LIEUTENANT LEMBKE'S THRILLING EXPERIENCES

Tells of Some of Incidents in France. Was in Heaviest of Fighting.

At a celebration and banquet held in his honor in the Estufa, Monday night, Lieutenant Charles Lembke related to members of the P. K. A. fraternity many interesting experiences which he had undergone before and after being wounded in action in Belgium.

Lieutenant Lembke was connected with the 91st division, infantry, as a battalion intelligence officer. According to him it is the duty of the intelligence department to do scout work and to figure out from maps and observation, the exact position of the opposing armies. Upon information obtained from the intelligence officers, as to the contour of the land, the location of roads, etc., the commanders base their plans of attack. Another important duty of this department is the patrolling of "no man's land" in search of German prisoners in order to gain information. Lembke stated that this patrol duty at night was as thrilling an adventure as anyone could wish for.

The Lieutenant said that the plan of attack was altogether different, from what one might be led to believe. The men advance in single files, ten and fifteen yards apart so there is not much chance for a machine gun to do effective work against them.

When asked regarding any raids which he might have taken part in, Lembke told of two instances, one when he was with a party which captured a machine gun nest with twenty prisoners and the other when forty Americans captured eighty Germans. When the machine gun nest was raided it was done under cover of a heavy smoke barrage, which had been laid down over "no man's land." He and twelve men from another division, who had gotten lost between the lines started after this one gun which was halting the advance of a company of engineers. They experienced no difficulty in capturing the Germans, and sent them to the American lines under one man guard. The twelve then proceeded forward, picked up thirty other Americans and surrounded several dugouts of Germans in a little valley, capturing eighty. The Lieutenant said that it was with difficulty that the Americans were restrained from killing the Germans, so incensed were they at the Germans' shooting down some French tank drivers, a few minutes previous.

The French people look upon the Americans as truly Saviours of their country, stated Lembke, but the English seem to think that they could have won the war without our help.

Lembke was wounded November

LEAGUE OF NATIONS NECESSITY; DR. BOYD

In Brief Address to Students, President Urges Adoption of League in Some Form or Other.

President Boyd on Monday morning addressed the students at assembly, giving a brief talk on the proposed League of Nations.

"What the world is looking forward to," he said in part, "is a perfect means of preserving peace among nations. We do not hope to obtain this perfect means all at once, or in a generation, but we hold this up as our ideal toward which to strive."

Dr. Boyd pointed out that perfection itself nowhere on earth exists, yet that mankind has the power to visualize perfection and to strive to attain it. Therein lies the secret of growth and improvement, he said, and were it not for this ability to imagine things in their perfect state, the world would never advance.

"This League of Nations is not going to be perfect. But it can make a beginning, and the question is one worthy of your very best consideration. The next twenty-five years are going to be your years. You are going to have to think and bear the burdens, and you must study this question if you are going to be able to assume your full responsibilities as citizens," he said.

The speaker divided into three classes the people who are discussing the League today: first, those who advocate it from a conviction of its merits; second, those who oppose it, but offer other plans alternatives; and third, those who oppose it on general principles, just to be kicking. "Be in either of the first two classes that your intelligence bids you enter, but by all means stay out of the third," he concluded.

3, 1918, while attempting to locate the position of some bridges across the river before the American army. Eight German planes swooped over the American lines and while one of them was about 75 feet above Lembke, he dropped a grenade, which lit within three feet of him and exploded. One fragment went through his jaw and out between his lips, carrying with it eight teeth. Another took away part of his jaw bone and buried itself in the base of his tongue. It was eleven days before this was removed, and six weeks before Lieutenant Lembke could take nourishment in any but liquid form. His jaw is practically healed now, but he will have to spend two more months in the hospital at San Antonio. He is now here on twenty days' leave.

He said that he had secured many souvenirs to bring back with him, but that these had all been stolen from him while he was wounded.

JOINT MEMBERSHIP IN CITY POSSIBLE

Arrangements Made Whereby U. N. M. Students May Receive Full Privileges of City Organization at Small Cost.

By an agreement that each association will honor a membership of the other association for all privileges, a combined membership between the University Y. M. C. A. and the city of Albuquerque Y. M. C. A., has been obtained, the cost of which is five dollars until October 1, 1920.

Those who now have membership in the city association will be given membership in the university association as described above for four dollars, their city membership being honored by the Varsity "Y" until the expiration of said membership.

The terms for payment are for the full amount to be paid at the time of issuance of membership or for two dollars to be paid at this time and the remainder of four or five dollars which ever it might be to be paid on or about October 1, 1919 as determined by the secretary.

If a student should pay two dollars as first payment on his membership and not return for the fall quarter his membership will be automatically cancelled but may be regained at anytime during the remainder of the year by again enrolling in the university and making the second payment.

Temporarily cottages M and N are being fixed up for use as a "Y" hut where everyone on the hill may meet and play table games, read the papers, and feel at home. The time at which this building will ready for use depends upon the interest the men take in getting same ready for use.

As soon as the hut is in running order and the membership committee can meet, a membership drive will be made and a "100 per cent membership" is their slogan.

Everyone after obtaining his membership must not run down to the city association and try to see how many privileges they can take advantage of the first day. Remember that you are getting your membership at a very reasonable rate and that you are a gentleman and will be a gentleman where ever you are. Let the city association know that you appreciate their kindness in giving you all the privileges of their association while you are in the city.

A university Y. M. C. A. membership held by anyone who has a membership in the city association will not be honored by the city association until after the expiration of the contract for membership in the city association. In other words, no university membership is good until all back dues are paid and membership expires with city association.

U. S. GOOD PLACE IN WHICH TO LIVE

Kenneth Baldrige of Engineers, just Returned from France Addresses Students Monday at 11.

"I never fully appreciated how good the old United States was until I got to France and saw how much ahead of that country we are. I am now perfectly contented to remain in the good old U. S.," said Corp. Kenneth Baldrige, formerly a university student, who has just been discharged from the army and gave a short talk at assembly Monday morning.

Mr. Baldrige, who is engaged in the lumber business in Albuquerque, enlisted in the forestry service in August, 1917, and reached France the next month, being attached to the 20th Engineers. He spoke of the magnitude of the task which confronted the Americans at the beginning and how the difficulties were overcome. He considers the most important thing done by the Americans was the speeding up of the transportation service. When they arrived, the French railroad service was miserable, he said, as the maximum speed allowed was 30 miles per hour. Immediately the doughboys took hold, and speeded things, up to 55 or 60 miles per hour. This one thing itself was a vital factor in winning the war, as transportation was the critical problem. "I believe what the French have learned of pep and vim from the Americans will in time pay them for the cost of the war," he remarked.

During his service in France Mr. Baldrige was assigned to various lumber camps sawing ties, poles, etc., for the use of the army. The materials were requisitioned by the French Government, and bought and prepared by the United States.

STUDENT EMPLOYMENT.

Beginning next quarter, the janitor work in university buildings will be given entirely to students, according to a statement given out by Mr. Grose, superintendent of grounds. The work will be divided so as to furnish employment for about twelve men, who can earn their room and board by working about two hours each day.

Work on the grounds and campus will afford employment for perhaps as many as desire it, and will be paid for at the rate of 25c per hour.

The Kappa Delta Nu sorority held an initiation ceremony for several of their pledges. Those taken in were Mary Sands, Bobby Jahn, Lucille Longino, Amy Merrick, Louise Clark, and Katherine MacDowell.

Carl Hunter is on the sick list laid up with a bad case of the grippe.

ARE YOU QUITTING?

In two weeks the winter quarter will be over, and a good many young men are trying to decide whether to remain in school the rest of the year, or "get a job."

The financial side of the question strikes a good many. They find themselves with none too much surplus cash, and soon decide that they would better leave now than to stay on and run out entirely.

Such a feeling is natural, but let these facts be considered: one quarter lost each year will make it necessary to go for five years to graduate—one year too long. And one year in this period of a man's life is worth saving.

It has often been said that a young man, in good health, with no dependents, can go through college over any obstacles. This is absolutely true. So if you leave now—unless, of course, you are really needed at home—it is only a confession that you are unwilling to pay the price. One should certainly hesitate to make such a confession.

If one is willing to work for it, an education is within his reach. There is no question about being able to get work. The university has never yet lost a man who could not stay without work, IF HE WAS WILLING TO MAKE THE SACRIFICE.

It will mean, of course, that a man must attend to business. It will mean fewer dates, no loafing hours, and a tightening up of the leaks in the pocketbook. But will not the result justify these measures?

When a man comes for business, he will attend to business. If he comes for a good time, he will have it, probably, as long as his money lasts. If he comes with a real desire for education, HE WILL GET IT.

Think this over carefully before making the final decision.

WANTED—A TIMETABLE.

Some means ought to be devised for giving the students some idea of what courses are to be offered next quarter.

Not infrequently one is heard to say, "If I had known that course was being given this term, I certainly would have taken it."

In such cases a little bit of everybody is to blame. A careful study of the catalogue might disclose the fact that such and such a course is to be offered, but catalogues go out of date so soon that one hesitates to even look inside one.

Last quarter several instructors posted notices that certain subjects would be offered, and the bulletin-board was filled with a heterogeneous collection of these notices that would make the eye seasick. Can't somebody figure out means and methods for remedying the situation?

A Checkered Career.—A man made a bet with his wife—which was indiscreet. The wife won—which was fore-ordained.

The man wrote the wife a check for $5 in payment of the bet—which was sad.

The wife cashed the check at the grocery, but forgot to indorse it—which was natural.

The grocer, despite the lack of indorsement, paid it to a packing-house collector—which was careless. The packing-house collector turned it in—which was all in a day's work.

The packing-house office man discovered the lack of indorsement—which was good work. He handed it back to the driver and docked the driver's salary—which was system.

The driver placed the check in his white duck coat and sent it to the laundry—which was unwise.

The laundry mutilated the check beyond recognition—which was to be expected.

Which is why the driver asked the cashier to ask the grocer to ask the man's wife to ask her husband to write a duplicate check. Which is why the man feels like he is paying that bet twice.—Mississippi Banker.

Mama's Boy.—Fifi—"You seem to find a lot of difficulty in getting your whiskers to grow, Algy!"

Algy—"Yes; it's a bally nuisance. Can't understand why, either; my father has plenty of 'em."

Fifi—"Well, dear, perhaps you take after your mother!"—The Passing Show.

Deadly Politeness.—"Saying 'Thank you' to a customer," says a news item, "a Wallasey butcher fell unconscious." In our neighborhood it used to be, until quite lately, the customer who fell unconscious.—Punch.

Fixing the Blame.—"Experts tell us that, roughly speaking, one marriage in three results in divorce," began the chap with the fund of useless irritation. "Yes," the other one chimed in, "and it's the roughly speaking part that causes most of the trouble."—Indianapolis Star.

K. K. G. SLUMBER PARTY.

The Kappa girls gave a slumber party Saturday night honoring Margaret Flournoy. A mock wedding was the main entertainment of the evening—and a mock wedding it was with every one dressed as ridiculously as possible. Margaret Flournoy acted as the groom—Anita Hubbell the bride—Katherine Conway, the father of the bride; Martha Borg-ering, maid of honor; Claire Bursum, matron of honor; Dorothy Cleve, brides maid; Margaret McCanna and Elizabeth Lord, ushers; Frances Bear and Alexandria Vaughey, pages. At a late hour refreshments were served and beds made down on the floor of the big living room, where a slumberless night was spent. Breakfast was served next morning and a gay time was had by all present.

Mrs. J. F. Mullen gave a surprise party for her son Wallace Bacon, Thursday evening, who is here, from El Paso, on a ten-day furlough. The party was a complete surprise not only to the honor guest, but to the invited guests as well. During the evening, the university students danced and sang college songs. Those who enjoyed Mrs. Mullen's hospitality were the Misses Katherine Angle, Lee Clair Caranough, and Flora Marshall, and Messrs. Ray Walker, Herbert Hickey, Wallace and William Bacon.

IRISH PROGRAM.

Those who have heard Mrs. Partridge read will feel confident that a treat is in store for them. There will be no admission charges. Friday being the fourteenth, and as near St. Patrick's day as it could conveniently be held, is the reason or excuse for the program being Irish, besides everybody likes Irish music and story. ## SAINT PETER PASSES JUDGMENT

Now it came to pass, in the days of the great war, there was a certain young man who was filled with patriotic zeal. A man of great ability was he, and he longed to become an officer in the army of the state of which he was a citizen. But the war ended before he attained his ambition, and he was filled with vast disappointment.

After a time this man died, as all men do. At the proper time he was called to present himself before the Guardian of the Gate, who should see if he were entitled to everlasting life. He ascended the golden staircase and was met by Saint Peter, who seeth him afar off and was much amazed at his appearance.

"Wherefore is it that thou art clad in officers' raiment, yet havest not his shoulder bars or collar insignia?" inquired he. "Art thou ashamed of thy country's emblems?" "Nay, in truth these garments are only camouflage," he repeateth trembling very profusely in the knees.

"Dost thou mean to say that thou art not an officer? Why dost thou appear to be something that thou art not?"

"Have mercy, good friend Saint Peter, I meant no evil," replied the man, "I merely hath considered myself more handsome, clad in these garments. I hath made quite sensation on earth thereby; the ladies madeth over me, my photograph confronteth the populace from the photographer's window, and I hath made many people believe I wert the real thing. Only permit me to enter, and I will evermore clad myself in raiment befitting one of my station."

But Saint Peter's brow was overcast. He pointeth downward, whence could be seen the red flames and could be smelt the brimstone.

"Get thee hence quickly," he spake in a voice of thunder. "Thy friends who madeth over thee are not here. Perhaps thou shalt find them in another place. And as for thou, verily I say unto you a man may deceive the earthly mortals exceedingly well, but when he knocketh at my gate I get his number exceedingly quick."

And the candidate descendeth the golden steps.

A great deal of indignation has been aroused in the dorm by the actions of some rough creatures who turned Mr. Davis' room into a perfect replica of "no man's land" Sunday evening. The dormitory council announces that the miscreants, if caught, will be punished by being compelled to act as ushers and hand-out programs at all the recitals to be held during the rest of the school year.
