LEGAL METHODS USED IN VESPER SERVICES

"Some Reflections on the Bible as a Lawyer Might Make Them—Subject of Address

Dr. Mitchell of the Latin department gave the address at Vespers last Sunday. His subject was, "Some Reflections on the Bible as a Lawyer Might Make Them."

Professor Seder excellently rendered a prelude piano solo and Mr. Robert Sewell did full justice to his baritone solo. The vespér choir also comes in for a share of praise in the music as their anthem was sung as only a trained choir could sing it.

Dr. Mitchell's address follows:

The word testament is derived from a Latin word which signifies to declare one's last will before witnesses. The phrase "My last will and testament" is familiar to all. Upon hearing the word testament, one thinks of property being divided to heirs and legatees.

The Christian Bible consists of two parts, the Old Testament and the New. If a Christian wishes to know what his inheritance is, he can find out by reading God's two wills or testaments. The chief difference between them is summed up in an old Latin expression which was uttered by one of the theologians of the early church. "Testamentum in vetere, late, in novo palet," a translation of which is, "the testament or heritage is obscure in the old, but plain in the new." Our Heavenly Father indicates in the Old Testament the portion that is to fall to his children, but we can more easily understand what that heritage is by consulting the New Testament. The new is the complement and key to the old. If it we see clearly the inheritance in store for us.

Allow me to point out some resemblances and contrasts between heavenly and earthly inheritances.

1. Among men the testator dies before the heirs come into their inheritance. In the spiritual world an entirely different state of affairs prevails. God, the testator, never dies. His heirs, however, must die before they can fully come into their inheritance.

2. Another point of contrast emphasizes man's frailty in comparison with God's omnipotence. A man may declare in a manner that he thinks is explicit, incapable of misunderstanding, for he wishes his estate to be divided or disposed of at his death, but after he is dead and gone he is powerless to enforce his wishes. The heirs may quarrel among themselves, the will is contested and broken, and at last a part of the estate falls into the hands of those to whom the testator had no intention of giving anything. The legatee or heir of God's inheritance can rest assured that no one can ever break or thwart God's will and deprive him of his inheritance.

3. In the third place a man will frequently indicate to his future heirs his love for them by giving them many things during his life time. The earthly father will ordinarily make his children his heirs and during his

The U. N. M. Weekly,
Albuquerque, N. M.

To the Editor:

It is not hard to resume the old habit of writing to the Weekly, but all that the writer wishes to do now is to express, as an alumna her appreciation of the periodical issued by the students of the U. N. M.

Home news always are interesting to the absentee, but the Weekly has succeeded in bridging the gap between student and graduate in a way that makes one forget distance.

The Co-ed. Edition was unique (but not one-horse). As usual, the Varsity girls vindicated themselves and showed their ability to make a success of anything they undertake.

Whenever a particularly successful edition of the Weekly appears, I leave my copy at the high school in some conspicuous place to serve as advertising propaganda. The other day, during sophomore English class, the teacher heard a series of low, furtive chuckles, proceeding from one of the most obstreperous boys in the class. Upon investigation, it was found that he had secured my "Co-ed Weekly," and, forgetful alike of Roderick Dhu

Varsity Desires List in Order to Keep Them Informed on Affairs at Alma Mater

March 8, 1915.

Dear Alumnus:

With this, we are sending you a copy of The University News, which will be forwarded to your address as it appears on the files of this office. From time to time we issue printed matter of interest to former students, which should be mailed to them. We are anxious to have some record of all graduates of all departments of the institution. Below is a list of those of whom all trace has been lost. If you know of the whereabouts of any of them and will fill in the blanks opposite such names, returning sheet to us, you will confer a favor upon the University authorities. Any change in your own address, name or occupation, should also be communicated.

Very sincerely your friend,

JOSEPHINE S. PARSONS,
Secretary-Registrar.

VARSIITY WRITE-UP IN SOUVENIR BOOK

Official Souvenir of State Devotes Space to Advertising the Benefits and Advantages of U. N. M.

The "Official Souvenir of the State of New Mexico at the Panama-California Exposition, San Diego, 1915," edited by A. E. Koehler, Jr., Commissioner of Publicity of the New Mexico Board of Exposition Managers, contains two pages of splendid news matter concerning the advantages and merits of the University.

Every detail of the University, from its healthful climatic advantages, through the value and thoroughness of the courses offered, is treated concisely but fully in this book.

Extracts from same are as follows:

"The last three years have turned the fortunes of the University of New Mexico into a channel somewhat different from that they have pursued in former days and have placed the Institution on a firm foundation for future prosperity. The present aim of the University is that which has made other State Institutions most successful, namely, to make it 'the servant of all the people.'"

"The University at present is offering courses in all branches of engineering, in the arts and letters branches, in educational and advanced pedagogical work, and in several extension departments. The extension departments were arranged that the institution might be able to carry its work to those who were unable to attend it in person, and that communities might call upon it for expert research, information or opinion in matters of science or public economy.

"The University now has a campus of 315 acres, over 250 acres being added in the last year. It is housed in thirteen buildings, the three most important of which are valued at $100,000; the others are valued at $27,800. Its equipment is valued at $45,000, which makes the total physical valuation of the plant $202,800. The annual appropriation made by the legislature in the past has gradually increased until for the past two years it was $45,000. The University also has income from its lumber and salt lands, of the last named of which it owns practically all there are in the state. These are very valuable. All told, the University owns about 400,000 acres of land, a great deal of which is still to be selected."

(Then follows a description of the equipment, the courses offered, requirements for entrance, graduation, government of the University, Rhodes scholarship, etc.)

The final paragraph refers to the architecture of the buildings, which make their lasting impression on all.

"One of the most striking features of the institution is the uniform application of an unique style of architecture. The buildings are all designed in imitation of the dwellings of the Pueblo Indians, and afford an attraction for the University, at once unique and pleasing. The types followed in general line at the University are to be found in the Pueblo of Taos, where the pure Pueblo type of dwelling is

DEBATERS LEAVE FOR CRUCES IN GOOD SHAPE

Trained to the Minute, and Feeling Absolutely Confident, Trio Will Face College Saturday Night

With the good wishes and confidence of every member of the Varsity to cheer them on, the three debaters, Allen E. Bruce, Carl D. Brorein and Lee W. Walker, will leave for Las Cruces Saturday morning, to face the College Trio in the eighth annual debate between the two institutions that evening.

Competition is keep between the two teams for victory; five times have College won, four in a straight, last year's victory for the Varsity breaking the winning streak, and turning the tide our way.

No stone has been left unturned by either the team or Professor Bonnett to bring victory to the Varsity again this year; the men are trained to the minute, and are filled with statistics, authorities and evidences that ought to convince the most skeptic of the right of their side of the question and if they fail to bring "home the bacon," it will be simply because they have faced the best team ever turned out by College, and they can come back with the assurance that they have done all that human beings could do for their institution.

But neither they nor their adherents at the Varsity expect any such an event, and all look upon victory as being won, nobody conceding that College has even the slightest chance of victory, and nothing short of a unanimous decision will satisfy the U. N. M.

The contest will be held in Hadley Hall, State College, Saturday evening. The College will be represented by Miss Mildred Fulghum, Richard Buvens and Earl Taylor. The judges will be three citizens of Las Cruces, Rev. C. K. Campbell, Dr. T. C. Sexton and Attorney Donald Young.

Arrangements have been made to telephone the result in from College direct to the Journal, and the Varsity will await with interest, though confidence, the report after the contest.

PATRIOTIC TALKS GIVEN STUDENTS

Prominent G. A. R. Veterans Urge Young People to Be in Readiness to Serve Country.

At an impromptu assembly called by Dean Hodgkin, the students and faculty were given the opportunity to hear two stirring patriotic addresses, one by General David Palmer, of Iowa, Commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, and the other by Department Commander John A. Ross, of Las Vegas, both of whom related some facts connected

READINESS.

One of the most significant facts brought out in the talks made by General Palmer and Commander Ross the other day was the necessity of readiness, and the utter unpreparedness which has characterized the United States since the Civil War.

The enormous number of uselessly wasted lives at the beginning of the Rebellion would have been averted had the Union soldiers been armed in the proper manner, and had some training. The success attending the South in the first year or so of the war was due to her superior marksmanship and better arms. The men from Texas, Tennessee, Southern Kentucky, Louisiana, etc., accustomed to the rifle from boyhood, going against the inexperienced youths from the North, armed with erratic muskets, many of them hardly knowing one end of a gun from the other, simply mowed them down. It took the North time to develop trained shooters, and the only thing that prevented the South from sweeping everything before it in the early days was due to their lack of numbers and nothing else.

Previous to the Civil War, it was the expert rifle shots who did the United States' fighting; in those early days when armies stood a hundred yards or so apart, and most of our country was unsettled, we had a number of men trained in arms who could be relied upon, and so were safe from any foreign invasion.

But things are changed now; the country is no longer "wild and woolly" we have no trained rifle men to depend upon, and our regular army is of course, woefully small and inefficient.

This brings us to our point: we do not advocate a large standing army, to be parasites upon the workers of the country. But what we want is men trained in the use of the modern rifle, who would be a match for any nation of Europe in this respect, and the plan whereby this result can be achieved is by the Swiss method, or as nearly similar thereto as possible.

Immediately upon the opening of hostilities in Europe, Switzerland was able in a day's notice, to have ready over 300,000 trained riflemen, to defend herself against invasion. And the Government of Switzerland has been able to achieve this at a cost of about $6,500,000 a year. They have rifle clubs in that country, where every week the young men are obliged to meet at points, and practice rifle shooting, until they qualify for expert shots. No standing army bothers the country, but they rest secure in the effectiveness and skill of their riflemen.

The United States has started to adopt the same practice, and the sooner it becomes general throughout this country, the better. We are not looking for war, we are not trying to bluff anybody, but we want to know we are secure from invasion, and by having several million riflemen ready to respond to the call, this can be guaranteed us.

FREE SCHOLARSHIPS

Review of Reviews Awards Them for Summer Work

College men who earn a large part or all of their college expenses will doubtless be greatly interested again this year in the free scholarships offered under the direction of their fund to self-supporting students. For the past six years over 1,200 students have won free cash scholarships worth $100 to $1,000 apiece.

President Wilson, together with five prominent college presidents, has endorsed this plan of awarding free scholarships to ambitious students. A certificate of such endorsement is placed in the hands of every student whose application for enrollment as a candidate is accepted.

These scholarships are not competitive in any sense of the word but are available to any student of good character. Each student is apportioned an exclusive radius. The scholarship is won, not for class room efficiency, but for practical work during the summer months or in spare time through the college year.

College employment bureaus from Maine to California recommend this plan as a sure means of meeting college expenses for self-supporting students. The work possesses a dignity and distinction which invariably appeals to the college men. It is always congenial and eminently satisfactory financially. Over 150 scholarships were awarded students the past summer. Mr. Arthur Henkel, of Valparaiso University, winning a $1,000 scholarship by ten weeks work.

Any self-supporting student can secure full particulars without obligation by dropping a postal card at once for "The Adventures of T. Courtney Perkins," to The Review of Reviews Scholarship Fund, 28 Irving Place, New York City.

E. P. Burns, formerly a student of the University of Oklahoma, registered last week and enrolled as a Junior.

LEGAL METHODS USED IN VESPER DEVICES

lifetime will constantly show them his love in many ways especially by providing the means whereof they may gratify their whims and desires in so far as these are legitimate and lead to no harm. Our Heavenly Father also gives us many expressions of His love in this life and before we come into our final inheritance.

We are told that the Christian's inheritance, for the most part at least, is laid up for him in Heaven. He will not lose it through any collusion of fellow heirs nor will he have to pay any lawyer half of it in order to save the other half. And we are also told that it is a wonderful inheritance, incorruptible and that fadeeth not away.

We have somewhat shady and vague ideas of what heaven will be, but we generally think of it as a place or condition where we shall rise above the limitations of the flesh and shall be completely happy. If you agree with me so far, I think that you will now admit that one of the most alluring features of our heavenly inheritance is that there we shall realize the legitimate ambitions and hopes which we could not attain in this existence. If we did not have to provide food, shelter, clothing, and the bare necessities of life, what could we not accomplish? As it is, with most of us, nine-tenths or even more of our time, energy, and income are expended in procuring the bare necessities of life.

If you will ask people, chosen at random, what they would do if they were relieved of this great burden you will find that they would try to better themselves or others along moral, aesthetic, spiritual or even physical lines, for there exist deeply implanted in the breast of every individual the desire to make progress. We hope to travel some day, to add to our education, to learn to appreciate the beauties of nature or art or of music. As family cares increase we curtail our proposed trip around the world to a trip to California, and finally feel that we should be glad to have the opportunity of visiting Algodones. When death comes, most of the inhabitants of Albuquerque are fortunate if they have travelled as far as Alago. So we live lives of shattered desires and sacrificed ambitions! But when we come into our heavenly inheritance we believe that we shall not have to think about how to clothe and educate a growing family or how to pay off the mortgage. Those who have thirsted for knowledge, over there will have revealed to them the secrets of the universe. That one who has long famished for music will be satisfied and the one who hoped to broaden and better himself by travel shall then behold a landscape unlimited by any horizon. To destroy the belief in the hereafter and thus take away the hope that we may yet realize our ambitions would be a great calamity and I should not like to be responsible for killing that belief.

In conclusion, human testaments often provide bequests on a certain condition which the legatee must fulfill before he can come into his inheritance. Likewise to enjoy the inheritance provided for us by our Heavenly Father one condition is imposed and that is faith, an unshaken and abiding faith that Christ is what he claimed to be. And right here, it seems to me, that the lawyer cannot help but come to the conclusion that Christ is all He claims to be, for the evidence is unimpeachable.

The disciples were chosen to be witnesses. If eleven men, fellow citizens from your own community, selected from various occupations and callings in life, men whom you know well, were to offer the same testimony in the court room of the Bernatillo county court house to all the events that take place around the time of the crucifixion and resurrection, would you not admit that the case was legally established? Can there be any doubt that Christ was really dead? The Roman Centurian made sure of that by his spear thrust. Can any one assert that Christ's body was spirited away in the night by his followers? Was not the tomb closed and stamped with the seal of the government and a guard of soldiers stationed there for the express purpose of preventing His friends from doing that very thing? Can the resurrection then be explained on any other basis than by the divinity of Christ? Many others besides the apostles knew about all these things and the accounts in the four gospels apparently were not challenged in any particular when they were published.

Any lawyer would be glad to secure such over-whelming evidence to establish any case which he was advocating. I have never heard any doubt expressed that Alexander the Great or Julius Caesar ever lived. The evidence of the divinity of Jesus Christ is more in amount and stronger and more unanimous that what can be adduced for Alexander of Macedon or for Julius Caesar.

Such it seems to me might be the nature of the reflections of lawyers on the Bible and on the greatest question raised by this document.

ASK PROCTOR.

Quiz? Every student knows what a quiz is, but we venture the guess that not one in ten knows the origin of this word that has unceremoniously thrown many students out into the quizzical world beyond college. The story goes that Daly, the manager of a Dublin play-house, laid a wager that a word of no meaning would be the talk and puzzle of the city within twenty-four hours. Accordingly, he chalked the word "quiz" on the walls of all the buildings of Dublin with the effect that it won him the wager. And the word quiz has ever lived up to the story of its origin, as the grade books of teachers and professors the world over show.—Boulder Morning News.

YALE MOTTO FARMERS AND BLASPHEMERS.

New Haven, Conn.—Many Yale alumni associations which have reproduced the university seal on their stationery will be surprised to learn that through carelessness of artists the Hebrew characters of the motto, "Light and Truth," have been made to read, "Blasphemers and Farmers."

The Yale Alumni Weekly calls attention to this "lamentable error" in its issue today.

The mistakes were made because the artists failed to observe the distinction between the Hebrew characters "Waw" and "Resh."

I. M. A. Fathead left for his ancestral home in the Puerco Valley last week. I. M. A. says this school life is too fast for him, so he is going to get behind old Dobin and the one horse plow and meditate.

Some one said that this is the last snow. Therefore that means that spring is arriving, or in other words, poetry is en regle (quoting Life).

But still methinks that same rule about those who prophesy the weather in New Mexico is still in effect. How about it Della?

Athletic Association Election.

At a meeting of the Athletic Association, held Tuesday morning, the following officers were elected:

Manager football team, Raymond McCanna.

Vice President Athletic Association, Miss Myrl Hope.

The two students are well known and very popular among all their associates on the Hill, and the fact of their election is alone evidence of the well deserved esteem and confidence reposed in them by the rest of the school.

Miss Ethel Hickey and Miss Della Sisler were delightful hostesses on Thursday, February, 25, to a delicious luncheon served to the down town University girls on Miss Hickey's "mesa" in room 10.

The hostesses' sympathy was aroused by the hungry expressions on the emaciated faces of the girls, and knowing the precept "Feed the hungry," they proceeded to give the down town girls a spread. Nothing was said in the last week's paper of this delightful affair because the girls were too full to express their gratitude.

The treat was enjoyed to such an extent that many of the guests have become poetical and several poems have been written in honor of Miss Hickey and Miss Sisler. A copy of these poetical effusions will be published at the request of any one interested.

The menu served by Miss Hickey and Miss Sisler was as follows:

Chicken Salad
Cheese and Nut Sandwiches
Cream Puffs
Tangerines Oranges Cookies
Pickles Olives
Eau

During the repast, the girls were continually interrupted by one of the weaker sex (or men) popping his head in the door as the savory odors, no doubt attracted the men, but it was of no avail as the girls needed no mal-assistance to consume the dainties which Miss Hickey and Miss Sisler had so carefully prepared for them.

NELSON'S VERSATILITY.

The French class of the "Femmes Savants," of this University, under the able directions of Prof. Frederic Nelson enjoyed a few interesting lessons in dramatic art the past week. Miss Katherine Chavez showed exceptional talent in her portrayal of the role of Moliere's Angelique. In this personnel Katie displayed her melodramatic ability with striking vividness, causing the tears to flow profusely from the eyes of all the girls.

with the great Civil War, and urged upon the young people of today, who will shortly be custodians of the country, the necessity of being in readiness to serve their country should the need arise.

Each spoke in the same vein; both with apparently the same idea in view; the necessity of the young people being on the alert for their country's call.

They related how at the beginning of the Civil War the North was in an unprepared condition, both as regards arms and medical conveniences, with the consequent result that thousands perished needlessly when a little preparation on the Government's part beforehand would have saved a great many.

One surprising fact related was the immense number of comparative boys put in the field; out of more than 2,000,000 men, but 46,000 were over the age of thirty, the rest varying from sixteen to thirty, with the majority between twenty and twenty-five. In fact, practically all the soldiers were mere youths, with old officers in command.

General Palmer stated that he was making a tour of the country for the purpose of arousing interest in patriotism, and impressing the need of readiness upon the people. He stated that he was greatly pleased with the result so far attained, and the reception accorded him on his visits, and to occasion to speak a few words of praise for the appearance of the University, its students and faculty.

The speakers were greeted with great applause at the close of their talk, it being plain that a deep impression had been made, which would be taken to heart by all hearing the speeches.

With General Palmer and Commander Ross were five veterans of the Civil War, and Professor Hodgkin, occupying the stage. The veterans were: Albuquerque Commander J. C. Murphy; Governor E. S. Stover; H. Z. Bliss, J. G. Caldwell and W. W. McDonald.

and Border Minstrels, was convulsed over one of the limericks in that journey. A remembrance that the teacher herself had chuckled for three days over the same paper saved the youth from the reprimand he deserved.

The Sophomore edition was good, the Freshman edition was good, but the Co-ed was the best yet. "Keep coming." The Weekly makes a good showing of Varsity spirit. The college publications never have had the general support from the student body which they deserve, but perhaps things are changing for the better.

Up here there is plenty of opportunity to "root" for New Mexico. It has always seemed to me that part of the duty of an alumnus is to send other students to his Alma Mater, and conditions look rather favorable along that line. Some budding orators, athletes, and Varsity rooters may yet develop from this part of the state.

It certainly is gratifying to watch the fine record of the University in athletics. The year looks like a good one from all points of view. Here's luck to our debaters, too!

Best wishes to the Weekly from a '14 graduate.
