

1944

For Elizabeth Madox Roberts Who Died March 13, 1941

Janet Lewis

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalrepository.unm.edu/nmq>

---

Recommended Citation

Lewis, Janet. "For Elizabeth Madox Roberts Who Died March 13, 1941." New Mexico Quarterly 14, 4 (1944).
<https://digitalrepository.unm.edu/nmq/vol14/iss4/16>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by the University of New Mexico Press at UNM Digital Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in New Mexico Quarterly by an authorized editor of UNM Digital Repository. For more information, please contact disc@unm.edu.

FOR ELIZABETH MADOX ROBERTS
WHO DIED MARCH 13, 1941

From the confusion of estranging years,
The imperfections of the changing heart,
This hour leaves only tears;
Tears, and my earliest love, Elizabeth,
and changeless art.

JANET LEWIS

THREE POEMS

FOR PRIVATE HARPER, MARRYING

(Hard, dry, useless theme.)

Do not, Monarch, dote
In a pleated paper boat
Down a useless stream.

Forty miles is far to go
When the ebb is low.

Greedy, last night, weren't you?
Departing from your doors,
Loathing all your little shores,
You had much to do.
Forty miles is far to go
When the ebb is low.

Bars of sand are barriers now
Above the sunken water;
Fleetest sailing boat will falter
In current for a scow.
Forty miles is far to go
When the ebb is low.

Shallow water, Gentleman,
Is movement of some marriage:
Careful, Darling, of your carriage
For you sail on sand.
Forty miles is far to go
When the ebb is low.