Slavonic Cradle Song.

All members of the faculty were present, and the reception was one of the most successful ever given by Dr. and Mrs. Boyd. The faculty members even for a time forgot their class room dignity and vied with each other in boisterous merriment.

NEW SENIOR CLASS PINS RECEIVED

Design in Keeping With Pueblo Architecture and Typifies Spirit of U. N. M.

The Seniors may well be proud of the new U. N. M. Senior class pin for it is not only a unique piece of art, but well typifies the spirit of U. N. M., that spirit of which we are all justly proud. The pin is of unusual design, consisting essentially of the front of our Administration Building worked out in exact miniature and having the letters U. N. M. below it. Our Pueblo architecture adopts itself exceptionally well to the scheme, and on the whole makes a very attractive pin. The design was selected by a committee of seniors and underclassmen, of which Mr. Logan was chairman, and will be used as the standard senior class pin for all seniors to come.

On the back of the pin are engraved the owner's initials and year of graduation. Of course no one but a senior may wear one of these pins, which is an added honor for the wearer. The ten karat gold costs $1.50, and the fourteen karat $1.75, while the ring is $4.75. Although the present senior class is the first to have this pin, any alumnus who is a graduate of U. N. M. and who desires to secure one may do so by communication with Mr. Logan.

The Senior Class pin idea is a mighty fine one, as in years to come we who have persevered and graduated from U. N. M. will be able to recognize our fellow alumni, and enjoy the good old spirit of U. N. M. again.

RIFLE CLUB IS TO BEGIN PRACTICE SOON

Rifles and Ammunition Shipped from San Antonio Arsenal.

Target practice for the members of the U. N. M. Rifle Club will begin early in the spring. Prof. Wand, the secretary of the organization, has received notice that ten rifles and about six thousand rounds of ammunition have been shipped from the arsenal at San Antonio.

There are two propositions for a range which must be considered very soon. The first is whether to accept or reject the offer of the Albuquerque Rifle Association, which places their range at our service at certain given intervals, or to build one on our own on a site which has been found to be satisfactory for such a purpose.

It is still too early to begin practice, but it gives us time to think over the two questions in hand and prepare everything in plenty of time.

Sigma Tau fraternity gave an informal dance at the Woman's club Friday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Albright chaperoned the party.

A bunch of varsity boys entertained their lady friends with a dance last Friday evening.

"FRATERNITY FOLLIES" ARE AGAIN ON DECK

Same as in Years Gone by the Local Fraternity Men Will Put on Show in February—"Excuse Me" to be Staged This Time.

The most original and laughable comedy that has ever been attempted under the guise of "Fraternity Follies" is to be played this year by the Sigs at the Crystal. Laughable situations will make comedy, now and then, but add to these usual circumstances of fun the continuously and comically humorous situation created by the setting of the play, and the comedy is complete. The setting of "Excuse Me," besides being all that is mentioned above, is extremely original. It creates one or two characters that can't be beat. It calls for continuous action, everything is always in motion.

Here's how it is. The play is laid in a Pullman car, on its way to Reno and San Francisco from Chicago. It is evident there must be a continuous motion. Of course every Pullman has a porter, and a good porter is lots of fun. A full Pullman at retiring time might be amusing, too. But these are all humorous circumstances afforded by the original setting. Besides these there are the usual funny situations of all good comedies. Mrs. Jimmy Wellington of Chicago and Mr. Jimmy himself both decide to go to Reno for the usual Reno divorce, unknown to the other, and meet on the train. Mr. Henry Mallory and Margery, supposed to have been married and taking their honeymoon on this train, missed the minister but caught the Pullman. Other no less interesting happenings occur.

Varsity Basket Cagers Run Up Highest Score of Season—Scrubs Make Fine Showing.

The Varsity ran up its highest score this season in a league game with the local high school at the armory last Friday night, the final count being 80-16 in favor of the hill team.

The high boys had the advantage of having Smaulding who could jump a foot higher than Joe McCanna in spite of the fact that the latter is several shades lighter. However, they were not fast enough in basket shooting and team work and the Cherry and Silver quintette took and held an easy lead from the start. The high school changed their lineup completely in the second half and the Varsity ran in three new men, but more points were secured by the hill men in this period than in the former. There was no individual star noticeable on either side.

Wednesday last the Varsity defeated the Forest Service 38-20 in a closely contested game. Although the hill quintette was never in danger of defeat this was perhaps her closest game.

Lineup—Varsity: Ray McCanna, Lapraik, Thackery, forwards; Joe McCanna, Howden, center; Friday, Upton, Nohl, guards.

LET'S MAKE A POINT EVERY MINUTE.

With the announcement of the basketball ticket-selling contest for this week, all eyes, so to speak, are turned towards the basketball situation and the promising outlook for a brilliant season. One fact stands out clearly and that fact is, that we have the best basketball quintette the University of New Mexico has ever developed. We have a team of all-stars, and every individual student should recognize that fact. Not only should he recognize that fact, but he should do everything in his power to make this year stand out brightly as a prosperous one. It doesn't take much urging to get the entire student body, faculty, and alumni out to a football game; but judging from former years it has always taken a good deal of persuasion to get a representative crowd of students out to a basketball contest. Last year it is reported that one University basketball game was attended by the tremendous crowd of one University student. Let us not let such a circumstance as this occur again. Now is a good time in which to start a new era in basketball. So let us put as much enthusiasm and pep into this year's basketball season as was displayed throughout the football season. Let us take a slogan, and we suggest that that slogan be, "Make a point a minute, Varsity, make a point a minute!" and let the basketball team be held responsible for one basketball point every minute of play throughout the entire season; and what is of more importance, let every student make it a duty to see every game, and to see to it that the Varsity quintette makes a point every minute.

"A man cannot speak but he judges himself."

"Next to the originator of a good sentence is the first quoter of it."

Editor of the College Paper, U. of New Mexico, Albuquerque, N. M.: Dear Sir—"What's doing at New Mexico?"

Tucked away up here among these northern pines, we of Minnesota are inclined to shrink and become narrow in our views. We think that the world is suspended upon our own campus.

That is why I am writing you. I want to propose a reciprocity proposition to you. Students and faculty of the University of Minnesota know little of what you are doing at New Mexico. We don't know what your opinions are; what your past has been; what your present experiences are; or what your future will be. All of these things we would be interested in hearing about. This is what I would like to propose to you. I would like to have you or some member of your staff send me a letter, that I can publish in the Minnesota Daily, concerning your university. What you are doing this year, athletically, in the field of student activity, scholastically, in the way of building up the university and whatnot. A letter of this kind, I am sure, would make most interesting reading for my subscribers. I would suggest an article of six or seven hundred words. If you would care to send us a letter of this nature, I would be only too happy to return the favor with a letter concerning Minnesota. If you think it would be of interest to your readers. If you don't care for a letter upon Minnesota, we would very much appreciate receiving one from you. We would like to have you get this together in any way that you see fit; anything that you think would be of interest to us up here.

I would like to hear from you at once saying that you could let me have a letter of this nature. The title of the article might be: "What's doing at New Mexico?"

Very sincerely,
M. A. POTTEN,
The Minnesota Daily.

THE FACULTY VERSION

In the ranch corral Henrietta Ann dropped to the ground, and standing on one foot, managed to unsaddle and unbridle Brun. Then she thought what a fool she was—there was still a painful distance to the house. Somehow, she made it, hobbling with a stick, crawling on hands and knees. At last she sat huddled on the doorstep, gathering strength to rise and unbar the door. Gradually there came to her pain-dulled consciousness, the whistled strains of a "Perfect Day," rising above a splashing in the brook. Her heart leaped with thankfulness. Before she could call, however, the bushes rustled violently and a bronzed head, gleaming white shoulders and arms, a splendid, naked torso, rose above the scrub-brush.

"Good lord!" gasped Henrietta Ann. "You'd better stop! You've— you've got company."

The man looked at her in blank amazement. Then anger, resentment, even a half-fear, and altogether a desire for deep, soul-unburdening profanity, flashed in his eyes. "Go 'way," he commanded pettishly.

"I—I can't."

"I beg of you." Now, there was a touch of courtliness in his voice and manner despite his ludicrous helplessness.

"Man, I've crawled here on my hands and knees, and I can't crawl another step. I'm hurt. Go round through the bushes, and in the back way."

"Cactus."

"Then come straight on. I'll shut my eyes."

"Not on your life."

"Well, you'll find it pretty cold out there with nothing at all between you and nature. Besides, I need help. My foot is swollen as big as an elephant now, and hurts like—like the devil. I'd help you if I could." For the first time in her grown-up life Henrietta Anna whimpered.

Then she had a happy thought. She wriggled from her coat, rolled it into a tight wad, and threw it toward the bushes. It fell within moderate reach. Then Henrietta Ann began to laugh. She giggled and chuckled and choked and gasped. Tears ran down her cheeks. She shrieked and moaned, only to ripple off again into helplessness. Another thing was happening for the first time in her life. She was having hysterics.

With the coat swaddled about him, the man made a dash for the house but stopped short at a chortle from Henrietta Ann that seemed to threaten dissolution. "What on earth's the matter?" he demanded.

"It—it's—all so funny!" she gasped. "Horse—haw-horse—buck me off—and then—then— you—"

"Yes. Sounds deuced funny." "You—you—it's—it's—just like a Rob—Rob—Chobert W. Rambler's novel!" Henrietta Anna ended with a howl.

The man stood irresolute. What in thunder ailed the woman? By all the laws of decency he ought to get in the house and that mighty quick—but this creature was certainly suffering. Ha, hysterics. That was it. He had read somewhere that an hysterical person should be shocked. Good lord! Wasn't he shocked enough! Then his lips twitched. He'd do it! He'd shock her! He bent over, clutching the coat with one hand and tilting Henrietta Ann's chin with the other. "Yes," he drawled, "remarkably like—all but the soft, slow, lingering kiss six minutes after meeting. It isn't too late for that." His face drew close to hers.

Henrietta Ann came to her senses. She bounced back, jerking her forgotten foot till she grew white with pain. "Oh," she said in a subdued and natural voice, "I'm sober now. Please get dressed and then come help me."

It seemed to Henrietta Anna that the man was gone an unconsciously long time. Another ridiculous idea struck her. How would he get her in when he did come back? He might try to carry her! All the Chambers heroines she had ever read about were slender and willowy, but she—she was a load! Henrietta Ann's sense of the fitness of things could not stand for the possibility. Biting back her groans she hunched and crawled fairly within the room when, sure enough, strong arms encircled her and lifted her into a comfortable chair. Still another thing had happened for the first time in Henrietta Ann's life.

She sank back thankfully. "There're a thousand questions I want to ask," she murmured, eternal feminine curiosity uppermost even in necessity. "Who—what—how—but I think we'd better first attend to our knitting. You'll have to cut my boot."

"First I'll build a fire and heat some water."

Henrietta Ann started to protest. "You sit there," commanded the man.

Henrietta Ann obeyed. When he returned, as mudge on his nose, and a triumphant gleam in his eye, though pungent, white smoke poured through the kitchen door behind him, Henrietta Ann looked at him with a lugubrious grin. "Here I sit," she said meekly, "Like Martin Luther, I cannot do otherwise. God help me. Amen." But in the meantime—if I may venture to make a suggestion—you might get the adhesive plaster, and the arnica, and the liniment, and anything else that looks usable, from the little cupboard over the kitchen sink.

The man looked up, surprised, from his examination of her boot. "Who on earth are you?" he demanded.

"I'm the owner of this place." He had disappeared into the kitchen, however, before Henrietta Ann could impress him with the pride of ownership. He returned with bandages and bottles.

"I thought this place was abandoned."

"It was, but it is not. It is mine by the right of transference of dollars and cents and certain papers. I spend my summers here—that is, I have spent one summer here."

"Then I'm a trespasser," he announced, as he slashed her boot and began very gently to work it off the swollen foot.

"I'd hardly say that—rather, a heaven-sent—Oh—Ouch!—angel!"

The man reddened as he held the boot in his hand and looked at her stockinged foot. Henrietta Ann thought it was because of her graceful way of turning an uncomfortable situation.

"Shall—shall I," he ventured, "cut your hose, too?"

"My what? Oh, my stocking. No, certainly not. Wait a minute. Turn your back, please.... Now then, just pull."

Her foot was swollen angrily. With deft fingers the man pressed here and there. "No bones broken," he announced, "but the ligaments are torn—here—here—and here. We'll do the best we can, but no walking for you, my lady, for several days to come..... This is the deuce of a fix," he added, as though involuntarily.

"Why?" queried Henrietta Ann. "It's not so bad. Here you are as though sent by providence to help me. I really am quite thankful."

"That's not it. I—we—Oh, you see, I am expecting some people—some men—here almost any day, perhaps hour."

"You're expecting some people here! Well, of all the— No, I beg your pardon. Of course, you thought the cabin was abandoned.... Well, let them come."

"You don't know—you don't realize quite what—well, the position in which it would place you."

"Pooh, I don't care."

"But—Oh, pshaw, I can't explain. It's not the proprieties so much. It's danger. You must take my word for it. It is absolutely necessary that there be no one here but me when they come."

"You might murder me and bury me under the floor," Henrietta Ann suggested quizzically.

"I have thought of that."

Henrietta Ann looked at him with sudden suspicion. The man's straightforward gaze and smile, however, was reassuring.

"But I won't," he continued, "not for the world, the fulness thereof, and all else therein."

Engagements are the latest fad on the campus.

The regular fortnightly meeting of the Varsity Literary Society met Tuesday afternoon of last week. Considerable business was brought up and discussed. One of the most important things was the choosing of the Indian word "Khiva" as the name of the organization.

Mr. Brooks Brantley, ex-varsity student, Chatanooga boy, honorable member of the Order of Coyotes, and chauffeur of the Dog-darn-it racer, arrived in town last Thursday after spending a couple of months in Tennessee.

Miss Ethel Kieke spent last Wednesday night at Hokona as the guest of Miss Ruth McKowen. Both girls claim the honor of having the last word, but the inmate of the next room is of the opinion that when handling the English language neither need to be ashamed of her endurance abilities.

Messrs. Fielder and Knox, Misses Causey and Duke spent an enjoyable afternoon Saturday upon a horseback ride. When asked to tell us of the time they had, the merry-makers only smiled and said, "Some time."

The next Khiva Literary Society program is scheduled for Tuesday afternoon Feb. 8.

A student body meeting was held last Tuesday for the purpose of electing student body officers. The election resulted in Mr. Joe McCanna being elected president; Miss Myrl Hope, vice-president, and Mr. Clifford Wolking, secretary.

All in all, the play will afford a wonderful field for the talent in the fraternity. Many opportunities arise for musical numbers. To see Elwood Albright, Pierce Rodey, D. R. It is needless to go into detail about them for, as usual, they will speak for themselves. As a parting word, it may be well to remind you that this comedy is just fresh from New York.
