

1933

Denouement

Maud Uschold

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalrepository.unm.edu/nmq>

---

Recommended Citation

Uschold, Maud. "Denouement." New Mexico Quarterly 3, 2 (1933). <https://digitalrepository.unm.edu/nmq/vol3/iss2/8>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by the University of New Mexico Press at UNM Digital Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in New Mexico Quarterly by an authorized editor of UNM Digital Repository. For more information, please contact disc@unm.edu.

The Days Pass By

By VAN DEUSEN CLARK

The days pass by
Like arrows flung into the sun;
As each returns
The same—another is begun.
The days, the sun
And all, what do they mean to me?
I shot my arrows
And they fell into the sea.

Denouement

By MAUD USCHOLD

Now love has become a burden
Too onerous to bear;
Urged by a vast unreason
It still must fare.

Like a cold wind, bleakly crying
Out of a toneless sky,
Probing the dreary crannies
Where dead dreams lie.

To A

By MAUDE DAVIS CROSNO

The loveliness of sun on distant volcanic table land
When it's raining;
The loveliness of sun touching a distant field to gold
When it's raining;
The loveliness of sun on sandhills
Is like the thought of you in loneliness—
When it's raining.