VESPER SERVICES DRAW LARGE CROWD

Splendid Attendance Marks Inception of Exercises Under Auspices of Joint Y. M. and Y. W. C. A.

Sunday afternoon, at four o'clock, saw the first services for Sunday afternoon's Vespers, under the auspices of the joint committees of the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. These services, started last year, at the suggestion of Dr. Boyd, and continued and made the success they were mainly through the untiring efforts of Albert S. Hunt, assisted by Miss McFie, and Professors Hodgkin and Mitchell, were so gratifying that it was declared by the two associations to keep them up and extend and enlarge their beneficent influence the coming year of 1914-15.

Large Crowd on Hand.

Before four o'clock a good crowd had already congregated within Rodey Hall, and by the time for the services to begin, the large hall was crowded.

Dr. Lynn B. Mitchell presided, and after the musical renditions by the Vesper Choir, under the direction of E. S. Seder, and the benediction by Rev. Hugh Cooper, D. D., of the First Presbyterian Church of Albuquerque, Dr. Boyd, the speaker of the afternoon, proceeded to give his address, choosing as his subject "Burden Bearing," using as his foundation the Biblical quotation, "Bear ye one another's burdens," and again, "For each must bear his own burdens."

Must Prove Himself.

Dr. Boyd then showed how the fulfillment of the first part of this injunction, the bearing of each other's burdens, was so intimately mixed with and so dependent upon the other that there was no separating them. In his opinion, the first requisite one must have to bear another's burdens was that he prove himself first able to bear his own. Dr. Boyd made a most interesting comparison of this burden-bearing with an engine: an engine that is only capable of pulling itself, but has no additional strength, cannot pull a train of cars, and thus is of use only to itself. So it was with bearing another's burdens: One must first be able to bear his own, and then, having proved his ability to do so, he could go on with other's burdens.

Different Kind of Burdens.

Dr. Boyd enumerated the different burdens to be borne by the individuals. Sorrow, inability, weakness of will, etc. These, he declared, must be borne by the individual, but the outsider, while not able to take from the bearer or suffer, nevertheless was in a position to lighten them in a great way by his example and influence.

Here the Doctor sounded another note of warning: that of attempting to aid one when the person was himself weak in that particular. If one were given to intemperance or other weakness of the will himself, it was obvious that he was in no position to be of aid or bear another's burden in this particular respect.

Philosophical Discourse.

The whole talk of Dr. Boyd was so straight to the point, and withal, philosophical and filled with common sense, that it made a deep impression on all. It evidenced much thorough

PRESIDENT URGES PERSONAL INTEREST

Dr. Boyd, in Address to Commercial Club, Points Out Value of Varsity as a Community Asset.

A more active personal interest in the upbuilding of the University of New Mexico and the further exploiting of that institution by Albuquerque people as a community asset were emphasized Monday night at a well attended meeting of the Commercial club, in remarks by President David Ross Boyd of the University, O. N. Marron, President Cushman and other speakers.

Dr. Boyd told the club members that he was satisfied Albuquerque now appreciates the value of the University to the city as an educational asset, as an influence upon home-seekers and from a strictly commercial standpoint, but he believed a more active personal interest in the institution would result in making it better known and more widely used throughout the state. The same view was emphasized by B. S. Rodey, Mr. Marron, A. B. Stroup and others, while President Cushman stated that the University had the fullest backing of the club as an organization.

Discussion of University affairs came up in connection with a report of the club's legislative committee upon need for additional appropriation from the state for the maintenance of the university.

Dr. Boyd in his remarks pointed out that of four buildings of state institutions burned in a single year, all were rebuilt with the exception of Hadley hall, which was a gift to the preparation and deep thought upon an important subject, and the auditors felt that they had been admitted to a lecture well worth their while.

With the invocation by Dr. Cooper, the first services of the year had come to a conclusion, with all indications pointing to another successful year in that regard.

Reverend Toothaker Next.

Dr. Mitchell, who presided over the services, then announced that the speaker for next Sunday would be the Reverend Archie Toothaker, pastor of the local Congregational Church.

Dr. Toothaker favored the University on several occasions last year, and to those who heard him then, the mere mention of his appearance is a sufficient inducement to bring them at the services, and it is hoped that they will do their part to spread this

WE'RE AFTER A NAME.

What name would you suggest as best fitting the character and purposes of the U. N. M. Weekly? We want a new name. We feel that the plain old title of "U. N. M. Weekly" is not enough.

Something catchy, so that people will remember our paper after they once see it. At Illinois, they get out a publication called "The Dope Sheet." Get the idea? Put your suggestion in written form, and give or mail it to the editor before October 1st.

BATTLE OF SANDEAS GREAT VICTORY

General Clark Indisposed—No Other Casualties Are Explicitly Reported.

Marked by the most brilliant strategy and that splendid indomitable courage so characteristic in modern warfare, the fourth division of light infantry (except General Weese) under the command of General Clark executed one of the most startling and thrilling dashes in military history. Leaving their base of supplies and severing all connections with the main army, the division moved rapidly northward to Bernalillo, and thence began a flanking movement with hope of turning the enemy's right. Contrary to all rules of war, General Clark and General Mitchell rushed the military supplies ahead of the main army, which was left in charge of General Prickett. General Prickett moved as rapidly as possible along the main road towards Placitas, but in some manner, perhaps for strategical reasons, he executed a flanking movement far to the northward and then began a turning movement which ended in the investment of Placitas from the rear. The strain was terrible, but the morale of our troops was excellent. Leaving Placitas loyal to our troops and American dollars the division moved rapidly up the mountain side, taking redoubt after redoubt, and forcing the enemy to cover. Finally, about five o'clock that evening, the division reached Ellis ranch, where camp was pitched for the night. Generals Clark and Mitchell had already arrived and had made this their new base of supplies. Taps were sounded and the morale of our troops was good.

Assault on the Heights.

Rising with the first grey streaks of dawn, preparations were made for assault on the heights overlooking Albuquerque. Inwardly filled with pan-cakes and "long sweet" and that enthusiasm of born soldiers, the division moved rapidly toward the enemy's last stronghold. The division was composed of two brigades, one under General Clark, and the other under General Prickett. General Clark, together with Generals Mitchell, Worcester, Weese and Nelson, led the attack on the enemy's right and center, while General Prickett, in charge of troops under Generals Wand and Edington, attacked his left. The engagement was sharp and severe, and after a brilliant charge, General Clark and his command were forced to give ground a full eighth of a mile, in order to reconnoiter further. It was here that General Clark was forced to retire, which he did in good order, and General Mitchell took command. In spite of the indisposition of General Clark, and the repulse, the morale of this brigade remained good. The efforts of General Prickett's brigade were more successful. The enemy was forced back and General Prickett moved steadily forward into the wilderness, executing continually flanking movements to the Southwest. General Mitchell rallied his men and leading his "heavy artillery" began a rapid movement towards Capulin Springs, forcing the enemy back at every turn.

STRONG FOOTBALL TEAM ASSURED

Men Making a Good Showing on Practice Field; Season's Prospects Bright for Varsity.

Although it is very early in the season, football practice has been under way for several days, and it is not impossible to make a good estimate of our prospects in that line. The squad has spent a great deal of time on preliminary work, such as kicking, catching and falling on the ball, while during the past week there has been systematic work from regular formation. With a strong nucleus of N. M. men, Coach Hutchinson has an excellent foundation for a winning team. Some of the men who made good on last year's squad and who are on hand for hard work are Captain Calkins, Gass, C. Lee, F. Lee, Arnot, Balcomb, Shields, Lapraik, McCanna, and several others who were on last year's squad but failed to make a position on the team. These latter include Fullerton, Redfield, Goulin, and a few more. As stated in the last issue of the "Roundup", there are also one or two new men who give indications that they will be mentioned when the record of the season's games is made out. Among the more promising material might be mentioned Emmons and White from the crack last year's Albuquerque High School team, McGary and Blom from the Roswell High team, Penniwell from Silver City Normal, Ray of Aztec, Simmons from Belen, Dennis of Clovis, Brorine from Oberlin University, and Claiborne of Indianapolis. Other new men are daily reporting at the Coach's office for suits, and in another week a good-sized squad will be learning the great college game under the able tutelage of "Hutch," whom everyone knows is the best coach in the Southwest.

With much better material than in past years, when the University team has been a very strong factor in this section of the country, it is confidently expected by all "in the know" that the inevitable result of the autumn's training will be a championship team. In order to attain this result, it will be necessary for the entire student body to show their support and confidence when the football team is concerned. A united and enthusiastic student body counts almost as much in the winning of games, as well as in their sportsmanlike conduct as does a well trained and faithful team. There never has been a time that the New Mexico football team has failed to show the greatest loyalty, the most intense fighting spirit, and the determination to win for their Alma Mater; Coach Hutchinson can always be relied upon to furnish the best in training and instruction; but it must be said with regret that there have been times when the student body might have supported its representatives in a manner more worthy of themselves. Not that the student body has not been loyal, but rather that it has been thoughtless. It is high time that a rooting section was organized,—not only for use at the games, but on the practice field. There are few of us who would not be benefited by a few minutes in the open air late in the

TRANSPORTATION AND THE GREATER UNIVERSITY.

Declaring that the University was greatly hampered in its progress, both material and educational, and that the institution was being needlessly hindered in its march toward its ultimate goal of Premierhood in the New Mexico Field of Higher Education by the lack of adequate transportation facilities between the campus and town, a well-known man familiar with the problems of business and administration was heard to remark that to him it seemed indeed strange that such a vital matter should so long have escaped attention. The stranger and visitor must be courageous in truth if he is to brave the sweltering suns of our perfrigid summer in order to inspect the Pueblo University. Should he do so he will have the pleasure of inhaling the dust of flying automobiles, which pass him so fast that he will barely be able to make out the crouching driver, leaning over, turning to glance haughtily at pedestrians only occasionally, eyes aflame with the joy of manslaughter. He is proud of his empty tonneau, too; and he will take pains to keep it so. It is the old, far-famed western courtesy of the Road. Yet, thank God for the Mexican and his wood wagon! If it were not for him one might well believe that the fine art of politeness had died with the invention of the gasoline motor.

That was a fine talk that Dr. Boyd gave the Commercial Club the other night. He told them that never since the old Hadley Hall burned, at least, had the University of New Mexico received the same support that the other institutions of the State had enjoyed, citing the rebuilding of the Roswell and El Rito schools as examples in point. Dr. Boyd has been willing to give his utmost in return for appropriations; ever since his inauguration he has raised the University's Macedonian cry of "Maximum Service to the People of the State" and would not be stilled. Yet how can we give this maximum service when we do not furnish transportation to the campus? Thirty minutes of good time are consumed in making the trip from town—practically—wasted. Is there an entertainment or any of the legitimate functions of the University taking place in the evening, the little two-seated 'bus is waiting, painfully inadequate. There is just one ray of hope—"Tony" says he'll take you for a quarter. That's something. But what the school needs is a motor bus of some kind running at the critical hours of the day. We need this service for advertising. There is not a college in the world that could live a year without advertising of some kind. We need it for the present students. We want it to show that we have a college here which may be seen on occasion. We need it, and it will come; let us hope that it will be soon.

"SUCCESS" TOPIC OF FIRST ASSEMBLY TALK

Dean Hodgkin Speaks of Elements Necessary to Achieving Results of Importance in the World.

"Success lies in sowing and the reaping thereof."

"The Gods have placed sweat in the path of excellence and the principle that success is linked with hard work and effort."

These two laws were laid down by Professor Hodgkin Tuesday in the first assembly of the year, when he delivered the address, choosing the general heading of "Success" as his topic.

Professor Hodgkin's address, which was enthusiastically listened to by a large audience of students and faculty, was in part as follows:

"Whenever we read of successful men, we find that they have been men of great effort. Take Edison, for example; most of his success has been due to hard work and an indomitable will. Take a large number of artists and sculptors. All were accustomed to hard work, even in the face of hunger and thirst.

"Failure is due to the lack of the above. Many seem to feel their main motive to be to kill time, and consequently never advance nor amount to much. I personally know one young man, who started in four years ago to work for a local firm at a salary of $50 per month. He applied himself diligently, was not afraid to stay a little after the whistle blew, and even come back at night and work when it

STRONG FOOTBALL TEAM IS ASSURED

afternoon. Why not spend those few minutes on the sidelines of the practice field encouraging the players, at least by our presence? One who has never gone through the hard grind of preparation for a football season can hardly appreciate the value of such assurance of interest on the part of those who do not themselves take part. Let us go out tonight and see how the squad is getting along, learn who the new men are, and what sort of football they are playing.

The arrangement of the schedule is already well under way, the most important games being those with the Agricultural College on Thanksgiving Day at Hopewell Field, and with the Military Institute on Oct. 24th at Roswell. The game with Roswell is a little early this year owing to the desire of the Institute team to play at the time of the Live Stock Show. This will mean a lot of hard work on the part of the squad to prepare for a big game so early in the season, but with the spirit now evidenced on the field there is no doubt that the team will be ready and in good condition to repeat the decisive victory of last year. At the time of the College game will also be held a cross-country run between College and University, each school to be represented by a three-man team. The added interest in track work this year will assure a good squad for cross country work, and the University should also be a victor in this branch of athletics. At least two games will be scheduled with the Indians, one of which will probably be played during Fair Week. The second team is arranging a game to be played very soon with the Albuquerque High School team at Hopewell Field, and it is expected that the youngsters will also schedule a game with Manual School at an early date.

A DELIGHTFUL EVENT

Large Crowd Enjoys Hospitality of
Dr. Boyd on Saturday Evening.
Music an Especial Feature.

The Annual President's Reception to the students of the University occurred Saturday night at Dr. Boyd's residence on South High Street, and was participated in and enjoyed by a large number of Varsity students and friends. Dr. Boyd's and family's reputation as delightful hosts was fully lived up to on this occasion, as in the past.

The affair began at eight o'clock, and lasted until ten. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd, and daughter, Miss Alice, with the members of this year's Senior Class, were on the receiving line, welcoming the guests, who were introduced by Miss Mary Cooper.

The University Orchestra, under Mr. E. Stanley Seder, rendered splendid selections all through the evening. In spite of the extremely short time it has been organized and working together, the Orchestra did excellent service, and its work on this occasion, as well as last week at the New Student's Reception, presages a splendid year in this line. In addition, the audience was favored with a violin recital by Miss Eleanor McDonough, and piano solos by E. Stanley Seder, and Miss Rose Maharam, which were very pleasing and acceptable. Mr. James K. Polk then gave two of his inimitable and thoroughly enjoyable negro impersonatorial recitations, "The Creation," and "The Origin of the White Trash," which, by reason of the excellence of their rendition, and their departure from the usual line of recitations, made a decided "hit" on all, as was evidenced by the applause following upon the conclusion of each.

The guests proceeded to enter names upon the guest book, guided by Miss Louise Lowber, who, it is needless to say, was thoroughly "on the job".

Punch was served by the members of the Junior Class under the direction of Albert S. Hunt. The Juniors did their duty in this respect, and besides, the punch was mighty good, and the bowl freely patronized throughout the evening.

At ten o'clock, however, the guests all had to take a regretful departure, all unanimous in their praise of Dr. Boyd and his family as splendid hosts and entertainers.

Prickett's Charge.

General Prickett, moving rapidly forward, came in sight of the enemy's last stronghold, and with a deafening shout rushed madly forward and the stronghold at this point was ours. This brilliant charge will be known in history as "Prickett's Charge". In the meantime, General Mitchell had also been successful in capturing the heights at another point, and by a series of skillful moves the two brigades were once more brought together. The heavy guns were placed so as to command all points of the compass. The morale of our troops was splendid; our casualty list was not heavy, but the War Department has not seen fit to make it public.

Worcester's Address to Troops.

Flushed with victory, and full of peaches and cheese sandwiches, the little army rested. Inspired by the view of the beautiful mesa below, with its fruitful groves and peasant's homes surrounding the great metropolis of the silvery Rio Grande which now lay completely at the mercy of our heavy Eastman Rapid Fire Guns, General Worcester uttered this immortal address to his troops:

"Fellow Generals and Common Soldiers:

"Yonder lies Albuquerque, the Queen of the sun-kissed mesas, and the home of culture and learning, the Athens of the Southwest. It was once ours, and it shall be ours again. The world will laud the terrible sacrifices you have made, and will applaud with wonder the investment of this stronghold. Common Soldiers, it is your duty to die, and since Providence is on our side, you can ask no greater favor. Fellow Generals, we are today making history, and the next generation shall see our names placed alongside those of Napoleon, Attila and Coxey, provided we are scrupulous in the choice of our press agents. Then courage, comrades! Courage! Courage!"

This was greeted with shouts, particularly from the Common Soldiers, and General Mitchell then announced that the maneuvers of the army had all been observed by aeroplanes and communicated to headquarters, and that he had the pleasure of conferring the Iron Cross on the Generals. This was greeted by another outburst of applause from the Common Soldiers, while the Generals were moved to tears by the magnanimity of the diplomats at home. Truly, "War is H—!"

With solemn tread, the army marched back to its base of supplies, having buried their dead and the remains of the cheese sandwiches on the battlefield. The Generals played Five Hundred until taps sounded.

The Capture of Albuquerque.

The third day of this momentous contest broke over this weary but victorious little army. Rising with a shout and partaking of "sinkers" and coffee the little army broke camp and moved on Albuquerque. Enthused with the success of the strategy of the previous day, the army was again divided, Generals Clark, Mitchell, Nelson, Weese and Prickett with their commands forming one brigade, and Generals Worcester, Wand and Edington, with their command, another. The enemy was demoralized, however, and offered little resistance, and after a day rapid machine and counter-marching, the army united before Albuquerque, which surrendered after a feeble resistance. The morale of our troops was good, although those under Generals Worcester, Wand and Edington, were footsore and weary after the hard three days' campaign. The movements of this brigade were brilliantly executed, forty-one miles being covered in the course of the day, and military history affords no parallel except Sherman's march to the sea, and Napoleon's retreat from Moscow.

The most brilliant stroke of the entire battle was Prickett's charge, which perhaps is alone excelled by General Clark's magnificent charge at Albuquerque, of 1.13.

The Battle of the Sandias, without regard to its decisive effect, will no doubt, be pointed out as one of the most brilliant in the annals of history.

Apropos of the University's transportation facilities, it would perhaps be well to mention the fact that one new student's ingenuity is almost equal to the occasion. Parker, '18, rode triumphantly down Central avenue the other day on a horse.

"Golden Hair," given under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers' association at the new high school last Friday night, was a complete success in every way. An audience of over 500 witnessed the presentation.

The High School orchestra furnished the music for the operetta.

There can be no doubt but that there is some sort of parasitic life in Albuquerque water. Even Billigans has it now.

School work is under full swing, and as yet there has been not even a hint of class organization.

The girls of Hokona gave to the dormitory boys a little informal party Friday night. At every table different card games were played, ranging from "nosy" poker to slap jack. As there was such a variety of games the prize was awarded to Professor Weise. Some of the boys ably assisted with the entertainment by giving selections of various sorts and finally the officials of the Coyote club had some of their new members demonstrate their ability. At the close of this enjoyable affair the college songs were sung and yells given.

was necessary. Consequently, his employer recognized his ability, and rapidly advanced him until he was drawing $100 per month. Then another firm heard of his ability, and offered him $125, but his employer, recognizing his worth, offered him the same to stay, which he did. This young man is now drawing $150 per month, after only four years' service, with every prospect of still further advancement and success. All due to hard work and persistency.

"Whether we apply ourselves or not, there is a reaction of our work and its results. The law of the harvest is to reap what we sow in proportion as we sow. 'He that soweth sparingly shall reap sparingly,' and 'He that soweth bountifully shall also reap bountifully.'"

"This is simply the Bhuddist idea of Karman, except that the belief in reincarnation, metempsychosis or transmigration of the soul, is not expressed. Their theory is that the actions in one's existence on this earth will be rewarded or punished in the next.

"We can apply this principle in a social way, as well as any other. If we are polite and courteous to others, we get the same kind of treatment in return. To have friends, we must be friendly. Words have a reaction. When we send out harsh words, we get the same kind back.

"Boys flying kites, haul in their white-winged birds. But you can't do that when you are flying words." (Carlton.)

"A young man in New York City who was practicing target-shooting in a deserted, abandoned hall, which had a series of iron pillars in it. One shot missed the target and struck one of the iron pillars, and was deflected from one to the other until it came back and struck him. This is what is likely to occur in life, in reaping the words that we fling around.

"Take this war now devastating Europe. There would be a terrible harvest for those who are guilty of thrusting the nations into this terrible conflict, and with nations, the reaping of the harvest is the same as with individuals."

Professor Hodgkin then closed his interesting address with reviewing the two thoughts expressed, "Remember, people, that the Gods have placed sweat in the pathway to excellence; and, an inherent law tells us that we must reap the harvest of the seed that we ourselves sow."

university in the first place. Roswell $60,000, El Rito, $10,000 and Las Cruces, $30,000 for the State Agricultural College, were among the appropriations mentioned to rebuild buildings destroyed by fire. Dr. Boyd said there were places in the state where the people did not know there was such an institution as the University of New Mexico, and he urged the interest of Albuquerque people to exploiting of the university.

Approaches to the university also were discussed and Dr. Boyd stated that he believed an asphalt pavement could be built to the campus from Central avenue for three years' cost of keeping the present dirt road in repair.

An aggressive campaign will be made by the club to secure legislative assistance for the extension of the institution during the coming winter. It is certain that the business
