CONTRIBUTORS

Edwin Honig, who graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1941 with a major in Spanish, has contributed to the Sewanee Review and to Poetry. He is now employed in the Library of Congress.

Richard F. Behrendt is assistant professor of Inter-American Affairs, a new assignment at the University of New Mexico. Graduate of the University of Cologne and the University of Basle (Ph.D., summa cum laude) and post-doctorate student at the London School of Economics, Dr. Behrendt went to Panama in 1935 as professor of economics in the university there and as economic adviser to the government of Panama. In the United States he has given almost innumerable lectures and is the author of four books and upwards of sixty articles, besides reviews in English, Spanish, German, French, and Flemish.

M. J. Michaux is a draftsman with the War Department in Memphis, Tennessee. After leaving Georgia Tech and while trying the "show business," Mr. Michaux began writing. "Hound Dog" is a chapter from a short novel.

James Fulton Zimmerman, president of the University of New Mexico, was recently also president of the Association of American State Universities. Dr. Zimmerman's major interest has long been international relations. His article is essentially the commencement address given by him last summer at the University of Oklahoma.

Thomas C. Donnelly is head of the department of government in the University of New Mexico. He was editor of the volume Rocky Mountain Politics and has written widely on social and political problems.

Charles Seltzer lives in El Paso, Texas. "Big Bill Stecher" is his first contribution to the QUARTERLY REVIEW.

Spud Johnson, newspaper man of Taos, New Mexico, and Joaquín Ortega, director of the School of Inter-American Affairs, University of New Mexico, continue their serial features in the QUARTERLY REVIEW.

Joseph Crowley, of Toledo, Ohio, with his story in this issue makes his first contribution to any magazine.

Most of the poets represented in this issue have previously contributed to the QUARTERLY REVIEW, but it has been a long time since Norman Macleod and Irene Fisher appeared in these pages. Miss Fisher is a former Albuquerque newspaper woman, and Norman Macleod, former New Mexican and author of several volumes of poetry and some novels, now lectures and teaches in New York. Of the new contributors, Alex R. Schmidt lives in California, Charles Edward Eaton teaches English in the University of Missouri, and Charles Henri Ford is poet and editor of View.

All the reviewers but four are on the teaching staff of the University of New Mexico. Lyle Saunders teaches in Tucumcari, New Mexico; C. L. Sonnichsen is head of the department of English in the Texas School of Mines, El Paso; W. A. Keleher is a prominent Albuquerque attorney; and Robert Brown is an undergraduate honors student at the University of New Mexico.
